Yellow Dog turns Mayne into Hollywood North

By GRAEME THOMPSON
Driftwood Staff

Mayne Island has been hit by Hollywood—and islanders love it.

More than 100 movie people are filling island accommodation, eating in island restaurants and making use of island facilities. In addition, islanders have been working on the set, acting as extras or just watching how movies are made.

Called The Yellow Dog, the film was written and is directed by Philip Borsos, who directed Grey Fox, and who owns a farm on Mayne Island. The story is a simple family adventure film set in the present day. An 11-year-old boy is out sailing with his father when a storm hits. The boy and his pet dog are set adrift in a dinghy and must survive in the wilderness of the Pacific northwest until they are rescued.

Most of the film is being shot on Mayne Island, which has been renamed Saturna. The shipwreck will be filmed in Tofino and the wilderness scenes will be shot near Hope. Almost all of the cast and crew come from Vancouver and Los Angeles, but islanders have been able to take part too.

Local resident and Mayne Island Little Theatre member May McKenzie was hired as the extras casting assistant for the show.

"I cast all the extras," she said, "what is known as background."

Some 40 to 50 islanders have so far been "called up" to walk by, stand around or drive past a scene.

This may be their Warholian 15 minutes of fame. Some are more fortunate.

"A few people will travel with the show," McKenzie said. "A few of the local extras will be what is known as continuity extras. A few faces from here will have to go to Tofino to be in the crowd scenes there."

And the whole island has been invited to participate in one big crowd scene—the homecoming scene after the boy is found and brought home safely. Director Borsos is taking the unusual step of donating $10,000 to the island as payment for this scene.

"They didn't want it to be an accounting nightmare," McKenzie said. "He left it to me to deal with. Every person who comes gets their share. They write on a paper what cause they would like to benefit. It has to be a bona fide island charity or group."

The money will then be prorated among the chosen charities.

"They had $10,000 for the scene. It's not much if they pay everyone $9 an hour, but this way, the community reaps the benefit," McKenzie said.

The community is reaping more benefits than this. As well as the sheer fun of watching the filming and taking part, many islanders have benefited from the arrival of

Seven candidates meet with critical islanders

A standing-room-only crowd of critical islanders gave candidates no quarter during the federal all-candidates' forum held Friday at the Ganges Activity Centre.

Seven of the eight candidates were present at the forum, sponsored by the Salt Spring Island Community Planning Association. Canada Party candidate Arleigh Rolind of Kelowna sent apologies and the explanation that she was recently nominated to give the Canada Party enough candidates to qualify as a national party.

The crowd reserved their warmest welcoming applause for incumbent New Democrat Lynn Hunter, Salt Spring resident and Reform Party candidate Jack Frazer and National Party candidate Judith Rayburn. Also present were independent Bob Ward, Liberal Alex Phillips, Conservative Marilyn Loveless and Natural Law candidate Andy Guest.

Moderator Grace Byrne politely but firmly kept candidates in line while timer Gail Beattie kept a finger on the stopwatch to control overly verbose speakers.

In her speech, Rayburn characterized the Reform Party as "Tories in a hurry"; Phillips touted the Liberals' job creation program; Hunter criticized values which divide people into rich and poor;

Ward focused almost entirely on the marine shipbuilding industry; Loveless advocated control of the deficit; Guest presented natural law as growing "a perfect lotus in a muddy field;" and Fraser summarized his support of a balanced budget, political reform and tougher laws. Following their seven-minute speeches, candidates were quizzed about jobs, campaign contributions, control of the deficit, the environment and threatened cutbacks to Canada's social safety net. Some of the questions and replies are reprinted below:

How would you handle cost overruns by shipbuilding companies filling federal contracts?

Ward: Cancel orders and pay no cancellation penalty.

State position on job retraining and environmental concerns.

Hunter: Focus on what we really value—homes and families—above lifestyles which harm the environment. "If we don't get this right, we're all going to be toast, folks."

Individuals pay 90 per cent of all income tax while corporations pay 10 per cent. How much of your campaign money comes from corporations?

Frazer: 95 per cent or more from party members, less than five per cent from corporate donors.

Rayburn: Listed corporate donors who have contributed to the Reform Party.

Phillips: No contributions from any corporation so far.

Loveless: Campaign financed by $10 to $100 donations from friends/neighbours.

Rayburn: National Party accepts no donations from corporations, unions and lobby groups.

Hunter: One individual donated $4 million to National Party. NDP gets eight per cent of budget from labour, remainder from individuals.

Guest: Self-financed, no dona-the 80-plus cast and crew. They stay in hotels, bed and breakfasts and private homes. They eat in local restaurants. They shop in local shops. Nearly every business on the island has been affected by this end-of-season bonus.

Local artists and bed and breakfast owners Don Grant and Wendy Faith have enjoyed having a film made on the island.

"It's a really good learning experience," Grant said. "You get a different perspective of movies."

"You know the telephone booth has been put there. Everything you see on the screen is controlled. The bus driving by. The cars driving by. Nothing is random. Everything is controlled."

"Shooting down the hill (the main street of Miner's Bay), every person from the top to the bottom has been told to do something."

Grant was in one scene, driving a truck. He had to drive the truck past the camera more than 13 times.

Faith has been working with the painters for six weeks. She has been learning about the techniques used in making something brand-new look like it's been there for 50 years.

"It's really fun," she said. "there's a whole vocabulary in movie-painting: aging it down, breaking it down. If they really want it to look really old they say 'kill it.'"

Aging involves layers and layers of paints and other substances — shellac, latex and polyfiller mixed together — put on in a precise combination and with all sorts of tools. The movie painters have had to age five whole buildings, benches, fences, a Volvo and even a federal fisheries dock. The last took some time to negotiate — but the dock will be repainted to federal red afterwards.

Speed is important on the movie set — everything must be done as quickly as possible, and then faster. But it has to be right. Sometimes the director decides after all the work is done that an object is the wrong size or the wrong colour. The whole thing must be started again. "The boat shed was done two times before they got it right," Faith said. "That's part of what happens. That's part of the professionalism of the industry."

"And when they're done," Grant added, "everything goes back exactly like it was before."

"It's been a double buzz," Faith said. "Learning new ways of doing things and having people stay in our bed and breakfast."

Most islanders have found the movie experience to be a pleasant one. Even if they derive no direct benefit from the filming, the off-islanders are pleasant and hard-working and have made a special effort not to feel like invaders.

"There are no rough edges," one islander said. "There are no rowdy parties . . . They are working people."

They have caused a few traffic jams in the village and have experienced the same hassles from B.C. Ferries that everyone else does, she said, and one of the problems they have found is the noise from the number of planes flying overhead.

"They are appreciative of everything. They're coming from L.A. for God's sake. To them this is paradise."

Filming in paradise continues until the end of the month.

FORUM: Federal candidates field questions from residents

tions. Invited audience to donate.
In the United Kingdom, former prime minister Thatcher's program to cut the deficit resulted in a massive demand on social programs. How should the deficit be cut?

Ward: Reform plan to cut the deficit depends on three per cent growth, which we don't have, so the deficit cannot be cut.

Hunter: Each unemployed worker costs $17,400. We need an economy that values people's work instead of taxing them out of business and not fairly taxing corporations.

Frazer: It costs $75,000 in government infrastructure for the government to create a $35,000 job.

Rayburn: Will raise more taxes by closing tax haven loopholes, increasing the number of audits on large foreign corporations and ensuring corporations pay a fair share of tax.

Neither Reform Party nor Conservative candidates mentioned the environment in their speech. Which has priority, environment or economic growth?

Loveless: On Saanich Peninsula, there are new, environmentally friendly industries such as Thebis International. Trade is Canada's lifeline for creating jobs. "The best job policy for Canada is a strong trade policy."

Phillips: Thebis International received a $90,000 federal grant to make adult tricycles.

Frazer: Environmental protection is Reform Party priority.

Hunter: Both have priority. Government should be directing business, insisting our resources are used to create jobs for our people.

Rayburn: Create jobs through processing our own resources and exporting value-added products. Stop lending out our money to fund projects in other countries.

Ward: Must keep environment in balance with the overall impact of decisions on society.

How would your party set salaries, pensions and perks for senators and MPs?

Rayburn: Take away MPs' rights to set their own pensions, salaries and perks. MPs should only collect pensions at age 65 from the Canada Pension Plan.

Frazer: "It seems Mr. Hurtig (National Party leader) has been reading the Reform Party platform."

Hunter: The Reform Party has read (NDP leader) Audrey McLaughlin's 1992 speech which proposed an independent panel to set salaries, etc. Politics and politicians have been smeared by being seen to set their own fat pension plans and salaries yet there are good people serving in all parties. The Senate should be abolished. (Audience cheers.)

Loveless: Thanked Hunter for remarks defending good politicians. Agreed those elected to office should not be treated differently from those they represent. Sometimes thinks Senate should be abolished but wondered what would replace it to act as a check on government.

Phillips: End double dipping — receipt of pension while holding another job — and end payment of full pensions before the standard retirement age.

Guest: Would eliminate party system and invite all parties to join in government to pool ideas. Senators should be elected for a two-year term.

Ward: Senate has become a buy-off for people who supported the ruling party. Senators should be elected with equal representation from each province.

Asked about logging in Clayoquot — a provincial issue — all candidates said they were opposed to clear-cutting in the area. "Clear-cutting is the most efficient way of turning a forest into a pool of capital," Rayburn remarked.

Will you guarantee no cuts to the social safety net?

Ward: No guarantees — country is in a mess and we're in over our heads.

Asked about logging in Clayoquot — a provincial issue — all candidates said they were opposed to clear-cutting in the area.

Phillips: Will protect accessibility for those who need help.

Loveless: Health care will not be cut — we have to take the money we have and spend smarter.

Guest: No.

Hunter: Yes.

Frazer: Will maintain medicare — the safety net will not survive if Canada's economy collapses.

Rayburn: No cuts to medicare or pensions.

How will the NDP make job creation programs work? Do banks pay taxes on the interest they collect?

Hunter: Job creation plan will work — details available in policy booklet.

Ward: Bank profits are at a record level, system is terrible.

Would you increase federal pension survivor's benefits to 60 from the current 50 per cent?

Guest: No party policy but favour 100 per cent to survivors.

Frazer: 50 per cent.

Hunter: Favour 60 per cent.

How would you address the problem of battered women?

Frazer: Offenders should be punished.

Hunter: Women should be treated as equals in all areas to address an imbalance in society.

Rayburn: Outlaw handguns, affirm equal opportunities for women.

Loveless: This is a human issue, not a women's issue, and the answer is more education, treatment of deviant behaviour, early intervention and tougher measures to protect the public against offenders.

Are you in favour of a Triple-E Senate?

Ward, Guest and Frazer said yes; Phillips and Loveless said "personally yes"; Hunter said no; and Rayburn advocated a referendum to decide the issue.

Why should we believe politicians?

Loveless: Kim Campbell is taking Conservative Party in a new direction. Had joined the Reform Party a year ago — the bureaucracy is top-heavy.

Phillips: Liberal Party has changed and has new, young educated candidates. Chretien believes in teamwork.

Hunter: "I certainly have kept my promises to the people of Saanich-Gulf Islands." Suggested voters choose on the basis of the individual rather than voting along party lines.

Frazer: Chretien has been selecting candidates over constituency choices; Campbell has been PM for four months and not eliminated party discipline.

What is your stand on NAFTA?

Hunter: The NDP have fought NAFTA, which will put the economic future of the country in the hands of big business.

Rayburn: Opposed. Will also abrogate Free Trade Agreement.

Ward: NAFTA will bring doom and gloom.

Frazer: Free trade helps some businesses, are pluses and minuses to both free trade and NAFTA.

Loveless: We need trade agreements to be strong and help Canadians.

What about candidate accountability?

Phillips: Will do my best after election.

Loveless: "I'm a dead honest person that will give you the straight goods."

State position on equality for handicapped, gays, lesbians and women.

Guest: Will elevate the level of collective consciousness to end discrimination and racism.

Ward: Believe in equal rights for all but no special privileges. Note there are 600 First Nations tribes and fears they will become 600 "little countries" within Canada.

Rayburn, Frazer, Hunter, Loveless and Phillips all spoke in favour of universal equality.

Humour value

If grins were votes, the winner in the Saanich-Gulf Islands riding on October 25 would be Natural Law candidate Andy Guest.

Guest was clearly the top crowd-pleaser at Friday's federal all-candidates' forum in Ganges. While other candidates talked about a depressing reality of tough times, government reform, poverty and belt-tightening, Guest presented the kind of platform usually offered by fairy godmothers.

The Natural Law party promises to wipe out the deficit while simultaneously eliminating the GST, lowering taxes, eliminating crime and improving health. Under the beneficent guidance of Natural Law, we would all enjoy prosperity, happiness and health.

Grins blossomed through the crowd as Guest explained how 10,000 yogic flyers would flood the country with contentment and creativity, eliminating crime and invigorating the country's economy.

No one laughed. Everyone listened politely and even rewarded Guest with an enthusiastic round of applause at the end of his speech.

But the ensuing question period — during which no queries were directed to Guest and no questions were asked about the Natural Law Party's unusual platform — showed the majority of listeners were not giving the party any serious consideration.

We're delighted by the good sense of Salt Spring residents.

For many, Guest's presentation served the same function once filled by the Rhinoceros Party. The party's promises provided comic relief and a little fun during a process which is always serious and often acrimonious.

But unlike the Rhinoceros Party, the Natural Law Party claims to be a serious contender for the government of Canada — running 231 candidates in constituencies across Canada.

However, while Canadians are smiling at Natural Party antics, they might also want to remember that this party has a tenuous grasp of multi-party democracy. Candidate Guest says he was asked to run. He attended a meeting, held in Vancouver, of all B.C. Natural Law candidates and was guided through the requirements for nomination. (Most political parties choose their candidates through nomination meetings and member votes at the constituency level).

The speech Guest read at the all-candidates meeting was scripted by the national party headquarters and distributed to candidates, a procedure which makes the party sound suspiciously like it is manipulating puppets on very short strings in ridings all across Canada.

And while the Natural Law party is promising Canadians "Perfect Government," its platform outlines such measures as abolishing the multi-party system and reliance on selected experts to govern the country.

Who would those experts be? Who would choose them? One candidate could be Dr. Neil Paterson, the party leader whose doctorate is a degree in the Science of Creative Intelligence from Maharishi European Research University in Switzerland — a piece of information somehow missing from the party's official pamphlet bearing Paterson's photo, name and title.

We think this combination of slick promises, misleading information and central control is a candy coated bid for power — made in the hope that some disillusioned Canadian voters will seize any proffered solution.

So chuckle — and cast your vote elsewhere. Remember, volcanoes, hurricanes and tidal waves are all creations of "perfect" nature.

Sinister

To the Editor,

So, our high school principal characterizes the student protest for Clayoquot Sound as disrespectful. Interesting! Now, how would one look at the action of MacMillan Bloedel? It is they who have funded the SHARE Groups and had its leadership trained by one Ron Arnold, a member of the "Wise Use Group" in the U.S.A.

No wonder the rank and file of loggers in SHARE groups are paralysed in fear. They are hemmed-in by the company, the Forest Alliance of B.C. with a sweetheart like Jack Munro in its ranks — the Super Bully, and the leadership of SHARE Groups.

It is beyond me how a company like MacBlo can be so stupid as to enlist a neo-fascist group to help them out. Here are some of the views of the Wise Use Group, as contained in a 60-page paper prepared in 1991 by Claude Emery, political and social affairs division, research branch, Library of Parliament in Ottawa.

• That continued use of pesticides and agri-chemicals by the free enterprise system would be facilitated by any constitutional changes that would further weaken the central government of Canada.

• That scientific evidence regarding health risks of pesticides is false and exaggerated.

• That the Soviets are financing the environmental party (Greens) in West Germany.

• That investigators of the Union Carbide Bhopal chemical explosion should explore the possibility of another Soviet mass murder.

• That there are market solutions to every problem.

Newsweek, U.S. News & World

Charge against protesters is hold-over from Middle Ages

By ANDREW GIBSON

I know of no method to secure the repeal of bad or obnoxious laws to effective as their stringent execution.

— Ulysses S. Grant

Those citizens of Victoria who chanced to pass the courthouse at 10 o'clock on the sunny morning of August 30, 1993, could have had no doubt that something was up. Hundreds of people were alternately listening to and cheering speakers, street theatre featured a mock trial with caged prisoners, and, if more proof were needed, there were the media with their camcorders and roving mikes.

One word — Clayoquot — dominated the banners and signs, for this was the scheduled time for the court appearance of the first of those hundreds who had been arrested throughout the summer for impeding the logging of that ancient Vancouver rainforest.

Fifty-one of them were now being checked in to the fourth-floor courtroom, having made their way through another supportive crowd packing the corridors. The gatherings, both inside and out, were peaceful, polite, respectful of the process now unfolding — but determined.

By 11:15 the defendants had been admitted, together with the dozen or so spectators, all that could be accommodated in the small room. The equipment was ready to show the incriminating videos, the prisoners — the three grandmothers who had now been incarcerated for a month in five jails — were in the prisoners' box (but not shackled this time).

The robed lawyers and the court officers were in their places. The order to stand heralded the approach of the judge. We stood. He sat. We sat. The trial was under way.

Clearly, this was no ordinary trial. Everybody in the courtroom was aware that a majority of the people of British Columbia believe that the forest industry and the foolish government that condoned its depredations are really the ones in the dock, that present logging methods are clearcutting both the forests and the jobs they should generate, and that if we let it continue, our children and their children will curse us for leaving them only museum remnants of their inheritance.

Fifty-one were now being checked in to the courtroom, having made their way through another supportive crowd packing the corridors.

Real respect for the law made ludicrous the crown's contention that these intelligent, well-behaved defendants were criminals.

In such a circumstance it might have seemed advisable to get the sorry spectacle over with quickly, but the decision to charge these several hundred people with the very serious charge of criminal contempt precluded any summary incarceration or financial hammering without due process. Each was entitled to a lawyer, and a properly prepared defence, but this having been impossible, most of the court time was taken up by arguments that the cases should be adjourned for a period of months.

All were denied, and the final result of a whole day of court time was that there was an adjournment for two days. Since there is no possibility that enough lawyers can be found who are in a position to commit themselves to this protracted and uncertain affair, it would seem that the system is, in fact, in danger of breaking down.

Public outrage about the punishment that the legal process has already inflicted on the defendants, plus what will be finally levied, may bring the day closer when Canada will scrap that archaic hold-over from the Middle Ages, the "crime" of criminal contempt of court. This one-charge-fits-all monstrosity is nothing more than a cynical legal convenience, created to magnify, by smoke and mirrors, a simple breaking of the law into something dangerous, sinister, threatening to society, for which a heavy punishment is appropriate.

What is an injunction but a law, and why is it argued that it is more sacrosanct than any other law, and breaking it a personal affront, allowing the courts to arbitrarily impose penalties far more severe than are merited?

Fit only for the days of the Star Chamber, it makes the law that should be our shield into a weapon that can be used vindictively, bringing our system of justice into disrepute, however majestic the facade displayed to us.

I hope that when this is all over we will be able to thank the Clayoquot defendants for not only stopping the destruction of our forests, but for exposing and striking down bad law.

The writer is a Salt Spring Island resident.

Report and the Seattle Times among other news organizations, have identified the American Freedom Coalition, (connected with the Wise Use Movement) as the political arm of the Unification Church of Rev. Sun Myung Moon.

The American Freedom Coalition shares offices with Ron Arnold's Centre of Defense of Free Enterprise in Bellevue, Washington.

The American Freedom Coalition was among the principal supporters of the contras in Nicaragua and are backers of right-win regimes in South America.

In touching this issue of Clayoquot Sound, one comes in contact with something far more sinister than a few youths leaving school for a spell of protesting.

This time the Brown Shirts may be wearing suits.

They are all nuts

To the Editor,

I saw the political commercial for the Natural Law Party the other evening and I thought that they must be a bunch of nuts. Especially the leader. But then I thought: even though the other parties may put on a competent face, they always prove themselves as a bunch of nuts in the end, too, so I might as well vote for the alternative nuts - it's just time for a change.

One law

To the Editor,

Recently the Driftwood published two ads and a news item concerning the hazards to workers in having signs, etc., nailed to Hydro poles.

Two large plywood signs are fastened to a Hydro pole at Broadwell and Vesuvius Bay Roads.

Perhaps the political party involved can explain why they have such disregard for the safety of linemen who may have to climb the pole.

Let's have one law for everybody, equally obeyed.

Reform, indeed.

Not a figment of imagination

To the Editor,
I want to thank Mr. David Massy for his conflict-assuaging letter (Driftwood, September 22) introducing the concept of agnosticism into a generally volatile spiritual debate which is not without merit! There are reasons why individuals feel and think so strongly about certain issues that zeal overtakes both thought and emotion, and harsh words are exchanged, or overly exalted ones! But in our staid eagerness to walk the middle path, let us not forget that moderation — especially in the name of reasonableness and virtue — itself can be and often is carried to extreme!

Mr. David Massy's letter was referring to agnosticism in a relative context, and in that sense it is a valid and peace-affirming proposition!

In the context of Absolute Truth, capitalized to differentiate it from ultimate truth as conceived from a relative point-of-view, the notion of agnosticism has no meaning, which is not a judgment on my part but an observation!

Since religion is the process of being re-united (from the Latin re-ligare "to bond again"), the question is: to what or to whom? If that is not knowable, religion as such would simply be a figment of our imagination!

Which it demonstrably is not, as evidenced by the number of human beings through recorded history who have transcended the "laws" of this world, and who have spoken of another world and of other governing precepts which all embody the living presence of a creator who is described as infinitely merciful, perfectly kind, and forever unwilling to harm anyone or anything!

I have reason to believe that this description is absolutely correct!
FRANCOIS JAUBERT,
Fulford Harbour

A lifeline

To the Editor,
I have been reading with interest the letters to the editor, and especially those dealing with "religion" as most people call it.

I was particularly interested in John Steel's letter in the September 22 issue because of the happiness which the writer expressed with his "born again" experience.

Another letter this week (September 29) written by Jack Hallam, was also of much interest as he was on the exact opposite side of the fence, and his letter seemed to express an unhappiness felt by many people today. After all, how can one be truly happy without a belief in God and the Bible? And how can we not believe in a God who created our marvellous universe and whose majesty is expressed on every hand in what man calls "Nature"?

I am sorry for Jack Hallam but as I read his letter, I could not help wondering, if he is so opposed to the Christian faith, why he would get so obviously upset over a few letters. Neither he nor anyone else will ever be able to stamp out Christianity, as it is the lifeline that so many are looking for today; the one thing that will bring peace to our troubled world.

Jack, I think you are too intelligent to say that Francis Shaeffer or Malcolm Muggeridge had "hopelessly perverted minds" or were "simple-minded men" simply because they had a faith which changed their lives.

If you really think that Satan is mere fiction, take a look at what is happening in our world today. This master deceiver would like to take possession of our minds and seems to be doing a pretty fair job of it. One strategy he is really working hard at is to make people believe that he does not exist.

OLIVE DAVIES,
Ganges

capital COMMENT

HUBERT BEYER

VICTORIA — Funny thing happened to our new and improved "hands-on" premier on the way to his new and improved image last week: he tripped over his new and improved environment minister.

The air waves were still reverberating with premier Harcourt's pledge that he would take a stronger hand in the governing of this province when he was blind-sided by Moe Sihota.

In a speech to the Juan de Fuca Chamber of Commerce, Sihota launched a scathing attack on the forest industry. Contrary to widely-held public opinion, the industry, Sihota said, was still making a terrible mess of the environment.

Current forest practices, he said, included large-scale clearcuts, which waste lower-grade trees and damage salmon streams.

Compounding these terrible practices is the fact that the provincial government has allowed for a system of sympathetic administration, in which they turn a blind eye to some of these terrible behaviours and practices in the forest industry," Sihota said.

To say that he put the cat amongst the pigeons would be an understatement. Just a week before, Harcourt had done his best to convey to the public an image of being the man in charge. Mistakes, he said, had been made, but his new team of cabinet ministers had received firm instructions to follow his marching order.

And along comes Sihota, who was thought to have been safely tucked away in a ministry that, until now, didn't have a great deal of power and influence over cabinet decisions, and derails the premier's train.

Asked for reaction, Harcourt tried to plan down the damage done by Sihota, calling him "an impetuous new minister in the first week of his new assignment." And saving reporters the time to call up the work impetuous in their electronic thesauruses, the premier defined it for them:

"Impetuous means that sometimes the minister makes statements without prepared text before him and sometimes his words don't accurately describe the situation," Harcourt said.

I looked it up anyway, and the definitions were a little more explicit. They included blind, hasty, headlong, uncontrolled, rash, unreasonable and irrational. I have a hunch that Harcourt used all of the above words and then some in his private chat with Sihota to explain how he feels about his new environment minister's statements.

Come to think of it, I don't feel too good about them myself, considering that upon Sihota's appointment I wrote that the militant environmental brigade had better hold its applause because Sihota wasn't about to let himself be greened. So much for my predictions.

All it took was one meeting with the Sierra Club's hit woman, Vicky Husband, and Sihota was in the camp of those who would all but shut down the province's forest industry. Hardly an encouraging development for anyone clinging to the belief that the forest industry is still vital to British Columbia's economic well-being.

Next day, Sihota appeared largely unrepentant, although he allowed that "my youthful enthusiasm sometimes gets the better of me" and that is might be good idea "to put in check a provocative statement."

Aside from that, he stood by what he said. British Columbia needs higher forest practices standards, tougher enforcement and heavier penalties.

Sihota's ill-conceived statements damaged more than the new image the premier and his spin doctors are so desperately trying to create. In one speech, he torpedoed and sank every effort the government has made to convince critics here and abroad that British Columbia is not the Brazil of the North.

Since he delivered his broadside at his boss and the forest industry, phones at his office have been ringing off the hook, and the mail is pouring in. Every environmental activist in the province appears to be pledging support and allegiance to Sihota.

The problem is that the environmental vote isn't going to carry the day for the NDP in the next election. Pandering to the eco-vote, which has been feeling alienated by the government's environmental policies in general and the Clayoquot Sound decision in particular, won't make one bit of difference come election time.

The only hope the NDP has of getting re-elected is to dispel the impression that it is a party for special interest groups, because that's precisely what it is right now.

If Harcourt is serious about playing a more active role in his government he must make it clear to Sihota and any other minister who might want to step out of line that there's no shortage of candidates for cabinet on the backbench. Failing to do so makes his promise of a new approach meaningless political rhetoric.

So many views

To the Editor,
It has been said that one of the secrets of success in politics is getting to know something of the social and economic fabric of one's constituency and to capitalize on that knowledge, by whatever means.

It seems to me that, when it comes to Salt Spring Island, the plethora of politicians you mention in your editorial have a daunting task.

Particularly by those from the east, Salt Spring Island has often been referred to in microcosmic terms. Despite the many disparate groups represented here, among them; eccentrics, idealists, moderates, red-necks, zealots and extremists, to cite just a few, it seems generally accepted that there is a sort of arcane unity grown out of complexity.

Whatever the real reasons for the proliferation of parties this time around, no single party could ever hope to reflect the essentially different views and wants held by the very wide array of interests so strongly held by Salt Spring Islanders. Whatever the final result, most of us will be disappointed, once again.

LOWELL HICKS,

Institute take note

To the Editor,
I enjoyed our fall fair once again, our weather was perfect and the attendance just great. That's the good news. Here's the bad: I think that even residents of Salt Spring should be ashamed of the sorry state of the fencing and pens for the livestock.

It's a disgrace; they need replacing and painting, etc., and the picnic tables and seats are dangerous to use. The Farmers' Institute could be liable for damages so all the responsible for the situation I have outlined please take note.

Wanted: young dynamic leader

To the Editor,

This election makes me nervous. The simplistic programs put forward by the two conservative parties, the weakness of our left leaves me fearful for the future of this wonderful country. The concentration on the deficit is at a hysterical point and no one looks at the consequences of all those proposed cuts.

The Vancouver Sun quotes a Toronto Star columnist (Carol Gear) who reminds us that Margaret Thatcher came to power on a restraint platform and cut the deficit in two years! However, during the third year all hell broke loose - massive unemployment, welfare and unemployment benefits soaring, crime increasing. Thatcher privatized everything, selling all assets and today, Britain's deficit stands at 8.3 per cent whereas Canada's current deficit is 5.2 per cent. So much for Thatcher's radical restraint program.

We don't need "lean and mean". We need a young, dynamic leader - one who can take the good that we have and build on it.

And no one is in sight.

Moral decay

To the Editor,

I am in my 80s, long retired from teaching ethics and philosophy at various universities. Good fortune has it that my faculties are intact, so let the reader be assured that my modest letter is not written in senility. Having said this, allow me to say a few remarks on the on-going spiritual debate, which appears more like spiritual warfare.

Miha Chiall obviously reads the Bible, but also obviously from wrong motives, namely to find non-existent loopholes and non-existent contradictions. Sadly, her biblical hermeneutics - the science and the principles of interpretation and theological study by which the meaning of the scriptures can be elucidated - is either non-existent or at best very, very poor.

Thanks to the many Miha Chialls in our society, the moral decay, nay the moral disintegration is becoming more and more a disaster, a real threat of catastrophe. They threw God out the window, only to let the evolutionary beast in the door. The result is that in all educational institutions - from kindergarten to university - man is merely an organism, a highly developed ape, the pinnacle of organic evolution. Some would even call him the measure of all things. Nobody is accountable to his Maker, everybody is free to do his or her own thing. Only don't let the law catch him. Welcome to the brave new world!

In closing let me say this truth: if I was half my age again, I would sooner become a preacher and sow the seeds of Christ's love to a dying world than a university professor of secular ethics and philosophy.

As for Miha Chiall, I can only wish that one day she will wake up and smell the sweet fragrance of God's eternal truth.

Anti-Trust campaign

To the Editor,

Things are beginning to heat up here in the islands. The second draft of the Islands Trust policy statement and an election for trustees have rallied the old opponents of the Trust. Several ominous activities have been reported from the islands and a few Bowen Islanders are right in the thick of them.

I discovered an interesting article in the Driftwood (August 18) under the heading "Group criticizes policy statement." Bowen resident and long-time opponent of the Islands Trust, F.R.C. Johnstone, chaired a meeting which the paper noted was made up of "18 islanders from all the southern Gulf Islands" to plan their opposition to the proposed policy statement. F.R.C. Johnstone's active opposition to the Trust developed during the discussions concerning development of the Cowan's Point area. The initial proposal was well above densities allowed by our present Official Community Plan and zoning bylaws. Hard work on the part of the trustees reduced the original proposal to something acceptable to the community.

I noted with equal interest that the Galiano Ratepayers Association, a patently anti-Islands Trust group, recently circulated a missive in which it directly thanked Bowen's Hank Jasper, (Praxis Group and Cowan's Point developer), Richard Underhill (major Hood Point area land holder) and Curtis Scott (Eagle Cliff developer) for their assistance in supplying information.

What does this mean to most of us on the Trust islands? The foes of the Trust have a vested interest in seeing the Trust discredited and weakened. This is not the wish of most islanders. This can be illustrated by the firm support for strong environmental consideration which emerged as clear statements in most of Bowen's Official Community Plan task force reports.

An Islands Trust capable of protecting the unique, low-population, biologically diverse islands is essential if we wish to maintain the non-city lifestyles that we came here to live, and keep Bowen and other islands in first-rate condition for ourselves, visitors and future generations.

If you care about your island, and its beauty, be prepared to spread out and support the Trust and its mandate. There is a concerted campaign of misinformation to discredit the Trust. Get the correct information.

Efficiency

To the Editor,

In July of this year my son-in-law and daughter took an early-morning ferry from the Long Harbour terminal en route to their home in Kelowna. Later that same afternoon I received a phone call from the ferry terminal asking us if we had left a video camera on the ferry. The purser had checked the camera bag and had found a bill with my name on it and took the trouble to call me. This was a recently purchased, very expensive camera. Surely enough, it turned out to be the property of my daughter and son-in-law. We called Kelowna and they had not yet arrived home but we left a message. When they finally arrived home they couldn't imagine what the message was all about. In fact, they had so many packages from their trip they did not even know their camera was missing until we personally told them it was here with us. Now how is that for service!

At the time we picked up the camera from the Long Harbour terminal we thanked the ferry staff profusely but I would like to thank them publicly for their honesty, efficiency and ingenuity. The ferry staff are often criticized for their errors and mistakes, particularly by the news media, but considering the millions of passengers and cars they handle they perform amazingly efficiently.

Room for others

To the Editor,

I totally agree with Jack Clements (Driftwood, September 22). I believe, as do most pagans, that there's room in the world for other faiths and religions. I don't think that continuous "bible bashing" or continuous "witch-hunting" will help solve any of our world's problems. We need to get beyond "us and them" type thinking and begin to tolerate and accept other religious points of view.

We don't need to change our own faith or expect anyone else to change theirs. The world needs religious tolerance, not defensiveness caused by polarized attacks.

Poor catch

To the Editor,

As mothers of young children who attended the fall fair, we would like to make two comments, one to praise, the other to voice disappointment.

The praise goes to Fulford Daycare for their fine set-up. Their generosity was greatly appreciated. Next year they should put a donations box up to take care of supply costs.

We were, however, very disappointed with the Reform Party's $1 fish pond. This is obviously an activity that is attractive to young children yet the prizes were totally inappropriate: half empty shoe polish, used men's aftershave, a belt that would fit a 200 lb. male.

It makes one wonder at the lack of imagination on the part of this community a high priority. Your articles have helped to contribute towards this.

Priority

To the Editor,

I would like to thank you for the excellent coverage the Driftwood has provided during the past month concerning the annual general meeting of Lady Minto Gulf Islands Hospital. Both articles - the first of which was printed prior to the meeting and the second which was published following the meeting - were thorough and accurate.

Because of the many changes taking place in health care today the board and administration have made communication with the party's organizers. Is this indicative of the Reform Party's plans for the youth of today?

Is that all there is, leftovers?

Islands Trust focus needs directing towards people

By JOHN STEPANIUK
Salt Spring Trust Committee

On October 1, copies of the revised draft of the Trust policy statement were delivered to the Trust office in Grace Point Square for distribution. Because of the shortage of time, copies can be obtained at the office or by contacting your local trustees.

The revised draft of the policy statement is the result of input from many people and comments from other agencies. The council meeting in September had an agonizing time going over each section and making further explanatory comments.

Now it is up to the public to make their views known. Views can be submitted in writing or by personal presentation to the Trust council at a meeting in Nanaimo, October 29 and 30, in the Dorchester Hotel, 70 Church Street.

I cannot overemphasize the importance of this document. Once it is adopted by the Trust council and signed by the minister of municipal affairs, it will be binding on all Trust committees and all future bylaws will have to be in compliance. The islands in the Trust area will be the first recipients in B.C. of such a policy.

The format has been considerably shortened in its content and clarity. There are definitions at the back of the document for reference.

The Islands Trust has undergone extensive changes since its inception in 1974. In the last five years, I have witnessed many changes in terms of development and Trust activities as well as the Trust's involvement in local government functions and greater interaction with government agencies.

However, people considerations, which this policy paper does not address, are becoming more urgent.

My term as trustee in 1974-76 was mainly devoted to subdivisions and zoning bylaws, identifying ecologically sensitive areas or special values with respect to the landscape.

The main thrust was how to keep a diversity of people and economic opportunities on the island. It is becoming very difficult now to achieve that goal. Young families will find it hard to purchase their individual homes and properties.

The Trust has been preoccupied with complex environmental issues and resource planning. In recent years it has become apparent that the needs of people, especially our young people, are being overlooked.

The policy statement is silent on youth and their role in the community. I suggest that the candidate who seeks the position of trustee should look at the community as a whole and avoid undue influence from special interest groups.

My years on the island have taught me not to underestimate the inherent appreciation of our community and its values.

As I have decided not to seek another term, I would like to take this opportunity to thank all those who supported me in my last two terms in office.

CRD program seeks to stop hazardous waste at source

Salt Spring businesses and institutions disposing of hazardous materials into sewer wastewater are being urged to curb them at the source.

The Capital Regional District's Source Control Program was brought to the island last week when environmental chemist Trevor Smyth visited several local businesses and Lady Minto Hospital to exchange information and suggest ways to keep harmful chemical wastes out of the Ganges sewer system.

As Smyth explained to the Driftwood, when chemicals enter the sewer system, both wastewater sent to the ocean and the remaining sludge become contaminated.

Some metals, like mercury, get into the food chain and "bio-accumulate," increasing as they pass from one organism to another.

Public health risks, disruption of sewage treatment or composting processes and damage to collection systems or pump stations can also result from chemically contaminated wastewater. The Source Control Program was brought to Salt Spring by request of the Ganges Sewer Commission.

Commission chairperson Tom Toynbee said his group decided to fund the program to ensure the local sewer system and its sludge was "as good as we can possibly make it."

With the new Burgoyne Valley composting facility coming on stream, purifying sludge becomes even more important, he said.

Everyone should learn how to safely discharge chemical wastes, said Toynbee and Smyth, since all septic tank waste will eventually end up at the composting site.

While all preventative actions are currently done on a volunteer basis, Smyth said a waste discharge permit system is being developed and will in future apply to businesses handling chemicals.

Educating people is the "first step" in the process, added Smyth, and because the Ganges sewer system has a higher proportion of business users than most systems, it is especially important they practise source control techniques.

He said individuals canvassed provided a whole spectrum of responses to the issue, but generally showed awareness and concern about the chemical waste problem.

Toynbee said sewer commission members predicted a high level of interest from local business operators. "The commission felt, in approving funding for this control program, we would get good response from the users because we believe people are very concerned with this issue."

05 BIRTHS

Daryl & Rhonda Little are proud to announce the arrival of their first granddaughter - Santana Lee. Born September 30 at 11:12 p.m., weighing 6 lbs, 10 oz. at Cowichan District Hospital. Parents Laura & Derek invite their friends to drop-in and see them in Duncan. 40

Kenneth, Sarah and Ethan are proud to announce the arrival of Haydn Zachary Smith, born September 3, 1993, weighing 8 lbs 8 oz. 40

06 DEATHS

SLATTERY-Edna Lettice, suddenly September 26, 1993. Lovingly remembered by Ray, her husband of 65 years; daughter Bev Williams, granddaughters; Laurie, (Ken); Sandy, (Harold); Rhonda, (Daryl), numerous great grandchildren, nieces and nephews. Family service, flowers gratefully declined in lieu of donations to the Children's Hospital. 40

KING, Clarence Leon (Lee), December 20, 1914 - September 22, 1993. Born at Beaver Point on Salt Spring Island, Lee was the youngest of 6 children of a pioneer family who were original settlers of the island. He was head loader in the Copper Canyon and Nanaimo Lakes area of Vancouver Island, the Queen Charlotte Islands and the inlets along the mainland. Lee was engineer on several halibut boats that fished off Alaska and the Aleutian Islands as well as seining herring; salmon and cod fishing; and trolling for salmon. He joined the Canadian Scottish at the beginning of World War II and later transferred to the Army Service Corp. and served as engineer on a vessel laying cable for the American army in Alaska. He spent 3 1/2 years in Shaughnessy Hospital and was discharged in 1948. Lee is survived by his loving wife Gladys at the 108 Ranch, son Patrick Eckert at the 103. Two grandchildren Justin at Victoria and Naomi at the 103. One sister Vera Loxton of Salt Spring Island and nephews and nieces in Washington State. He will be missed by his many friends, as well as hunting and fishing buddies. Pall bearers: Bill Lukoni, Bill Bissat, Bob Scott, Dan Parkins, Wayne Gray and Harvey Griffard. 40

08 CARD OF THANKS

BEAVER POINT Pre-school and Tree Frog Day Care would like to thank Island Fruitsicles, Harlan's Chocolates, G.V.M., Stuff'N Nonsense, Frank Ens, and all the volunteers who helped us with child minding and banana dipping at the Fall Fair. 40

ANNOUNCEMENT OF PRACTICE CLOSURE

To whom it may concern: I wanted to let those of you whom I haven't been able to reach personally know that I closed my counselling practice on September 30. And I want to thank all my clients for the courage each of you brought to your sessions. I have been immeasurably enriched in my role as your witness. Thank you and good wishes to all of us!

08 CARD OF THANKS

It's always good to get home - but it's even better to get back home.

We're so grateful to all of you who made the months since our fire easier for us. Thanks, again, to our wonderful fire fighters who ensured there was some house left to repair, and thanks to Jim Budden - best builder, bar none for doing same. To Jim and to his hard working crew - Rob, Paul, Lorne, Mike - thanks for your skill and your patience!

Thanks to all of the sub-trades - and to Donna and Mike, Liz, Arlene and Shera. To Jeff for "storing" our trees; to the Brummitts for their generosity; to Janet and Pat at Century 21 for keeping us housed; and to the Morins for always being there.

We were particularly touched by all of you who followed the progress of the reconstruction, and shared our excitement as it neared completion.

There have been many kindnesses shown us. (If you have to have grief, Salt Spring's the place to have it!).

Sincerely,
Jim & Carol Helset 40

112 BODY CARE & HEALTH SERVICES

ATTENTION: WOMEN & men of ages and skin types who are showing signs of aging or have sun-damaged skin: Avon Nova is the extraordinary cosmetic breakthrough of the 90's using special new ingredients to achieve dramatic visible results for aging or sun-damaged skin. Developed in conjunction with inventors of this technology, Avon Nova is one of the most scientifically advanced skin care products. In the past several years, skin care experts have come to fully understand the potential of a unique type of ingredient which comes from certain fruits and plants. The special ingredient in Avon Nova, from the sugar cane plant, is judged by researchers to be superior for cosmetic use. Many of the skin's visible changes are related to the effects of sun exposure. Fine dry lines, coarser skin texture and even a sallow complexion are often sun-induced problems. Within 2 weeks skin looks and feels softer, smoother; skin tone improves giving skin a healthy glow. Fine lines and wrinkles are less noticeable. At four weeks, skin tone appears more even for a vibrant look. Continued, uninterrupted use over 3 to 6 months will result in maximum benefits. For more information call Evelyn Hanoski (certified cosmetician, naturopathic practitioner 537-1227).

down through the years

Five years ago

October 5, 1988

A familiar ship left Gulf Islands waters after 20 years' residence. The Annie Tuck was a 65-foot vessel built in 1919 and owned by Raymond and Pam Vallee. It was headed for its new home at Maurelle Island near Bute Inlet.

Police divers began searching Active Pass for a man believed to have fallen from the Queen of Vancouver. People camping on Mayne Island reported hearing a man calling for help about 7:55 p.m. and Coast Guard vessels were dispatched to investigate. Later that evening, an abandoned vehicle was found on the Queen of Vancouver. Local police would not connect the two incidents but were not ruling out a connection.

An unidentified large black dog was ravaging a flock of sheep on the Ruckle farm at Beaver Point. In two weeks, the animal had killed 21 sheep and seriously injured another 12. It was the worst dog attack in 10 years, Capital Regional District animal control officer Howard Byron said. The dog had been sighted, and even shot at, but had so far avoided traps and locals lying in wait. The animal was suspected to have been abandoned in Beaver Point Park during the summer.

October 5, 1983

Despite sharp criticisms of the philosophy of the Ganges sewer studies from some directors, the Capital Regional District board agreed to spend $57,000 to pursue additional data on possible alternative means of disposal. Ganges Citizens' Committee chairman Arvid Chalmers told the board a referendum to approve the expenditure as a cost against the community would probably fail. After some discussion as to whether the board would foot the bill or just islanders, a motion approving the expenditure was passed.

Passengers destined for the Gulf Islands from the Swartz Bay ferry terminal would soon have the use of baggage carts, B.C. Ferry Corporation chairman Stuart Hodgson said. Hodgson said in a letter to Salt Spring resident J.A. Holder the carts were on order and would be in place within a few weeks. He was replying to an earlier letter from Holder who had suggested such carts would be useful for foot passengers travelling to the islands, particularly senior citizens.

Jaws of life, a hydraulic cutting tool for opening up damaged, jammed automobiles, were to be purchased by the Salt Spring Island Rotary Club for the local fire department. Equipment cost about $8,000 and was intended to cut away the automobile body in order to release passengers trapped inside. The cutting tool consisted of metal shears and a gasoline engine. The rig was completely portable.

Local police were contemplating laying charges against a teenage girl and boy who admitted stealing a boat belonging to a Pender Island resident. The pair admitted to the theft of the 16-foot craft, equipped with a 20-horsepower engine, after they were discovered stranded on Chart Island. The boat had been found floating overturned off Prevost Island.

Fire protection referendum was to be presented to the property owners of Galiano Island. Galiano volunteer fire department chairman Fred Robson said a meeting would be held to present information on the coming referendum. The community would need to borrow money to build a fire hall, buy a new fire truck, upgrade equipment and lease land in order to be in line with standards required by Canadian Underwriters.

Twenty-five years ago

October 3, 1968

There was no immediate plan for checking island vehicles. When a Salt Spring Island reader inquired of the Driftwood of the vehicle testing stations in Victoria and Vancouver, she was fearful of the delayed journey involved. Vehicle testing stations were installed in the two large cities to enable all cars in the area to be checked. The concerned resident heard of a Victoria driver whose car required work to the headlights. Though the work was done, the car was again rejected. An island driver would have missed the last ferry back to Salt Spring by this time, she said. She felt a mobile testing unit would be more logical for testing island vehicles.

Classes in 25 subjects on four islands were among the programs offered by the adult education department of the Gulf Islands school district. The classes ranged from creative writing at Salt Spring Island to Spanish conversation on Galiano. The majority of the courses were recreational rather than academic. Candle-making and shoe re-covering were also among the classes on offer.

Thirty years ago

October 3, 1963

A total of 1,461 registered voters turned out to vote in the provincial election. Islanders favoured Social Credit incumbent Earle C. Westwood over NDP candidate Dave Stupich 816 to 317, but the results in the whole riding of Nanaimo-The Islands were much closer at 4,157 for Westwood and 4,188 for Stupich. Returning officer F. Spencer of Nanaimo said the results were close enough in this riding that the absentee votes might change the results. Provincially, the Social Credit party were returned with an increased majority of two members.

September produced the hottest day of the year in 1963. It was also the warmest and driest year on record, official weather observer Howard Carlin reported. There was also more sunshine than usual. The monthly high was 85 degrees September 9, with a recorded low of 47 degrees September 17, 18 and 19. There was only 0.52 inches of rain in the month. Maximum and minimum mean temperatures for the month were 70 degrees and 52.9 degrees respectively.
