

Baseball for kids returns to Salt Spring

Baseball is returning to Salt Spring Island.

The Salt Spring Minor Baseball Association — for hardball, not softball — was organized earlier this year and is aiming now to start play in April in three youth leagues.

Registration for T-ball (ages five to seven years), Little League (eight to 12 years) and Babe Ruth (13 to 15 years) will take place at Portlock Park this Saturday, February 27, from 10 am to 2 pm.

Registration fees are $12 for T-ball, $20 for Little League and $20 for Babe Ruth.

The association, headed by president Roger Chernenkoff and vice-president Roy Kinnear, has held four organizational meetings to date and has another session scheduled for tonight (Wednesday, February 24) at 7:30 pm in the library of Salt Spring Elementary School.

Mike Tyson, a spokesman for the association, said the meetings held so far have elected officers and formed committees to prepare the launching of the three baseball leagues, but that much work is yet to be done.

"As in any new venture," he said, "getting started is the toughest part. But with the incredible enthusiasm of those already involved, and with the positive interest shown by businesses and private citizens, we are well on our way to realizing our first-year goal — to let the kids have fun, an opportunity to learn, and a chance to play organized ball."

Youth baseball flourished on Salt Spring in the past but suffered a decline in recent years. Tyson is hoping the newly-formed association will revive interest in the sport and give youngsters a positive recreational alternative.

"I think we would all agree that we need more recreational activities for our young people," he said.

Although the association is now off the ground, Tyson added that more help is needed.

"Although the most basic groundwork has been done, we still need and would appreciate any help anyone can give," he said.

Selects overpower Juan de Fuca with show of offensive firepower

Salt Spring Selects 6, Juan de Fuca 1.

By MALCOLM LEGG

Under sunny skies, the Salt Spring Selects put on one of their best offensive displays in demolishing Juan de Fuca 6-1 last Sunday at Portlock Park.

The Selects started slowly, as though they were waiting for something to happen, rather than forcing the play to create scoring opportunities. Mid-fielder Ben Berry seemed to sense the stagnation in the Selects play, and took control of the game.

Mid-way through the half, Berry slipped a beautiful pass to a kicking B.J. Severs on left wing. He banged the ball in off the far post and the Selects were ahead to stay.

Late in the half the Selects scored a pretty goal as Roderick Shoolbraid crossed a ball from the end-line, which Corbin Scott headed to his brother Justin, who then headed it into the net.

In the second half the Selects came out with their guns blazing, especially by the team's scoring ace, Chad "Wolf" Little, out of goal.

The goal of the game quickly followed as another Berry pass found "Wolf" on the wing. The Wolfman sent a beautiful cross to Justin, moving in for his second header and a 3-0 lead for the Selects.

Andrew Aust quickly followed as he broke in on a pass from Justin Scott and rifled the ball home.

Chad Little followed with the next two goals, the first on a fine combination with Andrew, and the second as he finished off a header from Ben Berry.

Juan de Fuca scored a late goal to wrap up the scoring, but the Selects had to be pleased with a solid offensive display after so many missed opportunities the previous week.

Hopefully, their scoring talents will remain for next week's District Cup match against Peninsula in Sidney.

WHAT LOLA WANTS, LOLA GETS...

in the Driftwood Classifieds!

DEFINITION OF A NEWSPAPER:

Part 3: Advertising

A community newspaper relies on two sources of revenue to operate: one is derived from the sale of the paper itself and the other from the sale of advertising. The latter generates most of the newspaper's revenue.

At the Gulf Islands Driftwood, display advertising is solicited from local businesses by a full-time sales representative, Jeff Outerbridge. It is Jeff's responsibility to look after advertising accounts by calling regularly on merchants and assisting them with their marketing programs. Like other newspaper employees, he too works to a deadline. By five o'clock on Friday display advertising copy must be in the hands of the production staff if it is to be finished in time for the following Wednesday's paper. On Monday and Tuesday, copies of the finished advertisements are checked by the sales representative for errors before he begins selling for the following week's edition.

Another form of advertising with which many readers are familiar is classified. The classified section is often one of the most well read parts of a newspaper. But its familiarity is due to the fact that the average reader uses classified advertising from time to time to dispose of or find household items, vehicles, boats and other goods. Classifieds are easy to use too. The Driftwood office is usually busy all day on any given Monday as islanders place their ads before the three o'clock deadline.

For the consumer, newspaper advertising is a valuable aid in making buying decisions as it provides important information on price, selection and availability of goods and services.

NEXT WEEK: Production: Putting it to bed.

Port Washington wharf disassembly

Harbour authority may oversee wharf activity

By CASEY O'CONNOR
PENDER ISLANDS — Meeting in general session on February 17, the Pender Island Chamber of Commerce voted to become the lead agency in creating a Pender Island Harbour Authority which would oversee the day-to-day operations of government wharves at Port Washington, Hope Bay and Browning Harbour on North Pender, and at Bedwell Harbour on South Pender Island.

The move to form a local harbour authority grew out of a study, conducted in 1986, which determined that parts of the Port Washington government dock were unsafe, and a subsequent request by the Pender Island Lions Club asking that the Coast Guard clean and repair the wharf. Gordon Wallace, acting on behalf of the Pender Lions, followed the group's letter with a telephone call to Dave Barratt, regional manager for the Coast Guard's Western Harbours and Ports division.

Barratt told Wallace that a contract had been let to tear down those parts of the Port Washington facility that had been declared unsafe. In a memorandum to Wallace, Barratt said the Coast Guard and Fisheries and Oceans were interested in turning over day-to-day operations of various wharves to local communities if the proper governing body existed to administer the facilities.

Wallace then asked the Lions to act as the lead agency in helping create a local governing authority for Pender Island. The Pender Lions Club decided against taking on the project. "The Coast Guard is not acting out of benevolence," said Peter Campbell, a member of the club. "The job of management and upkeep is thankless. You field all the complaints and get the blame for everything that goes awry."

Island history examined by historical federation

By FLORENCE DODWELL
SOUTH GALIANO — Saturday, February 13, marked a most interesting day for the Gulf Islands branch of the B.C. Historical Federation. At a lunch enjoyed at the Five Roosters on Mayne Island, Alistair Ross spoke about Scottish crofters supposedly having settled on the Gulf Islands according to a British law passed in the 1800s. Then, Dr. Tony Kingscote brought up the matter of the preservation of the 650-foot-long midden at Montague Harbour. Marie Elliott, of the Open Space Committee which advises the parks department of the CRD, said she has recommended that the Pender Canal site be acquired, as well as Mortimer Spit, to become part of the park area on South Pender Island.

Next came the visit to the Mayne Island Museum, where interesting remains of the Zephyr's 115-year-old cargo were on display. At 3 am on February 13, 1872, a severe north-east gale dashed the three-masted barque onto the rocks at Waugh Point, near Davis Bay on Mayne Island. The boat carried high density, good quality sandstone quarried on Newcastle Island, from Nanaimo to San Francisco.

In 1976, government-provided funds enabled three local divers to explore the site of the wreck. Ultimately, two sandstone columns, weighing 33 tons each, were brought up. These had been quarried to be used for pillars at the San Francisco Mint.

The meeting proceeded to the Health Centre at 2 pm, but upon leaving the museum this reporter caught sight of the Mayne Island time line, marking 3,000 - 1,000 B. C., when Indians were on Helen Point, up to 1979 A.D. when a satellite marine tracking station was installed on Mount Parke. There were other interesting artifacts and information which must be taken in at another time.

At the Health Centre, Marie Elliott (who has researched the history of Mayne Island) gave a short review. For instance, in 1872 there was settlement on Mayne Island, in 1883 a school, and in 1885 a wharf.

Larry McFarland, the guest speaker, is a member and former president of the Underwater presented a video which showed the volunteer divers retrieving the two sandstone columns from a depth of 35 feet including the rigging and lifting of the columns. The second largest crane to work in west coast waters lifted these large objects. Now one is located on Newcastle Island, the other in front of the Maritime Museum in Vancouver. Parks B.C. paid $17,000 for the recovery of the pillars.

Several slides were also shown, courtesy of the Underwater Archaeological Society of B.C., which was formed in 1976. The Zephyr, built in Massachusetts in 1855, worked the West Coast between Victoria and San Francisco from 1860 to 1872. It had little manoeuvrability, Larry McFarland noted. He also spoke of coal-carrying wrecks in waters around here.

Louis Vallee spoke about the large sandstone rock in front of the museum. Excellent slides showed how he and other divers dove for the 3,500-pound sandstone, floated it at high tide, then brought it in by chains. A barge lifted the stone before it was delivered to the museum, where it was pressure-washed and painted with urethane.

Readers may be interested to know that the January-February 1988 edition of Diver magazine has an article on the Zephyr entitled Raising the Past.

Advocates say

Local control over public wharves will help discourage overcrowding

advocate of local control, refused to let the issue die and next approached the Chamber of Commerce. "The federal government is less and less enthusiastic about keeping up the docks. With no local group to step in and say we want these facilities, they'll let a wharf deteriorate and then simply do what they did in January at Port Washington — tear it down," he said.

Bob George owns the old Corbett Store at Hope Bay and runs a water taxi service. For the past six years he has been wharfing for the government docks at Hope Bay and for the docks in Browning Harbour. "I attended a meeting of wharfingers that was held in Port Hardy back in November," he said. "When I got back, I saw Gordon and told him I felt somebody had to take responsibility for the Port Washington docks or the Coast Guard was going to pull them out."

"I saw what happened here at Hope Bay," continues George. "Four-fifths of the original dock space was torn out five years ago when I took over as wharfinger. They were in horrible shape. Two or three years ago, Fisheries wanted to remove another hundred feet as part of their program to cut maintenance costs. Vern Roddick, through the CRD, together with pressure from the school board and the Lions Club, saved the docks that you see here today."

Gordon Wallace sees himself as a facilitator for the port authority project. "I recall coming over from Steveston when I was a boy. The CPR boats were sideloaders and would load and unload at the government docks at Port Washington and Hope Bay. When the front end loaders were developed and the BC Ferry facility built at Otter Bay, the other docks became stepchildren of sorts."

"Not everyone is as enthusiastic as I am," says Wallace. "There are a number of people who have been using the wharves as free moorage. But these are the same people who complain about the upkeep. Local control is what this is all about."

"I agree with Gordon on the issue of control," says Bob George. "Unadministered docks are always overcrowded with local boats that tie up and never move. And that is not the purpose of a public dock. But I don't think we need to have a port authority or harbour commission to oversee the facilities. Why not simply appoint a wharfinger for Port Washington and Bedwell Harbour? If the Coast Guard and Fisheries are so anxious to get rid of the facilities then auction them off to a private businessman with the stipulation that part of the space be guaranteed public access."

In taking on the port authority project the Pender Island Chamber of Commerce appointed Vice President Dave Jamieson to what is presently an ad hoc committee composed of interested members of the Pender community. Joining Jamieson will be commercial fisherman Alfred Kaisla and representatives from the school board, B.C. Hydro, the Power Squadron and the Pender Island Yacht Club.

Larry Hildrith, owner of Bedwell Harbour Resort and a member of the Chamber, also agreed to serve on the committee and help in laying groundwork for the authority. "I've listened to all the reasons put forward for creating the local authority and feel most are valid, but as a marine operator with a Customs Dock and docks belonging to Fisheries and the Coast Guard, I have to be aware of what can be a conflict of interest with the government and marina each renting out moorage space," he said.

"The major problem at present is one of control," continued Hildrith. "This past Labour Day we ran into a problem at Bedwell when a group of boaters decided to tie up at the government dock and became a bit rowdy. They knew I had no authority over the dock and made it rather difficult when I approached them about quieting down."

"A local port authority with well-thought-out rules and regulations should be able to answer Larry's concerns at Bedwell," says Peter Hemphill, who will represent the Yacht Club on the ad hoc committee. "It will be an interesting exercise — trying to solve the problems unique to each of the ports — but the idea is to have facilities that better serve the community."

In a letter to Wallace dated January 7, the Coast Guard's Barratt outlined the plan that would see the federal government continue to maintain major construction at the various ports while the local harbour authority takes over all day-to-day operations and expenses.

Under the proposed set-up, the Pender Island Harbour Authority would participate in long- and short-term planning for maintenance and development, be responsible for hiring a manager and bear the costs of salaries and administration, cleaning and garbage, electricity, water and security.

The local authority would collect appropriate fees and maintain all traffic and financial records and would enforce all applicable rules and laws.

Firemen attending training sessions

By ALISTAIR ROSS
NORTH GALIANO - Fire Chief Ted Waterman and Chester Williams, his counterpart in South Galiano, have been attending a series of weekend training sessions at Langford, near Victoria.

The three, two-day sessions are sponsored by the provincial Fire Academy and deal with the training of volunteer firemen, correct procedures and the proper handling of equipment.

At North Galiano, the volunteer firemen meet every second Monday at 7 pm for practices. On cold wet winter evenings, they view educational videos supplied by the Fire Academy in Vancouver and routinely check out their equipment.

On Sundays the truck is often seen on Porlier Pass Drive as one of the members is given driver training. At the moment four of the firemen are licensed to drive the fire truck. Fire Chief Waterman stated his group is reviewing the alert system. For the present, however, fires are to be reported by phone to one of these numbers:

Chambers at 9-2955
 Stafford at 9-2689
 Haksi at 9-2466

The alert will then go out and the firemen contacted.

Plans are well underway for the Fireman's Ball on March 19 and tickets are now available. Phone Bill Stafford 9-2689 or Ted Waterman 9-2805 and reserve a place at the table for the prime rib dinner and a fun evening.

Newest arrival

The people of North Galiano salute their newest citizen, Darlene Farrah James. The wee one was born on Wednesday, February 10, the daughter of Velma and Alex James. Little Darlene is the sixth youngster born in this area since last June. The Quilting Guild of St. Margaret's Church plans to honour the children and their parents at the North Hall on Sunday, March 6, after the 2 pm service led by Rev. Dan Noonan. The quilters have made a baby quilt for each of the children and these will be presented at the social hour after the service. Everyone is welcome.

Old-timer hospitalized

Galianoites were sorry to hear of long-time resident Harry Baines' ill health. Harry was taken to Ladysmith Hospital by his son, Harry Jr. On Sunday, it was reported that he is now resting comfortably.

Radio play

Audrey Thomas has a 10-minute radio play scheduled for airing soon on the CBC's Saturday evening program, State of the Arts. The theme of the drama is related to The Spirit Sings, the show of Native art prepared by the Glenbow Art Museum for display during the Winter Olympics at Calgary.

Annual meeting

The annual meeting of the North Galiano Community Association is scheduled for Saturday, March 5 at 2 pm. Reports for both the volunteer fire department and the community hall will be presented at that time. There will also be the election of officers for the year.

Other Northern Passtimes

The Scottish Country Dance Group meets at the North Hall each Tuesday evening at 7:30 pm. The dart throwers meet on Wednesday, also at 7:30 pm. The rag-rug makers meet on Friday at 11 am. New members at any of these groups are always welcome.

Bob Bossin

Bossin's Home Remedy For Nuclear War, the hit Canadian musical that has toured the country from the Queen Charlottes to Cape Breton, is coming to Galiano Island for one performance only at the South Galiano Community Hall on Friday, February 26 at 7:30 pm. All profits from the performance will be donated to Tools for Peace.

Bossin's Home Remedy, is a hilarious medicine show mix of theatre, music, magic and snake oil.

It is written and performed by Bob Bossin. Bossin is well-known across the country as the leader of Canada's premiere folk group, Stringband, and is widely acknowledged as one of Canada's foremost songwriters.

Bob Bossin's credo is "just because you're saving the world, it don't mean you have to have a bad time."

Tickets are $6 in advance and $8 at the door. They are available at the Hummingbird Inn, Burrill Bros. Store and the Spanish Hills Store. There will be door prizes and child care will be available. Phone Diane Cragg at 9-5805 for further information.

Bossin's Home Remedy for Nuclear War is absolutely guaranteed to prevent nuclear war or your money refunded!

Pender 'Dismantle' group discusses war threat

By ELEANOR HARRISON

Peter and Eleanor Adamson have offered the garden solarium room in their home to Pender Island's Operation Dismantle organization. Some 35 members and friends gathered there recently to enjoy a pot-luck dinner.

Mrs. Victoria Gillespie, a delegate to the 1987 World Federalist Symposium in Philadelphia, spoke briefly on the importance of strengthening the United Nations. This can be achieved, she said, by working to decrease the insanity of military debt now gripping the world.

Gillespie continued by saying "the Victoria Operation Dismantle group (of which Pender Island is a part) has recently received word that the city of Victoria has been accepted as a twin with a city in the Pacific Rim area of the Soviet Union."

Gillespie introduced Peter Pentz from Salt Spring Island as the evening's guest speaker.

Pentz began his talk by saying that "most of what we, the ordinary person on the street, have been so frightened of, is not really frightening at all."

Pentz continued by saying the military build-up of weaponry is not weapons at all — but suicide pills. Their function is to extract money from taxpayers to pump-prime the U.S. economy by persuading people they are in danger, and to support the American military complex, Pentz said.

Canada's survival depends on that of the U.S., which is threatened by its own government, he continued, adding that Canadians can help the Americans to see that point.

The recent summit between Gorbachev and Reagan, which resulted in the IMF Treaty agreement to get rid of short range missiles in Europe, is of minute military significance on either side, Pentz charged. Politically, however, it is of enormous significance. The credit for the summit, he said, must go to Gorbachev.

Presently there exists zero per cent chance that either nation will attack the other. According to Pentz: "It is necessary to denuclearize and de-militarize the world. This requires a change in attitude."

The IMF Treaty has to be ratified by the U.S. Senate. Right now, Pentz suggested, military individuals in the U.S. are thinking of new things — evading the issue as on previous occasions.

The major question, Pentz said, is whether the treaty will go through.

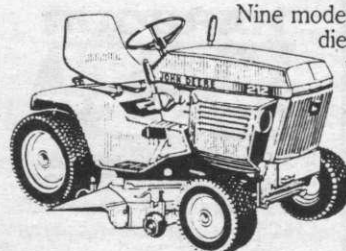

On the NATO side, Pentz said Europe is the most heavily armed part of the world — and therein lies a complicated situation to be resolved: how can we, living on the Gulf Islands, help? National-ly, Pentz suggested, we can put pressure on our government to have nothing to do with NATO.

In earlier times, it was accepted "the best defence is to attack." In the present day, to do so in Europe would be suicide, Pentz said.

What is needed is non-provocative defences or neutral offensive weapons — defensive ones — which make the other side feel safer, and thus increase our own security. We have been doing the opposite for 40 years.

Alcoholics Anonymous is a fellowship of men and women who share their experience, strength and hope with each other that they may solve their common problem and help others to recover from alcoholism. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop drinking. There are no dues or fees for AA membership; we are self-supporting through our own contributions. AA is not allied with any sect, denomination, politics, organization or institution; does not wish to engage in any controversy, neither endorses nor opposes any causes. Our primary purpose is to stay sober and help other alcoholics to achieve sobriety. 8-tfn

Revelations

Sir,
It may interest Salt Spring residents to know how the meeting on dioxins and the environment went in Crofton at the Brass Bell on Thursday, February 18.

The meeting was a joint effort of Environment Canada and the B.C. Ministry of Environment and Parks, to educate people on dioxins in the area around Crofton. Dr. John Ward, a government toxicologist, made a presentation on the subject which concluded that there was nothing to be alarmed about at the present time, although he only had test results dating back to 1982 and nothing more current. What was said about dioxins was very elementary and has already been widely published.

So nothing new was actually said on the subject. That in itself was a big disappointment to people from the Crofton area who thought they would get much more specific information.

What ticked off most of the people who attended, though, was the attempt by Dr. Ward, Ted Oldham, and politician-on-the-make Graham Bruce, MLA for the area, to limit the discussion to dioxins and to ignore the myriad of toxins, wastes and poisons discharged from the mill. Needless to say that effort did not succeed and some rather irate citizens spoke up on the subject of how electro-static precipitators are turned off at night and on weekends, thus ensuring that Crofton gets choked by airborne wastes at those times.

That revelation, made by senior millworkers who are past promotion and can't be fired, and whose friends are dying of cancer of the pancreas and liver, raised enough of a storm, centred on Ted Oldham, the regional waste manager for the Ministry of Environment and Parks who then had to explain why the mill was not being monitored effectively. He said that it was, but conceded that the courts were reluctant to hammer the companies with fines for pollution violations, with the result that there was not much incentive for the government to enforce compliance. This, notwithstanding the fact that the companies don't like being fined even when the fines are just token amounts, which seems to be the case most of the time.

Graham Bruce, the MLA, wants to establish a dioxin testing lab on the west coast since samples now have to be sent to the east and there is a waiting list for getting tests done. It has got to be a long list when the chief toxicologist has results dating back to 1982 and nothing more up to date. That effort is commendable. However, the attempt to avoid discussion of other pollutants is not and this writer let him know in no uncertain terms that people would get violent if he didn't rise to the occasion and do something about it. Anyway, the mood of the senior millworkers left no doubt about it. Just establishing a lab is not good enough when there is such a plethora of pollutants being emitted day and night, seven days a week.

It is now a matter of keeping up the pressure on the elements that have come out of the woodwork and have identified themselves as targets. Limiting a public information meeting to the discussion of one chemical was probably the dumbest tactical move this writer has ever seen in his life, and a few people will be nursing their wounds about this for some time to come.

Ted Oldham was perhaps the most philosophical about it all. He said his job is to report back what kind of feeling exists in the population. He'll have plenty to talk about even though there were many questions that he could not and would not answer for obvious reasons.

Just to remind you all. Future members of the Salt Spring Sierra Club went to the meeting in Crofton and will be involved in the pollution fight in the future. The next meeting is in the music room of the Salt Spring Elementary School at 7:30 pm on Thursday, February 25. A more exhaustive presentation on the state of pollution at Crofton will be given there.

Alternatives

Sir,
Why does Salt Spring have such a high per capita rate of alcohol related vehicle accidents?

The Driftwood article on February 10 mentions the age difference at parties as being a contributing factor to teenage alcohol abuse. It is disturbing that you would suggest segregation by age as a possible solution to a major problem in a community where we have much to learn and share with people of all ages.

Besides family gatherings, what provision does our island offer young adults aside from four drinking establishments?

What is it going to take to break through the ignorance and cheapness in our community? We can pay up front for recreational facilities, such as a pool, or we can pay later for the damage.

Maybe if young people had something else to do, your lawn wouldn't be torn up or your mailboxes knocked over when you wake up on Saturday morning.

I'm not suggesting that everyone between 13 and 40 years of age is going to go swimming on Friday nights, but I am trying to point out that it is not always the offender who gets hurt but often the "innocent," and that by giving a little to the community we all benefit.

- Dispite optimistic predictions of a few weeks ago, the Pozzolan plant was now idle.
- Previous reports stated the plant would be on a continuous 24-hour production schedule. Now, however, workers had been given notice and no one knew when production might resume.
- A small gray whale, which had been "loafing around" Salt Spring waters for several months, came in contact with a boat propeller.

The incident occurred when the whale attempted to surface underneath the water taxi Crackerjack, skippered by Harry Extel. The propeller was smashed and the whale came up with a bloody fin. Extel was able to make it back to land using the boat's second propeller.

- Salt Spring Lands was advertising view and waterfront retirement lots for $100 down and $25 per month.
- Salt Spring Islander Doug Dane was chosen as the Social Credit candidate for the local riding in the upcoming provincial election.

Dane, chief engineer on the Motor Princess, was chosen over two other candidates, both from Nanaimo.

- The only real separatists in Canada this week were the people of the Gulf Islands, who were cut off from the rest of the country by a ferry strike.

Service was suspended when

down through the years

crews walked off all B.C. Ferry Authority vessels to protest the recent dismissal of 160 crew members in a series of staff cuts.

A week after the initial strike, supply shortages were becoming a problem.

- Islander Doug Wilson was surprised to see a flock of Canadian geese fly by the week previous.

He couldn't be sure whether they were a group of 1968 geese heading north early, or a flock of 1967 geese which had mistaken Salt Spring Island for Florida, and had elected to winter here.

- When trustees of the Gulf Islands School District approved the purchase of a school bus from another district, the fact that it was not new was offset by the fact that a new vehicle of the size needed on Galiano Island was not available.

When it arrived, the bus had a damaged windshield. A replacement was ordered, but it was in no better condition. Trustees approved a plan to withhold payment for the new bus until responsibility for the damage had been settled by the carrier involved.

- Salt Spring Island gained two new police officers when auxiliary constables Ben Greenhough and Timothy O'Donnell were sworn in.

The ceremony took place at the Ganges court room. Magistrate M.F. Peiler officiated.

Fifteen years ago

- Court of Revision heard appeals against assessments on all of the islands.

A large slate of appeals was heard in Ganges, resulting from boosted assessments undertaken that year by provincial assessor Al Clarke. A ceiling was listed on assessment increases to bring assessments into line with the rest of the province. Concern surrounded assessments of both private and commercial property. In some instances, it was reported that the assessment had risen by 300 per cent.

- The Flower Box Fund, initiated by Driftwood several months previous, continued to rise, surpassing the $700 mark.

The fund was launched to pay for replacing the wooden flower boxes in Centennial Park with indestructible containers.

- Four prisoners who escaped from the Salvation Army Concord House were back in custody after a quick dash to Salt Spring Island.

The four men stole a car and drove to Vancouver, where they went to the Bayshore Inn and stole a luxury cruiser to make their way to Salt Spring.

Local resident Marc Holmes met four men near his Isabella Point home who appeared to be lost in the bush. A nearby house and outbuilding had been broken into and Col. Walter Mosedale put the facts together. The police were contacted and the men apprehended at Swartz Bay.

- Reversing an earlier decision, trustees of the Gulf Islands School District voted in favour of commencing with construction of Fernwood school.

Trustees voted 6-2 in favour of a motion made by Don Fairweather. Fairweather noted the board had spent many hours attempting to find an alternative solution to overcrowding problems at the Ganges elementary school.

HONDA INTRODUCES A BRIGHT NEW GENERATOR.

The EX1000. A portable generator that lets you run just about anything from lights to small power tools to a television. It runs on a reliable four-stroke engine that cuts fuel consumption without cutting power. Electronic ignition means that power is just a pull away, while special noise reduction features mean the EX1000 doesn't generate a whole lot of noise. So next time an outlet is more than an extension cord away, get yourself Honda's new EX1000. It's a very bright idea.

Types of hedges and plants determine style of gardens

In last week's article, the groundwork was laid for this second installment in the hedging story. Having covered some of the principles and considerations when locating and selecting your plants, this time around I will get right down to descriptions and suggestions for hedging plants in our region. For each of the plants, a general height range will be given and, while a hedge might possibly be kept shorter than the lowest height indicated, it will most probably mean lots of extra labour and maintenance work or, worse, it may not ever look right.

From the outset, many if not most shrubs and even trees can be made to serve as hedge plants, but for aesthetics and functional considerations many are best left for other uses in the garden.

With many garden styles, a low hedge or dividing edge is called for as a boundary defining tool. In formal English and Continental landscapes, clipped, tightly-kept borders of boxwood are used to keep order and continuity. English boxwood (Buxus sempervirens) and its selected smaller varieties make clean neat evergreen hedges ranging from one foot up to 15 feet more in height.

They love soils on the acid side, keep their best green colouration all year long if in a partially shaded location, and they need some water to get the younger plants started. When the plants are in a full sun situation, the winter and summer appearance is somewhat bronzed or scorched yellow-green — not all that appealing.

For low hedges in the shade, another good one to consider is the yew family, favouring the spreading Taxus baccata repandens, T. cuspidata densiformis and T. c. nana varieties. Other forms, species and cultivars of yew will reach considerably higher heights, and take several years to get there. The yews can take up to 10 or 12 hours of sun per day, provided adequate water is given. In some island locations the deer love the yews, unfortunately.

For full, beating sun situations lavender (santolina) and even rosemary make trouble-free low hedges. Lavender is a classic which will take periodic pruning. The santolina is a lower-cost, faster alternative, but you'll have to prune off the flowers before they make their full showing, as they smell rather offensive. The sage grey foliage is, however, appealing enough to consider its usage. The rosemary is a little less willing to tighten up and get bushy, but the fragrant foliage and long blooming season help to justify its place.

One family of shrubs which make a tough, formidable thorny and deer-proof screen, is the Berberis genus with species and cultivars which will give hedges in the two- to eight-foot-high range.

Berberis stenophylla "Irwinii" is the shortest, followed closely by a tight sunlover, B. buxifolia nana. Then comes warty barberry (B. verruculosa) reaching four feet, B. julianae giving up to six feet with reddish fall and winter

A beautiful all-summer bloomer which carries on producing fragrant, pink, tubular flowers all summer long on a low, arching hedge plant, is Abelia grandiflora.

Three forms are available, with varying ultimate heights for each, but for all of them the branching habit and form is somewhat open, with an informal appearance. While it will withstand shearing, judicious pruning will give the best form and appearance. Abelia loves full sun or partial shade, and does fine on all soils provided they don't get water-logged in winter-time.

Another broad-leaved evergreen that does well for hedging in these parts is Pyracantha in all its forms and colours. From the dwarf forms (less than 2 feet) such as P. 'Red Elf' on up to tall growers such as P. 'Watereri' which can reach eight feet or more, they all love sun or partial shade. They even grow well in a totally shaded spot but they don't produce near as many berries, nor as tight a growth habit in the shade. Older plants develop a thorny deer protective framework of branches but the younger stems and leaves are considered quite delectable.

Several forms of Cotoneasters will make excellent hedging plants, and they too take shearing and tight pruning well. Heights vary by species and variety from less than two feet right on up to those which can give a right evergreen hedge that can reach 10 to 15 feet in height. The deer generally leave these plants alone, but in a few places sample munching can be quite heavy. Cotoneasters will tolerate full sun or partial shade and grow well in almost all soils, as long as some water is provided during severe droughts.

Well, it seems that we haven't even gotten through the choices for broad-leaved evergreens and space has run out for this week, so next week we shall have to conclude our dissertation and finish the list of suitable hedge plants for the Gulf Islands.

colouration, and B. darwinii with its ascending shoots attaining over eight feet and being covered with small, fragrant rich golden yellow blooms in early spring.

The other berberis varieties aren't quite full enough to provide a tight hedge-like screen. Barberries tolerate a wide range of soils, favouring those which drain well, and can take shade locations.

For similar situations, but with fewer deer, Escallonia hedges work well. They can tolerate sea wind and exposed spots, and provide abundant blooms all summer long. Escallonia 'Newport dwarf' is a low compact shrub which bears rich pink blooms on a two to three foot high plant, while the taller E. 'Pink Princess' will reach six feet or more and give strong pink flowers against glossy, green leaves. These hedges will take shearing or hard pruning well.
