Baker has come a long way from meagre start

When Victor Campbell opens his bakery on Pender Island every morning at 10 a.m., people are lined up waiting to get in.

By NANCY VAIL
The Driftwood

Campbell's business has come a long way from the small wholesale operation he started on Pender Island five years ago. Campbell himself has also come a long way since he dropped out of Grade Nine, 15 years ago.

Today, locals steer island visitors in his direction — testimony that Campbell has become something of a drawing card.

Campbell acquired his baking skills, which eventually won him a baker's equivalent of an Olympic gold medal, due to problems at school and a measure of luck. When an apprenticeship position became available at a bakery where he cleaned ovens after school, Campbell left the classroom and took on the four-year program. By the age of 19, he had earned his master's baker certificate.

Campbell was then hired as a pastry chef at the Algonquin Hotel — a leading CP hotel in New Brunswick — where he rubbed elbows with the well-monied classes and learned the art of fine pastry making.

"That was a bluff. The bakery chef I apprenticed under hadn't prepared me for being a fancy pastry chef at all."

After one year, Campbell was ready for new challenges and a new environment and moved to an upscale hotel in Bermuda. While he enjoyed the Caribbean climate and was particularly fond of a parrot he adopted, he was not comfortable with the work environment or even the pastry-making end of the trade.

"Although it is known as the land of friendly people, there is a fair amount of undercurrent racism," he says, believing that sometimes promotions were based on factors not related to skill.

It was there, however, Campbell won the Bermuda Culinary Competition in 1983. The competition had solicited entries from chefs all over the world. Campbell took first place in the yeast-raised products category.

This was the first and only time he had entered a contest of this stature.

In 1984, Campbell returned to Canada and decided to make the west coast home, largely to satisfy the needs of his parrot. He worked at a bakery in Victoria for six months — long enough to decide, at the age of 22, it was time to go out on his own.

Campbell spent another six months learning entrepreneurial skills by selling vacuum cleaners. While this gave him confidence in working on his own, he decided baking was a preferable occupation. Campbell then discovered Pender — an island with no bakery.

"I came to Pender and decided it was the only place that was large enough to support a bakery, but that didn't have one."

Excellent props and acting make for a top-notch show

Joshua Lyon and Tessa Hales perform in Mayne Island's Batman and Dracula production

A combination of excellent acting and superior props resulted in a top-notch performance at the Mayne School, May 16 and 17.

By CHRIS STEWART
Driftwood Correspondent

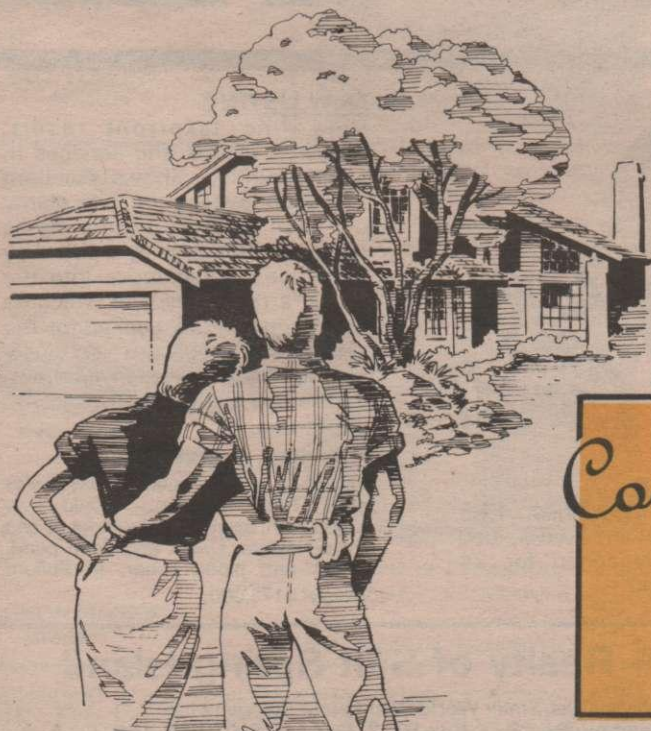

Directed by Eleanor and Ian Cocker, the play, staged in the imaginary countryside town of Transylvania, included the entire student body. The elaborate props gave the stage a three-dimensional effect and helped achieve a convincing performance.

The props included a black and yellow Batman car driven into the gym by Batman — Matthew Reid.

Josh Lyon as Dracula appeared cold, calculating and evil, but Tessa Hales, as Lucy, was temporarily attracted by his spell. Meghan Anderson, as the bossy and strict Dr. Seward, had the responsibility of doctoring the "kook," Renfield, played by Tamara Dodds, along with the help of the obliging nurse, Erin Jarvis.

Anika Ropars played the role of Sylvia, the sweet, motherly witch, and Erin Howell played the male role of the oh-so-proper Arthur. Eli Simcox played the dual roles of the determined Josh and "hairy" Harry with Leslie Sohler, as Frankenstein.

Rounding out the fast-moving production were the Transylvanians, bat people, barmaids, monsters and musicians.

Tully Construction Ltd. obtains first contract

The Galiano Health Care Society has let the first contract for the construction of its planned Health Care Centre on Burrill Road.

Tully Construction Ltd. of Montague Road has been awarded a contract for clearing the site, construction of the access road and septic field, and construction of the helicopter landing pad.

Bids for the work were opened at the director's meeting held May 8.

Work will commence immediately and completion is slated for early June.

Meanwhile, the Society is proceeding with the development of plans for the building in expectation it will go to tender by mid-June at the latest.

Present plans call for doctors' offices, a public health nurses' room, a dentist's office and multi-purpose rooms for the use of health care professionals of all descriptions.

Rental rates have not yet been set but its hoped they can be kept low to allow centre to get the widest possible use. The centre is expected to be self-supporting.

Meanwhile, donations for the project continue to come in and a further canvass, planned to reach many residents who were missed last year is slated to go ahead in the next few weeks. Anyone wishing to make a donation may do so by mailing it to Box 95, Galiano, B.C. V0N 1P0.

The fund currently stands at over $200,000.

Long hours and dedication to the work paid off for Victor Campbell's business

Campbell's first experience as an independent baker started in a small kitchen, in a rented house, with a 100-pound sack of flour.

"I went for it on a super small scale. I was so broke and poor at the time, I could only afford a 100-pound bag of flour and when that was sold out, I would go into town and get another bag."

To put this in perspective, Campbell notes that he now buys 50 sacks once a month. Today, it takes him one hour to bake what it took six hours to bake back then.

His start on Pender, he says, was also "bittersweet" in that some business operators were concerned about the competition and the potential business threat posed by this island newcomer.

"It was like they were trying to keep me small because they seemed to be afraid I would open my own shop."

His hours in his first two years were long — almost 14 hours a day every day. He baked from 9 p.m. until 5 a.m., packaged his goods and had the last of his deliveries out by 11 a.m. After a few hours rest, he would phone customers at 5 p.m. to collect orders for the next day.

He brought in no profit for the first two years — losing money through the winter and making enough profit in the summer to carry him through the year.

"I probably would have given up, but I knew I would have a future here if I kept working at it."

The long hours and dedication paid off. Campbell's efforts were noticed by a local couple who offered him financial assistance if he wanted to move into the then new Driftwood Mall. He accepted and since then, business has boomed. He now has two workers manning the front counter and an apprentice, Eric, who has almost finished his own four years of training, in the back.

Campbell's hours are almost normal, from 4 a.m. until 1 p.m., and he brings in a wage that supports his wife and 18-month old child.

Its not just the history of the bakery which makes it unique, but its family atmosphere and the early morning line-ups.

Campbell says, "We believe in the old idea where everyone went down to the bakery in the morning. We feel that is classier." Many of the goods are gone by 3 p.m.

What some customers don't know but many regulars appreciate, is that the items at this store are good for them — at least as good as rich pastries will allow. Everything is made from natural products and almost everything from wholewheat flour.

"Customers say, I don't want something that is good for me — I want something that is bad. But my goal is to make something that tastes good and is good for them."

Now that business life is almost "normal," Campbell is considering a change. Campbell is not always comfortable with the pressure that comes from the larger scale of the operation and he finds himself wondering if the "big time" is what he really wants.

"I am turning into a super environmentalist since I moved here. Sometimes I look around the room and see tons of electricity being consumed and tons of big equipment and I think about being in a house where I am not over-consuming."

"One day, I think I would like to sell the business and open a small, low-scale cafe on a much more relaxed note — that's is my far-off idea."

"But for now, Pender has a metropolis of people, the widest variety of characters possible on one island."

"So this is a nice place to be."

Public meeting will focus on types of development on Mayne Island

Mayne Island residents will have the opportunity to express their views on future commercial and waterfront development at a public meeting slated for Saturday, June 16 at 1 p.m. at the school gym.

By CHRIS STEWART
Driftwood Correspondent

The meeting will be chaired by Islands Trustee Louis Vallee and Trust planner Robyn Addison will also be on hand to answer queries.

Residents are asked to air their views on future commercial and waterfront development either verbally or in writing at the meeting or by submitting suggestions beforehand by mailing them to Marie Elliot at Box 78, Mayne Island, or Vallee at 9 Wood Dale Drive.

The trustees will welcome comment on the goals and objectives outlined on the reverse side of the mail-out, recently sent to all Mayne Island residents.

"We have a draft of the Community Plan based on the original plan," trustee Elliot points out, "But we are anxious to get public input so we can determine what the islanders want. We want to know how they want the island to develop."

Under consideration, is whether islanders approve a main village commercial centre, commercial outlets in various island locations or whether they disapprove of any additional commercial development, regardless of location.

Input on tourist accommodation, plus the goals and objectives of the island's tourist industry will be encouraged as well as islanders' views on waterfront development and what priorities they want to see emphasized.

"It won't be a formal meeting," Marie emphasized. "We want people to come relaxed and ready to express their views on these matters."

A copy of the Community Plan is posted at the post office for the convenience of islanders wishing to familiarize themselves with possible island development.

Tachek schedule changed

BC Ferries' M.V. Tachek, which sails from Swartz Bay to the Southern Gulf Islands, will have a schedule change on Wednesday, June 13, 1990.

The ship's first regular 5:30 a.m. departure from Swartz Bay on Wednesday, June 13, 1990, has been cancelled so that propane and dangerous cargo can be transported to Pender, Mayne and Galiano Islands. The ship will return the dangerous cargo trucks to Vancouver Island later the same afternoon.

BC Ferries' passengers and vehicles who planned on leaving from Swartz Bay to Saturna Island on the first sailing on Wednesday will sail, instead, at 9:30 a.m. with an arrival at 11 a.m. The M.V. Tachek will resume her regular schedule at 7 a.m., after dropping off the dangerous cargo at Otter Bay, Village Bay and Montague Harbour.

Traffic leaving Saturna Island at 11 a.m. will be transferred at Village Bay to a Swartz Bay bound vessel which will leave from Village Bay at 12:20 p.m. and arrive at Swartz Bay at 1:30 p.m.

One of the dangerous cargo units being transported from Village Bay at 12 noon will include a Mayne Island Recycling Society vehicle transporting household toxic waste to Victoria for disposal.

Proposals were offered as alternatives

A leisurely discussion over a bottle of wine and cheese has sparked a heated controversy on Mayne.

It all sprung from concerns expressed by five islanders, including Paul Bondarenko, Jeremy Borsos, David Lindquist, Bob Irving and Christa Grace-Warrick when they heard consideration was being given to removing some trees on the west side of Village Bay Road, between the post office and Fernhill Road.

According to architect Bob Irving, "We had heard the rumour that someone wanted to cut those trees down, and we didn't like it. So we decided to come up with some road development proposals that would enhance traffic flow and retain the trees. We are not aligned with any local group and speak only as concerned citizens," he emphasized. "We are simply a volunteer ad hoc committee."

"When the Community Chamber invited proposals on road development at Miner's Bay we presented the two we had come up with."

His group's proposals call for implementing culverts in the ditches to provide three extra feet of pavement on either side of the road, plus room for a bike lane and sidewalk as well as a pathway.

The alternative proposal calls for a two-boulevard roadway with a central treed boulevard, utilizing the entire 66-foot road allowance. It would include sidewalk and bike lanes.

Irving said he and his road-planning friends were very surprised to evoke the reaction from Miner's Bay taxpayers expressed at the recent Community Chamber sponsored meeting. He was disappointed at the fear and seeming distrust expressed, "If we just sit back and don't do anything development will start randomly popping up everywhere causing more traffic congestion," he said.

MAYNE ISLAND Scene

Mayne Islanders were shocked this past week at the sudden passing of well known island resident Alfred Farquhar of Campbell Bay Road, who passed away in his 65th year.

By CHRIS STEWART
Driftwood Correspondent

Ambulance volunteers Barbara Vallee and Glen Rhodes responded immediately to the emergency call placed by his wife at 12:20 a.m. Friday, and worked tirelessly but unsuccessfully applying mouth to mouth resuscitation.

When Farquhar, formerly a car salesman with Wolfe-Chevrolet in Vancouver for 25 years, suffered a stroke at age 41, he and his wife Eira decided to move to their 12-acre view site overlooking Campbell Bay.

Despite the fact he was paralysed down his left side, he managed, with the use of a hydraulic jack, to raise the beams necessary for the completion of his home. He created rockery and garden beds and loved pattering on his land.

Suffering from diabetes, arteriosclerosis and three strokes, Farquhar maintained a thankful attitude for each new day. He valued the simple treasures of home, family and nature and minimized the importance of acquiring wealth.

He was a member of the Masonic Lodge and was a keen golfer prior to his stroke. He and his wife wintered for many years in Arizona.

Dr. Elroy Treit officiated at the funeral service held at the Burnaby Funeral Chapel on Wednesday, May 23. Piper Don McGinnis of the Vancouver Pipe Band played "Amazing Grace." The deceased's daughter, Rebecca, read a poem she had written at age 19 in honour of her father, with Martin Jones reading the late Helen Keller's popular poem, "The Happiest Man," a copy of which Farquhar carried in his wallet. He maintained it constituted his creed.

Besides his loving wife, Eira, he leaves one son and four daughters.

Middle school

Mayne Island teacher-parent, Barbara Vallee chaired the meeting held at the Health Centre, Friday, May 25, to discuss the feasibility of establishing a "middle school" to facilitate the needs of Grade Seven students.

On hand in addition to interested parents from Saturna, Galiano and Mayne was Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Mike Marshall and school trustees Margaret Howell of Saturna and Marg Billsten of Mayne. A follow-up meeting is slated for June 13 on Galiano.

Notices

- Warren Clark was named chairman of the Village Point Improvement District at the annual meeting held at the Health Centre. Trustees named are Ernie Smith, Bill Janyk and P. Sowerbutt.

- A double celebration is slated for Saturday, June 3, at the Dr. Bob Gray home on Dalton Drive, when they mark their 48th wedding anniversary as well as Bob's birthday.

- May McKenzie is the island's new Continuing Education director, following the resignation of Irene Garrick. May reports she already has five classes organized for the summer program, including a children's art program. She welcomes further program suggestions. Registrations can be arranged by phoning her at 539-2530. The summer schedule will be published shortly. May comes to the position following experience in public legal education in Maple Ridge.

- Constable Yves Antaya of the RCMP reports a relatively quiet May 24 weekend on Mayne, as far as police involvement is concerned. Other than a report of a lost boat and one liquor seizure, the year's first holiday weekend passed without incident.

- The incoming slate of officers for the Mayne Island Community Chamber will be named at an in-camera meeting prior to the Chamber's next regular meeting slated for June 14, according to past-president Brian Crumblehulme.

RICHARDS

It's hobnobbing with the royal Bourbon family, really. And I don't mind admitting it. Only thing is that the royal family was fired a couple of centuries ago and I've just been strolling through their memories.

Paris in the spring! Say it again! Paris in the spring; and what memories does that conjure up? Croissants and baguettes and soft cheese and so it goes on with the red wine and the pates. But that's not life that's just living. You can't stay in Paris and only find the French food. Some of the time you find you're no longer hungry.

There's where the history comes in. "Paris, loveliest city in the world." The popular song when I was first in France, and Paris, was "Paris, la plus belle ville du monde . . ." And the claim is no stretch, a city of gardens and an architect's delight, Paris boasts wide boulevards and avenues to keep its traffic moving and at the same time pays tribute to the Seine with an unending train of magnificent buildings and grounds.

If you ever feel that planning is a frustrating experience and without a future, just remember Paris, where the planners of yesteryear are proven so right.

I've strolled through Versailles, the great palace of princes. The Louvre is of itself as beautiful as the works of art it houses in its royal galleries and halls. Every rock and every stone in the French capital has probably borne the step of the great and the historied and the distinguished. And now they've borne mine.

Learning and re-learning the city has been an interesting experience. I know the highroads and the low roads and the subterranean world of the Metro. After weeks in Paris I could take on guided tours and probably get lost.

What did I see in Paris? Ask, rather, what didn't I see? I stayed with my daughter in a pleasant apartment. And how else? Almost every living soul in the city resides in an apartment because in the heart of Paris there are few houses.

Six and seven storeys high, the apartments rise above the stores and offices and mostly bear the imprint of an imaginative and an artistic designer. All the older buildings are pleasing and some of the moderns would pass in a crowd.

Unlike many apartment dwellers, we had neither dog nor cat to exercise regularly and leave their trade marks on the sidewalks.

City dwellers rely on metro, bus or footwear

On the ground floor we had no elevator, although there was one for other occupants. Had we been living in an older building we might have been up top without an elevator.

I learned that the Parisian does not rush for a taxi at all times. Some, perhaps many, do just that, but the great majority of city dwellers rely on Metro, bus or footwear.

Bus or Metro are prepaid and the traveller buys a five-franc ticket, or three francs in "carnets" of 10. The ticket opens doors and clocks through the meters on buses and no money changes hands. The cynical traveller might well suggest that the French military mind was adapted to the assessment of capacity in both cases because on train and bus the seats fold and an astronomical number of passengers can get on.

It is reminiscent of the wartime national trains, whose cars were marked, "Forty men or 12 horses." No mention is made, however, of horses on the Metro.

Novel feature of the Metro is the incidence of begging. There is quite a variety. Some will burst into song in the train and then walk through to accept offerings from passengers. The top of the train is filled by instrumentalists who play guitars or any other small instrument of choice and accompany their own music.

Most intriguing are the lecturers. The man, or woman, boards the train and breaks into a monologue in monotone. It runs something like this: "I have no work and I have been evicted from my home. My wife has left me and I have children to feed and to clothe. I am a military veteran and I have no pension." I paraphrase the appeal.

The factor which challenges the donor of moneys is that the presentation is the same whether the appeal is genuine or not.

Often easier to be cynical and annoyed

The same practice is extended to the churches on Sundays. There are usually several poor people at the church door hoping to collect a few coins. This practice, of course, is common throughout Europe and reflects the teachings of Christ. Not having been on the receiving end I have no way of knowing how strong a reflection is to be enjoyed. Indeed, it is often easier to be cynical and annoyed than to find a rapport with the beggar, who may or may not be what he would appear.

Best way I know of getting to know a city is go and stay with your daughter. And I did. No car; no motorcycle; nothing. For weeks I didn't drive and I found all kinds of places I would never have found in a car. Including the Metro.

Visiting Chartres, of the ancient cathedral and old town, I saw a protest march staged during a limited general strike. Demanding a negotiated wages settlement, the strikers paraded through the town, each segment carrying its own banners. It was a picture worth keeping and I took it.

One of the cheerful looking protesters waved: "Le poll tax!" he cried.

In truth, the protest was somewhat milder than the uproar in Britain when the poll tax was under fire, but the parallel was there.

So much for Paris, but what of the Parisians?

Mostly, almost all the Paris-bound French people I met were friendly, cheerful and helpful. In the stores there was usually a sense of humour under the surface if not bubbling. Stores clerk, police officer, bus driver, all were helpful and many spoke English. Among tourist centres I found help and assistance from patiently weary and bored personnel as well as from the smiling and cheery staffers.

I was chatting with some French people at dinner one evening. We were comparing the Pacific coast with Paris: if that be possible! Said one Parisian, "If

Islands

It seems some people have to deal with more than their share of heartache and sorrow at one time. That's how I felt when I heard that Barry Crooks' mother, Muriel (Tim), had died suddenly on May 20, 1990 at her home in Victoria. It's been only a few months since Barry's brother, David (Bucky), and his nephew, Shawn, were drowned when their boat went down during a bad storm in February.

By LYNNE PIPER
Driftwood Correspondent

Muriel lived on Saturna Island in Boot Cove for five years but had moved to Victoria after her husband, Joe, passed away. Our sympathies go out to Barry and his family of Saturna, Linda and her family of Kamloops, and Carol and her family of Victoria.

Long road to recovery

On Saturday, May 19, Andrew McLean was in a single car accident near Chase, B.C. and suffered severe injuries. Andrew was taken to Royal Inland Hospital in Kamloops in serious condition and he was put on a life support system. On Friday, May 25 he was taken off the support system and critical list and Andrew is now able to breathe on his own.

His injuries are multiple: broken pelvis, broken leg, broken ankle, broken wrist and thumb on one hand, broken nose and a hairline skull fracture, as well as much bruising and many scrapes. His pain is excruciating and while it is hard for his family to watch him suffer, the family has rallied around to help him deal with it and speed up his recovery.

Our thoughts and encouragement go out to Dave and Jean McLean, and family, and we all hope for an uncomplicated and quick recovery for Andrew. Cards and letters can be sent to Andrew at the

SATURNA ISLAND Scene

Royal Inland Hospital in Kamloops, Room #614.

Gino Carpenter has heart attack

Tuesday, May 22, Gino suffered a heart attack and was taken to Central Saanich Hospital after his condition was assessed as serious and it was apparent he required more involved care than is available on Saturna Island.

Gino is doing well and should be back on Saturna to continue his recuperation in his home environment with his family around to help and encourage him.

New home for Lou Money

The May holiday weekend was a good time for the John Money family to gather and help move Gramma Lou into her new home just steps from John and Carol's house on the original Money homestead.

For most of us, living alone is never our first choice but when the death of a lifelong spouse occurs we continue alone in familiar surroundings until the time comes when it's nicer to be closer to family and friends who are willing to help out, giving us, and the family, more peace of mind.

Jim and Lou Money came to Saturna Island many, many years ago and raised their family here — this is home to Lou even though Jim passed away quite some time ago.

Good luck and good health in your new home Lou. I am curious though - when will the familiar landmark be moved to mark your new driveway!

Addresses popping-up

Before the 911 Emergency addresses were instituted on Saturna Island, finding people's homes was sometimes difficult but never without some interesting descriptive means. Comments like: two driveways past the green telephone pole, or just opposite the bomb at the top of the hill, or a five minute drive past the arbutus trees that grow over the road, etc. etc., were common ways to let people know just where you were.

Numbers are popping up all over the island. Now one can simply say to the unfamiliar visitor: we're easy to find, we're at 105 East Point Road, or 212 Sunset Boulevard, and so on.

In any event, a fine job has been done by the Saturna Volunteer Fire Department in having an address system put into effect on the island and I urge everyone to put their property number up as soon as possible.

The numbering system is not important as far as your mail delivery is concerned (box numbers or general delivery is still to be used for your mail) but it definitely is in the case of fire or any other emergency situation that might arise.

Islands

Plaque mounted in memory of Dianysio Galiano

Dianysio Alcala Galiano explored the Straits of Georgia for the Spanish government in 1792. One hundred and ninety-eight years later, almost to the month, the Gulf Islands Historical Federation mounted a brass plaque in his memory in Montague Park.

By ALISTAIR ROSS
The Driftwood

The plaque was unveiled before a gathering of the membership and other interested islanders on a sunny evening (May 16) by president Nina Thompson of Mayne Island.

One of a series to be dedicated on each of the southern Gulf Islands, the plaque was purchased by the group with the help of the Senior Citizens Association and Heritage Trust of Victoria.

Member Joan Carolan handled the arrangements for the plaque and its siting, Fred Robson with assistants Harry Stewart and Bill Shead prepared the stone and set it in place.

At the unveiling, former Historical Society president Kathlyn Benger spoke on Galiano's place in the history of our area and told something of his life, his ship, and his death at the battle of Trafalgar.

Later, at a meeting of the society in the school library, Galiano's visit to Porlier Pass in North Galiano and his meeting with Captain Vancouver off Point

Gray were discussed by the membership. Resident Ralph Brine then outlined his research into the naming of our island by Captain Richards in the geographical surveys of 1859.

Another island, off Cape Scott, held the Galiano name previous to that time, according to Brine.

In other federation business, treasurer Marion Worrall mentioned that the new edition of the group's book, the Gulf Islands Patchwork, is now ready for sale and is available in shops throughout the islands at $12.95 a copy.

The next meeting of the society will be on Saturna Island June 14, program to be announced. The Saturna membership is planning to erect a plaque at the Saturna School in the near future. The Pender members are hoping to commemorate the hydrographic surveys of H.M.S. Egeria (1905) by identifying the bench mark at Bedwell Harbour used at that time.

The annual meeting of the society will be held in July on Mayne Island. A nominating committee is currently assembling names for a slate of officers.

GALIANO ISLAND Scene

North Galiano's only grocery store reopened on the Victoria Day weekend.

Owners Rob Adams and Anita Hansen were on hand to welcome the many delighted local people who happened to pass by and see the "open" sign. Other islanders joined them as word spread along Porlier Pass Drive.

Stock is limited at the moment but staples are available, and as the weeks pass, the couple hopes to increase the variety of items carried.

By ALISTAIR ROSS
Driftwood Correspondent

Cyclists have long found the store with its spacious deck and superlative view of Trincomali Channel, a favoured place to stop and relax with a candy bar or a refreshing and energy releasing soft drink.

The store also carries a line of T-shirts, singlets, and caps. Printed with a hand coloured design featuring the store, the wharf and a fish boat, these will no doubt be popular with the young shopper.

The Spanish Hills store was built in 1915 by the Wilson family whose house was across the road. It was run by them for many years. On September 10, 1951 the old store burnt to the ground and the present store was built by then owner, E.H. Streetan.

Craft Shops

Galiano Island now has three craft shops.

The latest addition is "Downtown" next to the corner store. It features the arts and crafts of local people Maidee Lief, Dianne Laronde, Sandy Dolf, shop is open Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

At Georgeson Bay is the second and oldest of the craft centres, the Camas Shop. Here the weaving and textile arts of Joan Carolan, the jewellery of Jim MacDonald and the weaving, jewellery and knitting of his wife Zona are to be seen, along with the sheepskin slippers of their daughter Lia — all attractively displayed in a home setting and a lovely garden. Hours — every day 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

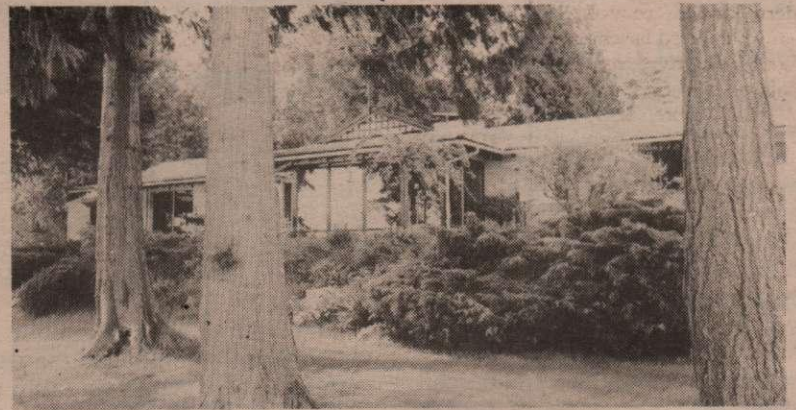

In North Galiano, Spotlight Studio celebrates its third summer. Featuring pottery, painting, photos, sewn items, cards, decorations, knitting, weaving, and dolls, plus hand-printed and hand-painted fleeces and T-shirts for all ages. The shop also carries fund raising items for St. Margaret's Church and the North Galiano Community Hall. The newest sales item is a mug with, as an applied decoration, a map of Galiano — just the thing for environmentally conscious ferry travellers. This craft shop is open on weekends or as requested whenever the owners are on the premises. A phone call 539-2294 can ensure a viewing after the drive up-island.

Not really a craft shop, the Dandelion Gallery does feature some items which fall into that category. At any rate, the gallery has much quality work (pottery, weaving and paintings) and is always a popular place to browse. Hours — Friday, Saturday and Sunday 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Birthdays

Ragna Fredrickson of Georgeson Bay, former member of the Painter's Guild, will be 89 on May 30. Ragna is now staying in the family home at Chilliwack, B.C.
