Chamber music on schedule

A program of chamber sonatas from the High Baroque period will be presented on Salt Spring on August 31.

The presentation will take place at Ganges United Church, beginning at 2 pm.

Music will be performed by Music of the Spheres, a leading Vancouver-based early music quartet that includes Dean Nicholson (recorder), Trevor Tunnacliffe (recorder and bass viol), Finn Manniche (baroque cello), and Janet Ferguson (harpsichord).

Each member of the quartet is a graduate of the UBC music program, where they met in the Collegium Musicum, an early chamber music class. From student performances at UBC, the members consolidated into an ensemble that booked frequent professional engagements in the Lower Mainland and B.C. Interior.

The group's appearance on Salt Spring marks its debut here. The performance will feature a program of works by Dornel, Vivaldi, Scarlatti, Telemann and Handel. Each piece is a sonata from the High Baroque period (early 18th century) and is included in a program that covers a wide selection of musical styles, ranging from sonatas for solo instrument and basso continuo and trio-sonatas for two solo instruments with basso continuo—the two most common ensembles for High Baroque chamber music.

Recorders and cello take turns as soloists while the basso continuo provides a foundation, usually with the bass line played on cello or viol, doubled with harpsichord (which also adds improvised chords with the right hand).

Music on the program was composed by French, Dutch and German nationals, reflecting the fact that those countries were most influential in shaping the Baroque music that was expressed in the various forms of the sonata.

Festival's final week offers change of pace

The Festival of the Arts kicks off its final week with Zoo Story, a one act play written by Edward Albee and directed by Alex Bruhanski.

The play, which runs July 30 and July 31, is a story of alienation and the necessity of communication, wherein the "tough guy" comes into conflict with the "little man." Zoo Story stars Bruhanski and Sid Filkow. Tickets are $5 in advance.

The festival offers a change of pace the following two nights, August 1 and 2, as it presents two intimate evenings of theatrical highlights from Broadway to Brecht. April Curtis and Bryan Smith will give islanders an evening packed with music and theatre, documenting the life of an actress in Life upon the Wicked Stage. Curtis's talent and versatility will be remembered by those who took in Jacques Brel, and Bryan Smith is said to have thrilled audiences from England to Canada. Tickets are $5.

On Sunday, August 3, Salt Spring welcomes home Susan Cogan from a successful tour of the Middle East. Cogan accompanies herself on guitar, piano and percussion instruments, singing her own songs along with original material by other contemporary composers. She has added new material to her show, collected on her recent tour.

Thommas Miychaude, a singer and songwriter who performs soft rock and folk music, is scheduled to join Cogan's show. He accompanies himself on the classical guitar and wooden flutes from India and Japan. Tickets are $5.

The festival concludes Monday, August 4, with Club Mongo. Organizers say the festival should end on an upbeat note, and will do so with this "favourite" Salt Spring Island group: "Their zany, off-the-wall musical theatre, featuring political slashings and good clean fun, leave their audiences laughing and looking for more," organizers note.

Following the Club Mongo performance, the Festival of the Arts will hold a festival celebration and dance party for all who have helped and supported the inaugural event.

The festival committee would welcome feedback and suggestions for next year's version, to make it "even more successful" than in 1986. The committee hopes to keep members updated in forthcoming newsletters, and wishes to extend thanks to all who helped out and attended the festival in its first year.

Strong performances, script mark Bruhanski production

By GARY CHERNEFF

Say you are a woman, 70 years of age. You live in a familiar but artless place. You are widowed and your daughter, age 35 and divorced, shares your home.

There is a syndrome of non-communication between mother and daughter as a continuation of a historical dilemma between husband and wife. The mechanics of life are dealt with routinely, as described by the Good Housekeeping book, but the uncertainties and fears are locked away in a chest of self-recrimination and guilt.

put out strong performances before, and last Saturday's production proclaimed the excellence and versatility of both. The play was ably directed by Alex Bruhanski who has rapidly established himself here as a director, actor and teacher.

Part of the dramatic tension of the play circles the issue of acceptable solutions to intolerable life situations. The older generation choosing a living death, the younger contemplating an actual one. The desperation of each is such that one begins to understand that both are suicidal.

The set (designed by Eric Booth) is a depressingly convincing environment. At the conclusion one felt uneasy about intruding on the fictional boundaries. It is always a great adventure to drive down to Beaver Point Hall, especially when one has the opportunity to experience fine theatre. The production will repeat this coming weekend — on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, at 8:00 pm.

The play is relatively short, which may give the audience time to return to Ganges for some festival activities.

The Ogedengbe Drummers from Nigeria was our second event of the night. This energetic group was busy all day. In the morning, they accompanied a dance workshop; in the afternoon, a hand drum workshop; and, in the evening, a concert and dance.

Their intensity and rhythm were contagious and all events were well attended with enthusiastic reports following.

Coming events at the festival that one should take note of are:

'Uncertainties and fears are locked away in a chest of self-recrimination and guilt.'

Social isolation and the generation gap are pivotal points in Night Mother, a Pulitzer Prize-winning play by Marsha Norman, now being produced at Beaver Point Hall. Both Dawn Luker (the mother) and Karin Klockstad have

'Dramatic tension circles acceptable solutions to intolerable life situations.'

The Zoo Story, a play starring Alex Bruhanski and Sid Filkow; Life Upon the Wicked Stage, with April Curtis and Bryan Smith; Susan Cogan and Thomas Miychaude with songs and music; dance with Club Mongo August 4.

Gallery to highlight works by two transplanted artists

Two artists adept in a variety of disciplines will visit Salt Spring in early August to display their works at the Ewart Gallery of Fine Arts.

The two-man show — running from August 1 to 30 — will feature Kiff Holland, born and trained artistically in South Africa, and Alan Wylie, a Glasgow-born artist who received his masters degree in fine arts from that city's School of Art.

Both Holland and Wylie will be in attendance at the gallery (at 175 Salt Spring Way) on Friday and Saturday, August 1 and 2. An official opening will be held Friday.

Holland received his formal art training at South Africa's University of Witwatersrand and at the Johannesburg School of Art before immigrating to Canada in 1975.

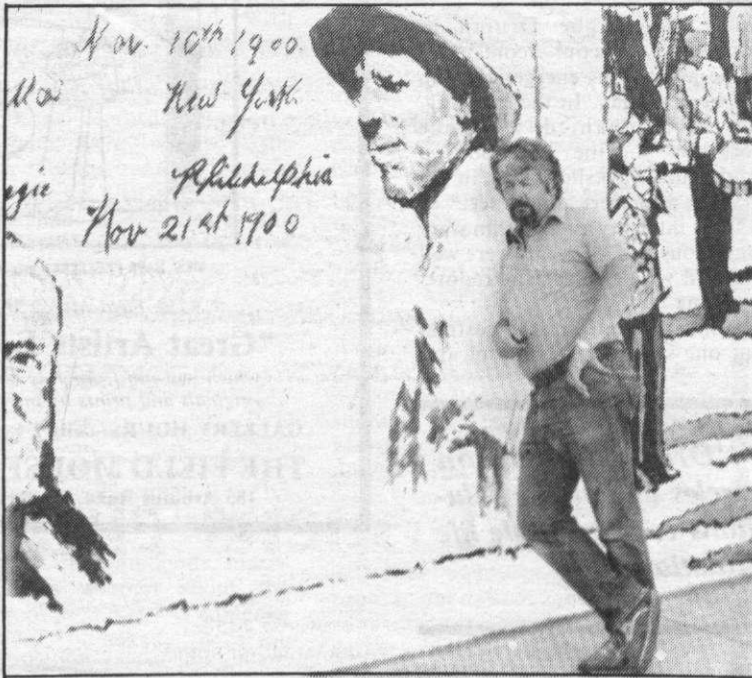

He says he was "immediately captivated" by Canada's soft colours and lights, which he found so different from the harsh brilliance of Africa.

Consequently, Holland's palette changed from warm earth tones to the cool, ethereal values found in his present paintings.

Holland's work is finely drawn and textured but his style is more determined by a fascination for light and texture, colour and mass. He says he does not impose boundaries on his works; he might develop the same form in a landscape as in a classical still-life.

The artist works in watercolours, oils and acrylic paint. He has received awards from the Federation of Canadian Artists and the North-West Watercolour Society, and has exhibited at the British Institute of Painters in Watercolour and the Royal Society of British Artists.

Alan Wylie, meanwhile, is considered a master of mixed media. He uses a time-consuming technique of build-ups and glazes involving first painting in acry-ics, then overpainting in oils. The result is an unusual depth of colour, intensity and quality.

Wylie, who is also an outstanding watercolourist, has been painting since the age of 16 years. Currently, he is working on the largest mural ever attempted in Chemainus.

After leaving the Glasgow of his youth, Wylie settled in Canada, in 1967, and has since become one of the country's most successful artists. His paintings are shown in galleries across Canada and his works have been sold to many private and corporate collections in North America, Europe, Australia and the Middle East.

"Alan is a craftsman with an astonishing eye for detail," says a statement from Ewart Gallery. "He can make the viewer see what he saw, and feel the warmth or cold of the subject. Each subject is approached with a tenderness and unreserved attention."

Reverend and Mrs. Shepherd accept gifts

Bishop's address leaves mark on Galiano residents

By MARGARET E. EDGAR

On Sunday, July 27 the visit of the Right Reverend Ronald Shepherd, Bishop of B.C. to the parish of St. Margaret of Scotland on Galiano reached its culmination in the address which he gave to the congregation at the 10:30 am celebration of the Eucharist.

His message of the love and friendship available to all within the Christian community, together with the limitless potential of faith embodied in the Gospel message, "ask and you will receive," will long be remembered.

The Bishop and Mrs. Shepherd were joyfully welcomed on their return visit to Galiano, hopefully an annual event which is already a tradition. The Bishop was also the celebrant at an 8 am Eucharist and, as he told the congregation, seemed to have been actively engaged in missionary work at La Berengerie between that and the parish supper which was held on the previous evening at the North Galiano Community Hall.

The supper provided the Bishop and his wife, Ann, with the opportunity to meet and talk with several members of the parish. The meal was superb, thanks to the planning and hard work of Wendy Roberts and a committee which included the stalwart North End combination of Dorothy and Alistair Ross, Audrey Cook, Edith Wishart and Davis Russell, with a contribution from the south end from Barbara Scoones and Margaret Edgar. Delightful flower arrangements were the work of Kathy Bengier and Arm Haksi.

A highlight of the evening was the entertainment by Stephen Newton, in which he told the story of the Three Fish with assistance from the audience enhanced by the performance of the keeper of the lighthouse, Geoff Howard, on the stupid fish. Steve drew from the audience an incredible band which he said consisted of the Andrew Sisters, Benny Goodman, Groucho Marx, Bob Hope etc., and the conductor, reputed to be Duke Ellington, looked remarkably like a Bishop in a top hat reading an ear splitting performance of Moonlight Bay. Great fun was had by all.

The Bishop and Ann Shepherd were presented with North Galiano tee-shirts as a memento of their visit. In his response, the Bishop referred to a memento carried back from Galiano last year, the long, sea-smoothed trunk of a fir tree which is now erected as a flag pole at his home, Easter Hill, on Salt Spring. The waving flag should be visible, on Galiano, from Retreat Cove.

This was a most memorable and moving pastoral visit. The warmth and caring concern of the Bishop and Mrs. Shepherd will continue to nourish this small corner of the Diocese for a long time to come.

Canon opens church party

Canon Apivor opened Pender Island's Anglican Church garden party on July 19 on the scenic grounds at Waterlea. About 300 people were served sandwiches, cakes and tea in the shade of a weeping willow on lawns that stretched down to the sea.

While some guests relaxed by having tea, children were entertained by clowns and games and adults browsed at the book table and "Attics Treasure" booth. Home-baked goods, hasti-notes and bedding plants donated by the Fulawka's were on sale. A booth with literature on disarmament provided information from the World Federalist Organization.

Rex Jordan, Orval Johnson and Joyce Sky provided music throughout the afternoon, playing favourite melodies on guitar, fiddle, bass and accordion.

Ann Fairweather, a member of the Anglican Ladies Guild who organized the event, said $1,300 was raised at this year's tea. The money from the event provides funds for improvements to the church and rectory.

Fairweather noted that organizers have been blessed with good weather over the 57 years the tea has been held, and that everyone involved works well together. A good deal of organization is required to make the tea a success, and she estimated about 50 people help in some way.

"And, of course, we couldn't do without the Harker's garden," she said, calling attention to the spacious yard provided every year at Waterlea.

She noted that it was the Conference raised awareness of history, culture

The Passport 86 conference, held on Galiano from July 22 to 27, made island history. Organized by Edrie Holloway, the event smoothly combined Galiano history and culture, and a theme of international importance — seamanship, trade and the flag.

Speakers came from Norway, Spain, New York, Los Angeles, Newfoundland, Quebec, Ontario, Alberta and B.C. to contribute research on Canadian maritime history.

"Our objectives were met beyond expectation," said Eric Sager, a member of the Canadian Nautical Research Society after the business meeting on Sunday. The Underwater Archaeology Society of B.C. also attended, contributing a synopsis of present investigation in coastal waters.

Among the conference attractions were:

- Author's table: This was a cultural gem. It was scheduled as in accompaniment to the conference reception honouring Spanish Ambassador Emilio Cassinello, who didn't show. It seems that some birthday party upstaged the conference which, in part, attempts to create an awareness of Spanish influence in Canadian history. Many felt denied an opportunity to display their appreciation of Spanish heritage.

Also, and just as well, the evening's focus was literature, involving writers who either live on Galiano or visit regularly: Jane Rule, Elisabeth Margaret Hopkins, Dorothy Livesay, John Kendrick, Ursula Medley (and Judie Currie), Audrey Thomas, Maxine Gadd, Todd Wolfe, Helen Rosenthal, Leslie Hall Pinder, Parents Advisory Committee of the Gulf Islands Elementary School and the Galiano Island Branch of the B.C. Historical Association.

Historian Joe C.W. Armstrong also presented his coffee-table book titled From Sea Unto Sea. Joe has just completed a book on Champlain (Oh no, him again?) which he claims will pale anything we've ever heard of old Sam before.

Christa Weiss has proven her organizational talents once again (see Bateman lecture, July 16) in having put the event into motion.

- Galiano Homes and Gardens: Margaret Robson led three carloads of people to several homes and gardens on the island on July 22. The choice covered a spectrum of landscape architecture; for example, the Frewer's terraced garden with log walls, and Annie Breddles' Galiano Gardens, a masterpiece of levels, ponds, walkways, various moss ground covers and plants.

There were interesting aspects to every garden visited, and noted in particular were Margaret's fruit-bearing fig trees, Hans and Donna's new orchard, the Switzer's flowers and Dorothy Lupton's contemplative park and sculptured trees.

- Slide collection: As a contribution to the Historical and Cultural Society event, Marie Claire Von Hausmann presented a collection of slides taken of as many human aspects on Galiano Island as possible. Specifically, they are a picture show of "what we are, what we do, everything about now."

Marie Claire says she had "lots of fun" over the last few months approaching and taking pictures of talented people, businesses, clubs, etc. which made up the visual display. She personally took about 200 slides and delegated the rest, for a total of 480.

Due to an oversight, the slide show was poorly attended. The importance of the substance and what it represents cannot be overstated, however. Clearly, this collection — and ultimately the names in it — will make Galiano history. Already, individuals and groups have requested that the slide show be presented to their select audiences, indicating a future consideration for documentation of this nature.

- Coastal Excursions: Wendy Roberts and Tony Kingscote led two groups of nature enthusiasts on intertidal excursions July 22 and 23. They walked along the shore of Montague Harbour and Coon Bay at low tide and examined sea life on various substrates, from fine mud to large boulders. Several species of seaweeds and clams were studied and a couple of mud burrows were investigated.

Tony and Wendy are a team which has volunteered five years at the Vancouver Aquarium and has led walks for two years on Galiano.

- The Activity Center was tastefully decorated throughout the conference by flags of nations represented and involved, and by local art, including Kirt Ziwicki's stained glass centerpiece. All meals were prepared by the Galiano Peace Group, Galiano Pre-School Society and Galiano Parents' Advisory.

- Conclusion: One hopeful outcome of the conference is an awareness of both history and culture in our social environment.

galiano report

by Carmen Braund

Interaction between academics, "amateurs" and interested people was just a beginning.

There is talk of possibly publishing and circulating highlights of the papers given, and there is always the broader goal of revamping history education at all levels across Canada.

Gulf Golf

The annual Grandmothers' Golf Tournament took place last Tuesday, July 22, at the Galiano Golf and Country Club. Doreen Stanton, lady captain for the club, provided the following list of winners:

First: Marge Sarson; second: Audrey Cook; closest to the pin: Win Stevens; longest drive: Ivy Smith; first of non-grandmothers: Win Liver; least putts of non-grandmothers: Mary Munsie.

A couple of past events worth mentioning were the Liver Tournament won by Lil Morissette and the July 16 mixed two ball, a monthly event won by men's captain Alex Smith and his golf partner, Margaret Robson.

It's a busy summer for sports, but the ladies of the Golf Club are still managing to take time out to bake two pies each for their booth at this weekend's fiesta.

Art Display

La Berengerie is hosting an art display by Vancouverite Lorraine Calame Hill.

Butterflies, rainbows and pale watercolours are predominant in these paintings of mixed media (gouache, ink, acrylic, pastels). Lorraine's style is pronounced and consistent although her subject reflects change, or a positive transformation. In child-like imagery, she conveys a sophisticated message through the symbolism of what is seen. Butterflies are change, rainbows are a connection or reconciliation with a part of herself once lost.

Dreams, memory, interesting sights and sounds, music, poetry and prose are "a source of inspiration," she says. "I let the images grow in my mind until I am ready to put them down. It seems that whatever I respond to at a particular moment is an echo of my state of mind as well, and when I do a piece of work this state of mind is also captured and recorded."

Lorraine has a B.A. in English literature and philosophy from the University of Oklahoma, and a diploma from the Emily Carr College of Art and Design. She is presently a graduate student in counselling psychology at UBC, and studies sign language.

Lorraine has been coming to Galiano for 20 years and has previously shown her art at La Berengerie. This show continues until September 14.

pastor's wife, Elsie Apivor, who introduced the clowns to last year's tea. As a result, Fairweather said more children came and added to the festive atmosphere.

Three door prizes were awarded to "off-islanders" — a laquered tray from The General Store, a gift certificate to Pender Lodge, and a picture by Ora Symes.

May Forester was the lucky winner of a huge planter donated by the Fulawka's and Fairweather noted how fortunate it was that a local resident won the raffle. She said the planter was so big that anyone travelling off the island with it would have had difficulty.

Bishop Ronald Shepherd from Victoria arrived for tea in the latter part of the afternoon, and Winifred Spalding "held court" at her table, much to the delight of nearby guests.

setting it straight

An error was made in last week's Driftwood article on Pender Island helicopter service. A statement that physician Ellen Anderson couldn't get an ambulance when she called for one in May should have read that she couldn't get a helicopter on a particular occasion.

Jim Nixon, ambulance attendant on Pender Island, said he attended all emergency calls for ambulance service.

Story-telling sessions

Memories, insights to be shared

On August 9, story-teller Hanna Chusid will arrive at the Driftwood Centre on North Pender in a horse and carriage. As soon as the Farmer's Market closes down at 11 am, she will gather people into a story-telling circle to have some fun with memories and insights the old and young can share.

"The story circle is a way for people to realize that everyone who is here knows something about the beauties and sorrow and richness and colorfulness of life on Pender Island," she said.

Chusid, an American with a Russian-Jewish background who has lived in B.C. for 11 years, has been hired by the Pender Island Museum Society to conduct story-telling sessions for three consecutive Saturdays in August. She is being featured as the society launches a campaign to raise funds towards establishing a museum on Pender.

Money will be collected through donations, and the museum society is hopeful people will come out to take part in the sharing of memories. Chusid, whose main interest lies in legends and the knowledge to be gained from our ancestors, plans to tell some Jewish stories. She may also tell a Cowichan Indian legend about the origin of man, and possibly some stories about Pender's past.

However, Chusid said group participation is part of the fun, and those who come can expect to have the talking stick passed their way.

Depending on the turnout to Chusid's story circles on August 9, 16 and 23 people can expect to be part of one group or a number of small groups. Chusid said she can handle any number of participants, and encouraged other Gulf Island residents to attend as well.

She is hopeful that those who do attend will plan to stay for the two-hour session, suggesting that to arrive late or leave early would be like going to see a movie mid-way through.

And if the idea catches on, she sees it as something that could be continued once her sessions are finished. For example, if the museum society on Pender wanted to construct a Christmas display reminiscent of past celebrations, residents could get together and talk about their memories.

Two window displays in the Salt Spring Lands office will also be featured as part of the museum society's promotion. They will be on-going over the winter months to generate interest in the island's past.

June Frache, secretary of the museum society, explained that the displays will change every two weeks with presentations on the first families who pioneered on big sections of land.

saturna scene

Shelley Crooks and Wayne Martiner were married at the Community Hall Saturday. Mayne Islander Victor Hunt performed the ceremony, which was relaxed and humorous.

Both bride and groom had five attendants. Mary Jane Davidson was matron of honour, and bridesmaids were Sam Crooks, Dina Koreman, Kelly Crooks and Lana Corkill. Martiner's best man was Curtis Daily. His groomsmen included Kevin and Peter Martiner, Jaimie Carpenter and Clifford Crooks.

Michael Hayes was master of ceremonies; the Women's Club catered a sit down meal for the 140 guests; Betty Carpenter organized the decorations; and Mr. Music provided the sound for the dance. Hayes, who presented the toast to the bride, has known Crooks for several years — teaching her at Saturna School and then housing her on Salt Spring, while she attended high school.

People were heard to comment on the relaxed atmosphere of the wedding, in which traditional customs were observed.

The fast-approaching art show is slated to run August 2, 3 and 4 from 11 am to 10 pm on Saturday, and from 11 am to 5 pm on Sunday and Monday. Contributors should see or phone Flora and tell her the size of their exhibit. Artwork should be at the hall for hanging by 8 pm on Friday, July 31. There will be a schedule of live events posted at the hall, and tea and refreshments may be purchased throughout the show.

Bridesmaid at the Crooks-Martiner wedding, Dina Foreman, held a wedding shower for Shelley Crooks last Thursday night. Sandy and Dave Obades' daughter and Shelley have been friends for years. All the bridesmaids were present except Lana Corkill. It was a lively affair.

Irene and Bill Lawson and their grand-daughter Theresa were on island for the wedding. Theresa had some good horse rides.

Graham Haworth, who is back on the island along with Polly, is recovering from a knee operation.

John Pillsbury won the coveted rowing trophy at the annual race at the twins birthday party at Campbells beach. His rowing performance was remarkable, as was everyone's, the race being won by matching a secret, intricately formulated time. Tommy Puchney, now 24, did the birthday honours.

Paul and Bernadette Delieau had a celebration in their new house. The barbeque was loud and lively and Laura Gabriel's new mum was feted on her birthday.

Market raises school group funds

The parent-teacher club on Pender Island is sponsoring a flea market every Sunday from noon to 3 pm at the school, to raise funds for next year.

Gail Jamieson, the group's past-president, said members have brought in between $30 and $40 at each of the four markets held this July.

In the past, she added, the group has attempted to raise funds through dances but found that there is too much work involved for the financial gain. "It's hard work ... because you put a lot of effort into these dances, and you could never charge enough to cover the work involved," she said.

Funds raised in the past have gone toward such things as an adventure playground, asphalt for a hopscotch area, and basketball backboards.

An assortment of household items, children's toys and clothing, adult clothing and miscellaneous articles ranging from fishing rods to novelty lamps were available last Sunday.

Jamieson said some vendors come every week, while others just come once or twice.

"We are encouraging people to get their own tables and sell their own stuff," she said, while mentioning that those who wish to donate unwanted items can do so. A table manned by the parent group will sell donated items.

Residents urged to comply with closure regulations

PENDER ISLAND — RCMP Constable Brian Brown reminds residents and visitors of the current fire closure and asks their co-operation in obeying the regulations. He said the fire hazard is quite high, and RCMP will lay charges against anyone who violates closures.

Brown said volunteer firemen on North Pender issued warnings on two occasions last week. He noted that one resident in the Clam Bay area did not co-operate until RCMP Corporal Thorogood came to enforce the closure. The man did not believe the warning from the fire department, although Brown emphasized that volunteer firemen have the authority to enforce the regulation.

"Everybody's got garbage and scrap they have to get rid of, and it's just right now that it's not safe to do it," said Brown. He added that, at present, stump and garbage fires seem to be more of a problem than campfires.

At a North Pender Fire Department meeting last week, RCMP agreed to assist fire officials in monitoring the fire closure in a concerted effort to prevent big fires on the island. Brown said Pender Island seems to be having more problems with enforcing the closure than Mayne Island.

"It's a big problem here. I have seen a fire last year where an entire lawn was eaten up," said Brown.

Pender resident Bernie Bastille suffered minor injuries when a police report

log fell and trapped him for about one hour last Saturday. When RCMP arrived, ferry employees and family had helped Bastille out from under the log. The incident took place on the south shore of Otter Bay.

"He was doing some wood cutting and a log rolled over on his leg and trapped him," said Brown.

A 35mm Pentax camera was reported lost from the Pender archaeological dig on July 22. The camera, valued at $300 and belonging to a Victoria woman, was in a black case and contained a completed roll of film.

Ladies softball has ended for the 1986 season with the Driftwood Derelicts winning the League Champion Trophy. Derelicts had an impressive 17 win, 3 loss record overall. Team members are, back row from left, coach Wayne Soroka, Pauline Beavals, Trish Birney, Gillian Smith, Candace Crossan, Lyn Roland, Cathy

Island woman left impressive service record

Long time Salt Spring Island resident Roma Sturdy died recently at Lady Minto Hospital. She was in her 80th year.

Mrs. Sturdy is survived by her son, John Rhodes Sturdy, and grand-daughter Katie Roma Sturdy, both of Toronto, Ontario.

A Salt Spring resident since 1951, Mrs. Sturdy was known as an active community member and volunteer.

Her stay on Salt Spring first found Mrs. Sturdy working on the staff of Lady Minto Hospital, then with the Gulf Islands School District.

In retirement, she sought and won a seat on the school board, where she was involved in the creation of the high school building. She also found time to serve as secretary for the Legion and as a member of the Golf Club board of directors. Other involvements included work with the Anglican Church, the library, the Community Centre and numerous groups and committees formed for island improvement.

Mrs. Sturdy was also instrumental in the organization of Meals on Wheels, a project she continued to serve for many years.

In addition, she was well known as a benefactor to many students, helping at fund-raising dances, car washes, bake sales and bazaars. She was also active in French immersion classes.

Sturdy's friends say she will likely be best remembered for her work as a counsellor to senior citizens: "Roma had the knack of smoothing out the vagaries of red tape. And if she didn't know how to do it, she'd soon discover with whom to speak, and then get it done."

Mrs. Sturdy was predeceased by her husband, a retired journalist, author and free-lance writer. During the Second World War, when her husband was serving in the Royal Canadian Navy, she accompanied him to Hollywood when he was assigned to the duty of naval adviser during the filming of a movie about corvettes in the Atlantic. He was also responsible for part of the movie script.

Memorial services for Mrs. Sturdy were to be held today (Wednesday, July 30) at St. Mark's Church, beginning at 1 pm.

Building pace showing signs of slowing down

To the mid-way point of 1986, construction activity in the Gulf Islands is well ahead of levels reached in the same period of 1985. However, building permit figures released last week by the Capital Regional District (CRD) also show that the pace is slowing down.

Following a trend that first surfaced this May, the value of construction activity and the CRD's subsequent permit revenues showed a slight decline — on both Salt Spring and the Outer Islands — over figures for corresponding periods in 1985. The number of permits issued in June, however, is up this year as compared to 1985.

The statistics for June, 1986, with figures for the same period in 1985 in brackets, are as follows:

- Salt Spring — permits issued, 52 (34); value of construction, $391,290 ($502,880); and permit revenue, $4,383 ($5,464).
- Outer Islands — permits issued, 36 (31); value of construction, $560,637 ($672,431); and permit revenue, $5,987 ($6,981).

Statistics for this June also show that the value of building activity is highest on the Outer Islands, while more permits were issued on Salt Spring. Galiano Island led the way on the Outer Islands this June, registering 12 permits for activity worth $227,254.

Over the entire Gulf Islands, meanwhile, the number of permits issued in June, 1986, increased to 88 from the 65 recorded in June, 1985; construction value fell to $951,927 in 1986 from $1.175 million in June, 1985; and permit revenue dropped to $10,375 this June from $12,382 in June, 1985.

Despite the declines, year-to-date figures still show levels to June, 1986, ahead of those reached in the same period of 1985. Breakdowns for the two periods, with 1985 data in brackets, are as follows:

- Salt Spring — permits issued, 235 (151); value of construction, $2.656 million ($1.947 million); and permit revenue, $31,355 ($19,981).
- Outer Islands — permits issued, 159 (123); value of construction, $2.32 million ($1.866 million); and permit revenue, $24,774 ($20,415).

Comparing overall regional performances, the number of permits issued is up from 274 in 1985 to 394 this year; value of construction jumped from $3.813 million in 1985 to $4.967 to June, 1986; and permit revenue is up from $40,396 in 1985 to $56,099 this year.

Current year-to-date figures show the Outer Islands close to Salt Spring in terms of value of construction completed or underway. Most of that activity has taken place on the Penders, which have registered 61 permits for activity worth close to $1 million. Next up is Galiano with 49 permits for work worth $793,096.

down through the years

with Driftwood

Twenty-five years ago

• The executive of the Salt Spring Island Chamber of Commerce met with the Hon. Earle C. Westwood and Ron Worley, representing the B.C. Toll Ferry Authority, to discuss the new ferry service for the Gulf Islands. However, neither visitor could answer questions about frequency of service, the cost to users or whether new boats would be added.

• Real estate ad: Special this week, a lovely waterfront home on four acres of park-like woodland. Over 400 feet of waterfront with nice beach. Full price $14,000.

• A barn dance social evening was held on the Parson's Estate on Scott Road to celebrate the paving of one-eighth of a mile of Scott Road. Music for the event was provided by the Dick's TV combination of gramophone and loud-speaker. Making the dance unique was the fact that it was actually held in a barn.

• The Lions Club was offering membership in the Gulf Islands Ambulance Society for $5 a year per family. Membership provided free ambulance service on Salt Spring Island and to hospitals in Victoria, Duncan and Nanaimo. Many residents had taken advantage of the membership offer and the Lions Club expressed gratitude for that support.

Twenty years ago

• A Salt Spring Island youth was rescued from the waters off Vesuvius Bay by the Vesuvius Queen ferry. Hunter Gordon of Ganges was sailing a 12-foot boat which capsized. He was not hurt in the incident.

• The Galiano Centennial Committee has asked that the landing place for the voyageurs — a provincial 1966 centennial celebration event — be changed to Montague Marine Park from Sturdies Bay. At least 100 canoeists, dressed as historic voyageurs, were on their way from Fort St. James in northern B.C., down the Stuart and Fraser rivers and across the Strait of Georgia to Victoria. The Galiano stop was on their route and the locals were concerned about toilet facilities.

"We discovered the six acres of Bellhouse Park is on solid rock and you can't dig big holes to put under the biffs ..."

• Real estate ad: seven and one half acres, 14,000 feet road front, $3,500, Salt Spring Island.

• The Island Social Credit League held a picnic at St. Mary Lake, with Saanich-and-the-Islands MLA John Tisdale and his wife attending as guests of honour.

Fifteen years ago

• Outer Islands residents were assured by Harry Lane of B.C. Tel that they did not have to use long distance to call between islands. Salt Spring Island subscribers to the phone service, however, were required to pay the toll to call the Outer Islands.

• House numbering on Salt Spring Island was being considered by a committee composed of members of the Salt Spring Island Planning Association, the Chamber of Commerce and the ratepayers association. Allotting numbers to houses on the island has been a concern of the volunteer fire department and the emergency ambulance service being run by the Lions Club. Some residents opposed the idea, calling numbering an imposition.

• Drummond Centennial Park at the head of Fulford Harbour was opened with an appropriate ceremony. The park was donated to the Salt Spring Island community by Captain L.D.B. Drummond, shortly before his death, for a play and sports area for children. Mrs. Drummond took part in the ceremony, which was followed by entertainment that included an Indian dancing team and an appearance by the May Queen and her princesses.

Ten years ago

• Salt Spring Islanders were told that positive government action on the proposal to install an experimental sewer system on the island is expected by the end of July or August of this year.

Capital Regional District director George Heinekey said in a letter to the department of municipal affairs that the sewer system is a major problem in the Ganges area.

• Fire Chief Kelly Hanke issued a warning to Salt Spring Island residents about storing gasoline on private property. Some people were buying gasoline on Vancouver Island at 79 cents per gallon, somewhat lower than the 87 cents being charged on the island. The fire chief said special permits were needed to store gasoline on property.

• Saturna Island's community plan was approved by the executive council, Hugh Curtis, minister of municipal affairs and MLA for Saanich-Islands, said. The community plan was established as a basis for zoning and subdivision bylaws. Saturna joined Salt Spring, Galiano and South Pender Islands in having such a plan.

• The new owners of the Mayne Inn on Mayne Island stress that expansion plans for the resort do not include condominiums. Guy O'Brien, president of Realacorp Financial Ltd., said the newest proposal for the expansion of the inn includes only 22 additional units, which will be sold under strata title for financing purposes only. The purchasers of the units become, in effect, part owners of the resort, which must be operated as a hotel in order to take advantage of federal tax shelters.
