In Ometepe

Father Smith: is respected, well loved

"Ye are the salt of the earth . . . ye are the light of the world."

— MATTHEW 5

These words were spoken two millennia ago to a small group of non-conformists who, unawed by Rome's satraps and legions, declined to render to Caesar more than was due to him as a fallible man. They can still be spoken today to their successors, brave and resolute men and women from many faiths who, dismissing self, give savour and radiance to a bitter and dark world ruled by new and infinitely more powerful Caesars. Among them is Father John Robert Smith, of Ometepe Island, in Nicaragua.

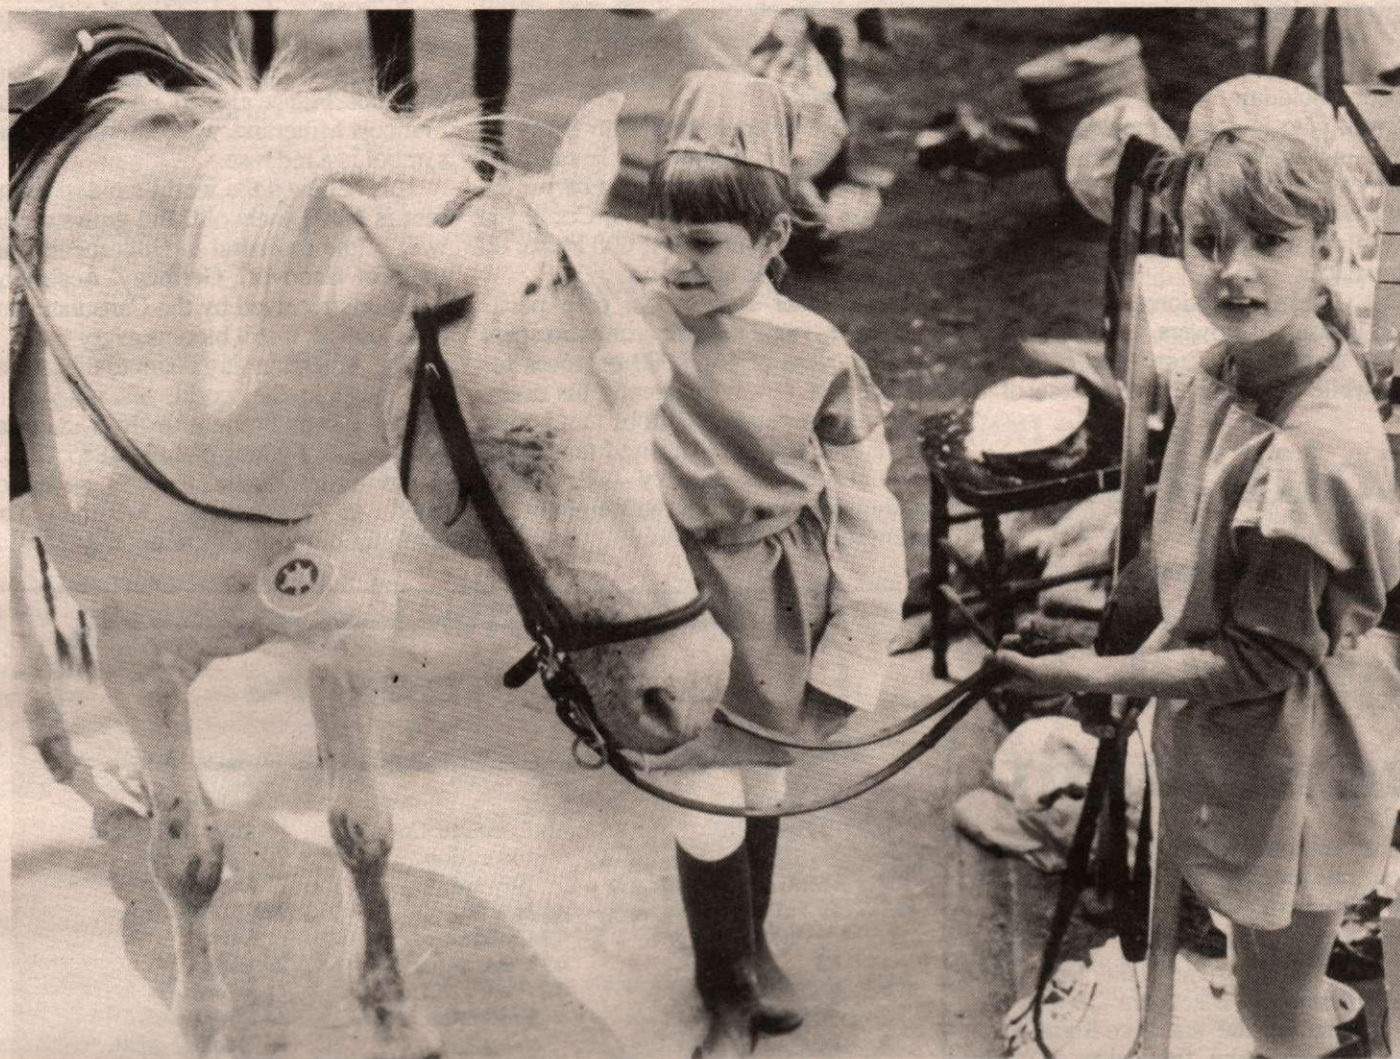

By ANDREW GIBSON
Driftwood Contributor

Father Smith is a Nova Scotian, 56 years old, who went into the church at 21, and has spent most of his time since then under the aegis of the Roman Catholic Scarborough Foreign Missions Society. He has lived for and with the poor — 22 years in the Dominican Republic, stints in Argentina and Chile saving people from the death squads during those countries' Dirty Wars, and, to date, three years in Ometepe, for which post he volunteered when his predecessor's health failed.

His biggest church, with its adjacent parish house, is in Moyogalpa, one of the island's two main towns (the other is Atagracia, the parish of Father Cuadra, who visited The Gulf Islands a year ago). He also serves seven other communities.

Visitors to Moyogalpa from the outside expect, perhaps, to find a dignified surpliced divine, but when they arrive at the parish house it is likely that they are told by the housekeeper that the padre is in La Flor, or Esquipulas. So they wait, and when a small pickup arrives with a dozen passengers clinging precariously on the bed they wait until the cloud of dust settles and then ask the driver, a baseball-capped character in shirtsleeves, if he has seen the priest. Galiano Lions are thrilled

$30,000 contribution will take pressure off Bellhouse purchase

Galiano Lions Club president Bruce Landmark has good news for his membership and for the people of Galiano Island.

Through the generosity of Lucey Prentice of North Vancouver and because of her cheque for $30,000, the Lions Club will be able to complete payment for Bellhouse Field immediately. Free of payments, interest charges, etc., the club can now concentrate on improvements to the park and to the philanthropic programmes which are its first priority.

"It's wonderful," said Landmark. "We fully expected to have to raise money for years to complete these payments."

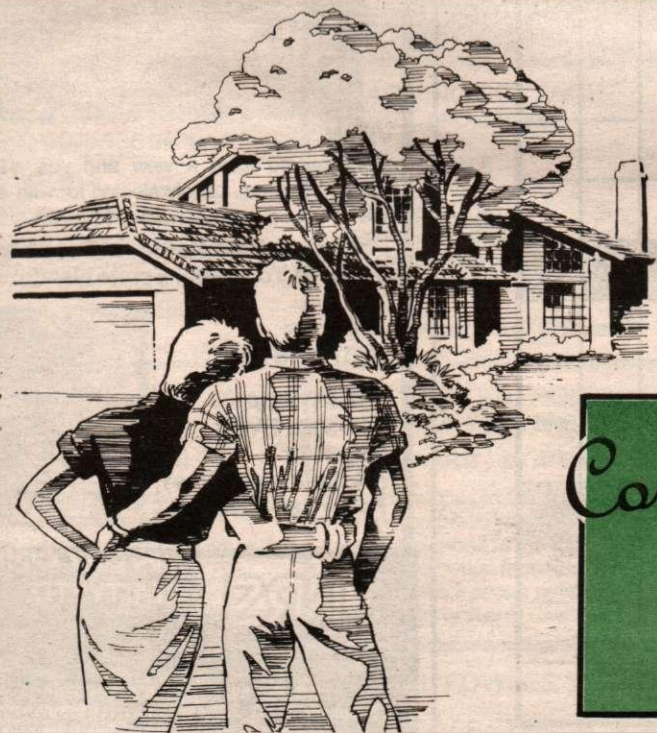

Also very happy with Mrs. Prentice's generosity were longtime Lions Fred Robson (president) and Roy Harding. These two, with their wives Margaret and Mary, joined Bruce and Barbara Landmark and "Bartering Bob" Knowles and his wife Mary at a special supper at the Pink Geranium on Wednesday evening, July 18.

Also present were former owner of the property Jessie Bellhouse and her daughter Belinda Craig from Deadman's Creek. Mrs. Bellhouse has for years allowed the Lions to use her field free of charge for their annual fiesta.

History of the rose dates back to 3,000 B.C.

Rose gardens are a favourite of gardeners in many countries around the globe. The World Federation of Rose Societies meets regularly every three years with the next (and ninth) conference scheduled for a full week beginning July 15 next year in Belfast, Northern Ireland.

At the 1988 conference, held in Sydney, Australia, some 15 Canadians attended, including Ethyl Freeman of Toronto, who is a vice president of the Canadian Garden Council.

Roses are known in history as far back as the year 3000 B.C. when the Egyptians planted them in gardens around their palaces.

The Greeks too, adored the rose and called it "king of flowers." It is they who tell the story about Eros, God of Love, who, while admiring the fragrance of a rose, was stung by a bee at work at the interior of the flower. As the story goes, Eros became so angry, he punished the rose bush by shooting a number of arrows from his bow, through its stems. These arrows forever became the rose bush's thorns.

The rose is connected with many of the famous. For example, it is said that Cleopatra used rose petals as a carpet for the floors of her palace. And, Confucius is said to have had at least 600 books on the culture of rose bushes.

Yet another story about rose petals persists. It is said the emperor Nero spent the equivalent of $500,000 on roses for one banquet. It was apparently his desire to have rose petals fall from the ceiling like rain. It was later reported that a few of the guests were unlucky — they were smothered as a result of the weight of the falling petals.

A modern-day almost-fatal event is said to have been prophesied by Nostradamus. In the 16th Century he wrote, "When the rose blooms in France, there will be blood in the Vatican."

Just three days before Pope John Paul was shot, France elected a new president, Francois Mitterand, whose Socialist party symbol is a red rose.

It is believed the world's oldest living rose is 1,000 years old, and grows on the wall of the cathedral in Hildesheim (just south of Hanover), Germany. According to reports received by the Canadian Garden Council, it still blooms every year.

The Americans lay claim to the largest rose bush in the world; but it's not in Texas! It was brought to the U.S. from Scotland as a young plant in 1885. It still grows in Mrs. Burlin Devore's garden located in Tombstone, Arizona. The diameter of its stem now exceeds 15 centimetres (six inches). Its branching head covers an area large enough to shelter some 150 people from a sudden rain shower.

According to the Canadian Garden Council, flowers rely on aroma and colour to attract insects and bees for pollination.

Rose hybridizers are currently working to introduce a stronger perfume in roses. A new classification of roses now becoming popular in England is the English garden rose — which produces large flowers throughout the season with an excellent fragrance. Two examples which you may wish to look out are "St. Cecilia," a delightful light pink, and "Graham Stuart Thomas," a bright yellow.

Coliform continues upward movement

The coliform count at Salt Spring beaches is edging upwards as summer swelters.

The latest figures from the Capital Regional District's community health service indicate only Blackburn Lake, at six, has maintained the same coliform level since readings were first taken in early June.

Stowe Lake, which began the summer with a reading of 16 fecal coliforms per 100 litres of water, has more than doubled that amount to 34.

Weston Lake, 24 in early June, now has a reading of 31.

Vesuvius Beach has doubled to 12 from six. St. Mary Lake has eased up to a nine from the original six, while Cusheon Lake rose to five from four.

Fecal coliforms indicate sewage pollution and a high reading increases the risk of gastrointestinal illness to swimmers. When the count at any particular beach exceeds an average of 200 for a 30 day period, a warning is posted on the beach.

If the count remains too high for too long, the beach could well be closed. Only two beaches of the CRD area have been posted so far this summer: Shoal Bay in Oak Bay and Ross Bay in Victoria.

For Bellhouse land

Prentice gives Galiano Lions $30,000 gift took place at the dinner with Landmark receiving Mrs. Prentice's note on behalf of the Galiano Lions' Park Society.

It will be noted the club itself cannot hold property so a separate body has to be formed within the group to receive the cheque and hold the land.

Mrs. Prentice, twin sister to Lionette Mary Knowles and a longtime resident of Southern California is very happy with the appreciation she received for her gift. She has made many people very happy.

The Galiano Singers provide a selection of harmonious entertainment

GALIANO ISLAND Scene

The Galiano Transportation Committee was formed at a recent meeting called by the Chamber of Commerce.

Attending were representatives of many existing Galiano groups from which an executive was chosen. With Bill Lucey of the Chamber of Commerce as chairman and Frank Hillier as secretary, the group will study ferry scheduling, roads, parking and transportation needs in general.

By ALISTAIR ROSS
Driftwood Correspondent

Bill Cook will be responsible for ferry scheduling; Mike Frayling for transportation requirements between the major centres and Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen; Jackie Grist is responsible for roads and parking on the island. Joan Callaghan, Fred Robson, Bill Calloway, and Harry Stewart are also members of the new group. The Galiano Transportation Committee voted to operate separately from the Chamber of Commerce.

Public toilets

Special guest at a recent executive meeting of the North Galiano Community Association was Vern Roddick, long time Outer Islands representative to the Capital Regional District.

Roddick spoke about public toilets — something badly needed on Galiano — particularly in North Galiano where no serviced conveniences of this kind exist for visitors.

Using Mayne Island and the Penders as examples of what can be done by committed citizens, Roddick suggested the setting up of a Parks and Recreation Committee with members chosen from already existing island groups. The new committee would then draw up a plan for island needs and make these known to the Capital Regional District.

As a legal entity, this group could receive and administer public lands as parks and by submitting a yearly budget to the CRD could, with that body's approval, get money to operate the parks and provide sanitary facilities along with funds for servicing them.

The public conveniences and barbecue pavilion at Diner Bay on Mayne Island were cited as good examples of what a parks and recreation commission can achieve, according to Roddick.

The money required for the parks and sanitary facilities would be collected by the CRD through general taxation.

Roddick estimated the budget of a Galiano group would not exceed $9,500 a year — about $10 a year per household. If a group were formed on Galiano and if it established and operated minimal facilities such as sanitary conveniences at two or three sites on the island, the requirement for funds would, of course, be much less.

Insurance coverage for approved sites and projects is the responsibility of the CRD.

Galiano people wishing more information on these matters should phone Roddick at 629-3308 or contact the writer or other members of the North Galiano Community Association executive.

Riding show

The sun shone brightly on Saturday, July 14, the day of the "Maple Styrup" Riding Club's eighth annual horse show.

Host and organizer, Anny Scoones, allowed herself a nervous smile as the eager young participants arrived with their parents and beautifully groomed faithful friends (the horses) appeared in the assembly paddock.

Part two of this year's show began — some classes were held the previous evening, with adults and near-adult friends assisting, all went smoothly and the 47 participants proved their horsemanship in about a dozen fun events.

In a colourful programme illustrated by youthful artists Ceder Bill Bowers, Laihy Buitery, and Arissa Forest, Anny Stated her aims: "to encourage riders to

Our island life is richer for Anny and John's efforts. It is hoped the eighth "Maple Styrup Show" will be followed by the ninth and tenth. This is a tradition worth keeping.

This year's program was varied by a rendering of "Surrey with the Fringe on Top" by the Galiano Singers and a masterful display of horsemanship and dressage by Wolfgang Brunnsweiser of Victoria. He worked with Anny's four year old horse, Yuri.

About people

The Jack Silveys are fishermen and because of seasonal openings are seldom on hand for North Galiano's July First Jamboree. However, Jack and Jeannie are longtime North Galiano residents and have their community very much at heart.

A surprise for the Jamboree organizers this year was a box of ballpoint pens printed with "North Galiano Jamboree, July 1st," which were donated by the Silveys to be distributed free to Jamboree visitors.

The Silveys remember back 10 years to the first jamboree when Jeannie's mother and father, Devina and Harry Baines, rode in Ken Allen's antique car to their place of honour at the celebration.

Another part of this family has reason for celebration with the arrival of Amanda (June 26), first child for Ben and Cathy Maberly of Whaler Bay and first grandchild for Lloyd and Betsy Baines of Georgia Hills. Little Amanda was seen at the Swartz Bay ferry terminal recently with her mother, grandmother and adoring great aunt Tillie Baines, whose camera was clicking.

Amanda will be one of the new arrivals to receive a baby quilt when the needle guild of St. Margaret's church has its quilt show and presentations in the gardens of Hall and Betty Tingley on Saturday next, July 28, 2 to 4 p.m.

Provincial lottery ticket boosts retirement fund

A Galiano couple got a boost on their retirement fund recently.

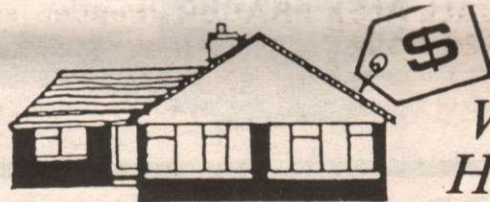

Claire Wickens bought a Provincial lottery ticket. When she scratched the bonus, three motorboats appeared.

The part-time school bus driver went looking for husband Brian to share the news and to ask him what they should do.

He works for highway maintenance and she had to travel eight miles to find him.

They decided to take the money, $15,000, not the boat and added it to their retirement fund.

"We're building our own pension plan so this windfall will really help," said the excited Wickens.

Father undertakes large projects with little funding

Father Smith laughs, identifies himself, and, motioning them to seats in the patio, asks them to wait while he deals with the parishioners inevitably waiting for him in connection with some project or another.

Some time later he returns to the now bemused visitors, who have probably never seen such a busy person. While they talk, a succession of people come by, greet the padre, nod courteously to the strangers, and drift away. The parish house, under its genial laid-back occupant, is obviously (with the church itself) the very centre of the community.

The obvious respect and affection in which he is held is beyond that given to the office — it is the appreciation of the people of Ometepe for this talented and selfless man, who has chosen to live an arduous and austere life with them.

Father Smith knows all about disasters, man-made and natural. He laboured for years to help overcome the disastrous effects of the Dominican Republic's 1979 Hurricane David. Then, at the end of 1987, Nicaragua was cruelly battered; Ometepe was spared the worst, but so much topsoil was washed down its volcanic slopes into the lake that this wholly agricultural island was forced, if there was to be enough food to stay alive, to buy fertilizer. Following the bottom line economics of scarcity, this soon cost $19.65 a bag. As a proportion of income that might be $1500 in Canada.

To save the island from the very real threat of famine, the Canadian Consulate in Nicaragua and the Canadian churches, at the padre's urging, arranged to buy 80 tons of fertilizer. But it was not to be a gift to the farmers — they would pay for it later in the proceeds from their crops, and this money would go into the fund for a new high school.

Father Smith has spent his life doing big things with small financial resources

All went according to plan. The farmers were as good as their word, and now the island not only has an adequate store of basic supplies, but the school fund has grown a little way towards what is needed, which, ridiculously little in our terms, is $16,000 for a six-room school (there is presently only one school building in Moyogalpa, which is used in shifts by a school population, including adults, which has burgeoned under the former government's literacy programs).

Father Smith has spent his life doing big things with small financial resources, and the above example indicates his approach. He once explained to my wife and me his plans for an agricultural school in Ometepe, a project dear to his heart. But to our query about sources of outside funding, he replied that it was premature; then with a stick he marked on the dusty ground of the site a square — one side for national government backing, one for the local government, one for public enthusiasm and last, funds from any source (it may be noted that the Gulf Islands-Ometepe Water Project has enjoyed this support. Ron Pither, who initiated the project, is going to Ometepe to finalize it).

The children are front and centre in his plans. Pure water is now stopping them from dying. The danger of famine has receded. The hospital and the clinics are better stocked, largely because of a there are pluses — they have good friends, like Father Smith, and the children are bright and charming.

If you would like to make a contribution to the bus or uniform fund, it can be earmarked for the purpose, and sent to Father John Robert Smith, c/o Scarborough Foreign Missions Society, 2685 Kingston Rd., Scarborough, Ont. M1M 1M4. A receipt will be issued.

Father Smith's school bus fund of $1,500 will take all students living in the outskirts to and from school for a total of two years.

project by our U.S. sister island of Bainbridge, to which our own doctors have contributed. And the time is coming when they will have adequate school buildings — Bainbridge Island is involved in this. But children are deprived of school for other reasons than a lack of buildings.

They have to get there, and for those secondary school pupils who live in the smaller communities strung out along the rough island roads, far from the school at Moyogalpa, the only way is by the private bus. The fare is pennies, but this is an almost cashless society, and many families are quite unable to pay. So their children could be hobbled for life with only a rudimentary education. So Father Smith has his school bus fund; $1,500 will take all of the outside students to and from school for two years.

Then there is the matter of school uniforms. These are very simple — white shirts, blue skirts or pants, but many families simply can't afford to buy them. To be sure, the children can attend without the uniforms, but the parents are ashamed to send them, and the children are ashamed to go. What is needed, of course, are sewing machines, patterns and instructors, from which would result upwardly mobile children.

From all of the foregoing it will be seen that to Father Smith each dollar is a seed which, whether it is used to give school children transportation, clothes or the school itself, will one day give Nicaragua the best possible harvest. The country today is like a family which has been robbed and physically assaulted for years, and now lives in a shack with broken windows, broken appliances, and only a few days' food in the pantry. RICHARDS

There's something about ferries that fazes the visitor. It isn't just the fear of missing a boat but the terror of the deep. I wrote of the experience of a sister-in-law who tried to leave the Fulford ferry from the wrong end some years ago and last week a visitor recalled her first ferry trip here some years ago.

All she knew for sure was that she was going on a ferry. And that was enough to set all the nervous system a-quiver. Before leaving the house she surreptitiously dosed herself with seasickness pills. We boarded the Salt Spring Queen and she waited in fear and trembling.

Finally she could contain her fears no longer and asked, "When do we start?"

It was in the days of yore and her fellow passengers in the car looked at her in amazement. We were half-way to Swartz Bay.

Phone now: Pay later

Made any good phone calls lately?

I made two in close succession and I found I had two different sets of rules. The first was at Heath Row, London's busy gateway to Britain. I wanted to leave a message and I found a phone without effort. I was particularly happy to find that it was a credit card phone. You insert your plastic identity and the call is charged automatically to your account.

I read the instructions and put in my card just like it said. The call was promptly connected and I flew home. Once in Vancouver I wanted to arrange transportation and, once again, I discovered a credit card phone.

Now, I have to admit that I just don't have what it takes to use electronic equipment the way it was intended to be used when the original designer originally designed it. He may have been thinking of anything and anybody when he put it into operation but he was sure not thinking of me.

I blew it. Each time I tried to make a call I met the operator who wanted some cash on the line. I tried to tell her that she was not supposed to want money, but to no avail. It was fairly clear, even to me, that I was doing something wrong, but I never learned what was wrong.

When I called the B.C. Tel I met with concern and courtesy but no answers. I was told, nevertheless, that if anyone else had experienced similar problems with credit cards they would like to know.

Does anyone have the same kind of horror story? Like being hung up without a good line of credit? If you've had the same problem, let's hear from you! Or if you've used your card without incident.

And I'd paid my bill, so that had nothing to do with it!

The way we were

In 1941, days after Pearl Harbour, I first set foot on Canadian soil. In 1948, three years after the end of the Second War, I returned to British Columbia to live. On both occasions I passed through la belle province and heard people, Canadian people, talking French. I wasn't freaked out. Canada, I was told in an English school, is bilingual.

For some 40 years I have lived here on the west coast, speaking a smattering of French when the occasion arises and a form of European English when it doesn't.

I came here because I wanted to live here. I wanted to live here, in Canada; a Canada that was bilingual and each of us had the privilege of living largely as we wished as long as we paid our taxes. I still like it that way, bilingualism and all.

I don't want a shattered country, broken up on the embittered and absurd battlefield of language. All of us, born here in this land, or imported, came into a land of dual language, dual customs, dual philosophies and nothing is new or foreign to us. Only those who are singularly shortsighted are prepared to abandon the entire country for the sake of a discharge of emotional snot from a misguided nationalistic sneeze.

I still look to a Canada e mari usque ad mare, diverse in language as in people, colourful in that diversity. I want no part of a dissected nation, this part going to another nation and that part forming a kind of Canadian Balkans.

But I don't want to risk an entire country rather than negotiating our differences together. Maybe we should all try to remember that this is a land well worth working for. At least, that's the way I see it.

Friday the 13th brings lots of first aid action

Here we are, a third of the summer holidays already gone, and it's hot out. I don't know about elsewhere, but on Saturna the thermometer reached 89 degrees F. Luckily, the hay was already in.

By JACQUES CAMPBELL
Driftwood Correspondent

I guess by now you've heard that all who took the First Aid course have successfully completed the exams. I hope those who are recipients of First Aid care appreciate the extensive efforts that have gone into the training.

Well, now, back to First Aid. In the wee hours of the morning there was a 911 call. Harvey and Barb were both on call, and were able to respond quickly. This time it was a suspected case of food poisoning which meant another trip for the two ambulance attendants and the water taxi from Salt Spring. What a night!

Gaggle of Geese

Has anyone noticed the increased Canada Goose population on Saturna. I remember how exciting it used to be, (when I was growing up here on Saturna) to hear the gaggle of geese heading north or south.

We would look up in amazement to see their flight formation. That's the closest I ever got to a Canada Goose until the last few years. Now, from a farmer's perspective the geese have reached pest proportions and are quite successfully wiping out one of our pastures. The mega-gaggle, in residence at Taylor Point, has more than 100 birds, and they never seem to go north or south!

SATURNA ISLAND NEWS

Friday the 13th was a busy night for First Aid personnel. First off, Harvey was delivered a patient who had been in a single car accident. The water taxi with two ambulance attendants was called. Harvey made the patient as comfortable as possible and turned her over to the ambulance attendants.

I don't know the exact details of this accident, however every accident should bring up some safety concerns. I wonder how many people take the time to do up their seat belts on Saturna. Somehow, I think islanders consider themselves immune to accidents while on island. Not so!

Also, you cannot always prevent an intoxicated person from driving, but you never have to be a passenger! It's summer! Take time to be careful and have a good time.

Bridal shower

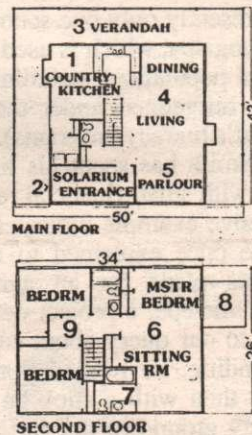

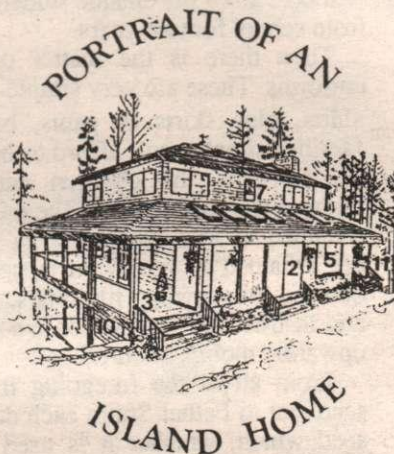

By the time you read this Joy Beaumont will have hosted a bridal shower for Cindy Hogg.

I'd say you are pretty much a newcomer if you don't know who Cindy is. Saturna was home to Cindy for all those years her father, Don Hogg, was the road foreman. While here, Cindy was never far from her companions Erin Lawson (Boser) and Leah Smith.

Cindy and Jimmy Money will be married in Parksville on August 4. Congratulations!

(Of course, Jimmy grew up on Saturna, too! His grandparents, Jim and Lou came to the island in the spring of 1945. The Moneys have well established roots here.)

Til next time....

PROVINCIAL ROUNDUP

Business info report

Economic Development Minister Stan Hagen released a report last week on access to business information such as business development loans and loan guarantees involving public funds.

The report, prepared by a group of business, legal and policy experts, recommends that relevant information be placed into three categories.

The first category would contain information that would be automatically released, including a project description, the purpose of the loan, the total cost of the project, and the amount and type of assistance.

The second category would contain information on the benefits the company expects to derive from the project and the terms of the loan agreement. This information would, as a rule, be released, but parts could be withheld if their release would compromise a firm's competitive advantage.

Information included in the third category such as detailed marketing and financial information provided by the company should remain confidential, according to the report.

I have been a small business person and I know there is some information you wouldn't want your competitors to know. However, being in government, I strongly believe in the public's right to know," Hagen said.

He added his ministry is evaluating the report and developing policies for implementation later this year.

Urban tree bill

A private member's bill "to protect urban mature trees from the development axe" was introduced in the legislature last week by NDP urban development critic Elizabeth Cull.

If enacted, an unlikely possibility for a private member's bill, the legislation would restore to municipalities the power to regulate the cutting of mature trees, a power removed from them in 1983.

"This bill recognizes that urban trees contribute as much to neighbourhood quality of life as the type and size and scale of buildings, something already to community regulation through zoning bylaws," Cull said.

Grace declares war

Grace McCarthy, former cabinet minister and now backbencher, has urged legislators from other western provinces to join in a war on the national debt.

In a letter to all members of Alberta's, Saskatchewan's and Manitoba's legislatures, McCarthy said they should join her in making local suggestions on "how the West can save Canada from high interest rates and crushing debts.

"At stake is the future economic security of our nation and our safety net which Canadians are at the moment erroneously taking for granted," McCarthy said.

Kitimat port study

The Kitimat-Terrace Port Committee has chosen Sandwell Inc. as consultant for the Kitimat Port feasibility study, Northern development Minister Dave Parker announced last week.

Phase one of the study is scheduled for completion by the end of September and will include an accompanying report and market assessment.

Phase two, will be undertaken after Phase one is approved and will include a preliminary engineering, environmental and socio-economic impact assessment. Completion of this phase is scheduled for December 1990.

Parker said Sandwell is recognized as one of the best marine planning and designing specialists in the world.

Polluters beware

Perpetrators of designated environmental offences such as damaging or destroying wildlife habitat, intentional environmental damage and illegal application or disposal of pesticides, will be charged for the cost of the investigation, Russ Fraser, acting attorney general, said last week.

"The Crown can often incur substantial costs when investigating and prosecuting offences under some provincial environment statutes," Fraser said.

It is only fair that those individuals or corporations convicted of polluting the environment should not only be fined, but also should pay for investigative and witness costs associated with their actions," the minister added.

Ministry announces hike in assistance payments

Income assistance is increasing in British Columbia.

The ministry of social services announced rate hikes for income assistance, last week. Some 212,000 people across the province will be affected by the rise. Effective August 1, the increases will add $22.3 million to the cost of the program for the remainder of this year.

Support allowances go up 2.8 per cent while variable shelter costs increase between 4.7 per cent and 6.1 per cent, ac-ording to the size of the family involved.

School start-up allowances go to $35 from $31 for children ages 6 to 11 years. For children aged 12 or older, the rate goes to $50 from the current $47.

According to the ministry, "Income assistance rates supplement other sources of family income such as federal tax credits, family allowance payments, partial earnings through the earnings exemption program, and family maintenance payments."
