*Jim Stevens recalls
80 years on Salt Spring*

By GRAEME THOMPSON
Driftwood Staff

Most people's memory of appendicitis includes pain, a trip to the hospital, anaesthetic-induced nothingness and then a return to normality. That's not how long-time islander Jim Stevens remembers it at all. And he's had appendicitis twice.

In the 1920s, when Stevens contracted appendicitis for the first time, it was a serious condition. Many died from it. Stevens remembered the pain, and a trip to the island's doctor, Dr. Lawson. But there was no anaesthetic. Instead, he was given a prescription of mineral oil.

"I didn't like the mineral oil," he recalled. "It sapped all my energy."

He said he was good at the 100-yard dash before he got appendicitis. After the mineral oil regime, though, he never got his wind back. But he did keep his appendix and lived to have appendicitis again.

Jim Stevens' family came to Salt Spring Island in the late 1880s from south-west England. Steven's uncle, Frank, arrived first and had a house built near Central. Known then as Stevens' Boarding House, it was the only hostelry on the north end of the island.

"Mr. Bullock landed at the boarding house when he came to the island," Stevens said. "Before him, Rev. Wilson. Then Mr. (Fred) Crofton. All the old-timers."

Stevens' father was Walter, Frank's younger brother. He arrived on the island about 1889. He helped build houses and clear land and raise a family of six children. Jim was the second oldest, and the only son.

One of his favourite pals was Sam Beddis, who was about his age. The Beddis family had been very friendly to the Stevens when they arrived from England and the friendship lasted through the generations.

"Sam was pretty good at doing things," Stevens said. "He used an old bicycle to make a paddle wheel for the raft. We would stay overnight on the beach. We would catch the loveliest salmon — spring and other."

Later the boys had a clinkerbuilt boat with skiff sides and half-moon bottom. Beddis put an old Evinrude single cylinder motor on it. Before that they used an old blanket for a sail. They would load up with cooked spuds and bacon and row across to Prevost Island, jigging for cod in the kelp beds offshore. Fish they brought home was canned.

When he wasn't out fishing with his friend, Stevens was helping his father log on the island, an occupation he pursued on the island briefly before and after the Second World War. Choking, falling, bucking, skidding — these are all terms Stevens knows from his days in the woods.

"It was hand-falling in those days," he said, thinking back 60 years. "A falling saw is a lighter saw, usually six feet long. It's lighter than a bucking saw. You'd use an ordinary chinook for bucking and a Royal Chinook for falling. It's better tempered."

He remembered learning how to make a springboard hole, for the board that loggers would stand on to get high enough to reach above the really hard base of the tree trunk. And he also learned the intricate calls of the whistle-punk, when he worked with a team on a steam donkey operation.

"The whistle-punk blows the whistle to let you know about what will happen with the log," he explained. "He would give a signal to the donkey puncher — different signals for different things: three toots for the main line; a trilling sound meant slack everything down."

"You had to be accurate," he said. But in the 1930s, Stevens' interest in things mechanical took over from a career in the woods. He worked for Robin Justice at his garage in Ganges and took a mechanics correspondence course by mail. It was a course run by the Motor Institute of America in Evanston, Illinois.

"It was a really thorough course," he said. Sheets of material would come in the mail on every aspect of the motor car, even electricity.

AT HOME WITH THEIR DOG: Jim Stevens was born on Salt Spring and has spent most of the last 80 years here, including 50 years with his wife, Olive. Jim Stevens has alternately worked as a logger, with provincial highways and on the fer-

When war broke out in 1939, he wanted to be in the air force, working on airplane engines. Unfortunately, everybody else did too. And when the recruiting officers saw his experience in automobile engines, he was fast-tracked to a job as MMT: Motor Mechanic, Mechanical Transport.

Off he went to Ottawa. He spent much of the war looking after "ref-tenders" or single-axle trucks which hauled 800 gallons of airplane fuel at a time. Stevens had a knack for starting these particular trucks in the cold, for which his immediate officer, Eddie Bedard, was ever grateful.

"You had to do a certain thing to get them to turn over without having to tow them around the yard," Stevens said. Strange as it may seem, Salt Spring winters, and the bit of snow that stuck to hilly island roads, was good training ground for driving these large fuel trucks in Ottawa.

He returned to Salt Spring after the war with a new wife, Olive, and a baby daughter. His wife fell in love with a six-acre piece of property on Atkins Road, where they have lived ever since.

After returning to logging work for a short while after the war, Stevens started working for the local highways crew in 1953. Most of the main roads had been put in by then — he remembers the first island road foreman, Joe Akerman, in the 1920s, and when Fulford-Ganges Road was gravelled for the first time in the 1930s — but there was still on-going maintenance. And Fulford-Ganges Road was constantly being improved by making corners smoother and banking lanes.

PENSIVE MOMENT: This photo of long-time residents Jim and Olive Stevens was taken nearly 50 years ago. They met in Ottawa during the war and moved to their present property on Atkins Road, where they raised three children.

Stevens photographed by young artist — Karsh

When Jim Stevens met his wife-to-be, Olive, in Ottawa, she was working at the city's premier hotel, Chateau Laurier.

In the time-honoured custom of courting couples, they wanted to exchange pictures of one another. To that end, Olive recalled walking across the street from the Chateau into a tiny two-room studio to have her picture taken. It was run by a man named Karsh. Josef Karsh.

"It was just a little studio, with a dark room at the back," she recalled. This was the beginning of what would become the most famous portrait studio in Canada. Karsh's work put Canada on the photographic world map.

But when Olive walked into the Karsh studio, all that was well in the future. She sat down and had many pictures taken before Karsh said she could go. A few days later, she picked up the photo she would give to Jim.

A few days later, however, on her way to work, Olive noticed something different about the small studio window across the street from the Chateau Laurier.

"He put my picture in his window," she said, still with a hint of embarrassed indignation. "I couldn't go down the street. I had to cross to the other side. I was so embarrassed."

After a few embarrassed weeks, Olive phoned Mr. Karsh up and asked him to remove her picture from the display window. He complied with her request and that was the end of it.

Erudite "darling" dog makes a library of the dailies

Every dog has his day. I learned that aspect of a dog's life when I was in school. Until now I have accepted it in passing. Why not?

What I cannot accept is that every dog is entitled to his newspaper. Still less to mine!

The crux of the matter is that Darling is no darling in my book. Each morning, early, I get a newspaper. It comes to me wrapped and ready for reading.

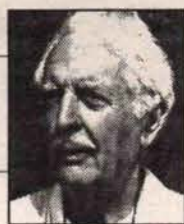

Until a week or so ago. I was away for a few days and I had forgotten to broadcast the fact. I returned home refreshed and eager to find my collection of dailies. But not a paper was to be seen.

A few days later I was suffering the agonies of post-flu shottism and I elected to remain within the house. Outside was resting my newspaper. Later in the day I decided to recover the paper. But there was not a page to be seen. Where earlier had lain my target was nothing. I naturally condemned my family and my guests, but that didn't help overly much.

Inspiration came only when my neighbour called to enquire at the state of my temper. Had I lost some papers? asked Eric McMahon. I admitted my loss and he was very apologetic, but he had found evidence around his garden.

TO BE FRANK

FRANK RICHARDS

Furthermore, he accepted the blame for his dog's peccadilloes.

That the errant dog answers to the uncommon name of "Darling" is neither here nor there. And it surely doesn't answer me.

I remember a fellow who named his dog "Damn You!" and enjoyed the raised eyebrows when he was heard addressing the animal.

Damn You was a well-mannered pooch, thereby disproving the adage about giving a dog a bad name. And that animal not only didn't read, but made no effort in that direction.

So what's for Darling who is obviously building up a fair library as far as dog's libraries go?

I have the answer. I shall write to Darling, myself, in the strongest possible terms to tell him, or her, to lay off my paper!

Mention in despatches

The Salt Spring Island Legion

branch joined forces with the island volunteer fire department in the October issue of the veterans' magazine "Legion".

Two pictures of islanders appear in the magazine. Presentation of $500 by Dick Illingworth of the island Legion to the late Scotty Wild, of the Salt Spring Island Heart and Stroke Foundation, comes in black and white, while a colour picture shows fire chief Les Wagg receiving equipment valued at $6,000 from Bill Monahan and Betty Galt, president and past-president of the island Legion branch.

Jeff Outerbridge, Rick Bahry and Pat Shouldice are seen taking part on behalf of the fire department.

The old and the unknown

I went to the hospital ball on Saturday night and thoroughly enjoyed the experience. There was a sharp reminder of the passing years, however.

The guests were clearly divided into two categories. There were those who were my own age and whom I knew and whose names I had forgotten and there were those too young to be familiar and whose names I had never known.

Who all was there?

I can remember the days when I went to dine in the Fulford Hall and could recognize everyone there. That's age for you! Gosh! They must be getting old, those folks!

missing one of the one-way streets and never being quite sure how to get back into Ganges.

There is not the slightest question but that Ganges, denied the aid of the ministry, might yet be that odd little rural community it thought it was.

But why are we denied traffic lights? If Ganges is to be the great city of Salt Spring Island, why no traffic lights? Just think of a Ganges with traffic lights at every intersection! We could imagine ourselves on Vancouver's Granville St. before the second world war!

Traffic lights

No question but Ganges is growing bigger. What with one-way streets and painted roads and traffic signs on every available stretch of sidewalk, it's just like living in the big city.

What a lot we owe to the magnificent ministry of highways! Had we gone on in our own simple way through the sticks, we might be able even now to park a car where we want to be.

As for finding our way through Ganges, it is fortunate that we do find private roadways and lanes to make up for the frustrations of

STEVENS

He became good at driving trucks on Salt Spring, especially a '57 Dodge with a four-yard box which belonged to the highways department.

"I really liked that truck," he recalled. But though he thought it was a well-made vehicle, occasionally the brakes would fail. He cites his "quick reflexes" for preventing disasters. He put 100,000 miles on that truck before the provincial government figured its time had come and replaced it with a "dam Mercury" which only had a three-yard capacity to boot.

While Stevens retired from highways in 1974, and then retired from B.C. Ferries a few years later, he stayed active by breeding Shelties. Many islanders will remember his patience and firmness running dog obedience classes.

Today, he stays active with t'ai chi Monday morning, carpet bowling in the afternoon and five-pin bowling Friday. Old Dr. Lawson's mineral oil clearly did not sap all his energy.

UNICEF drive begins this weekend

SHOPPING EARLY: Islanders Norma Eves, left, and Margaret Haines, look over the cards and gifts UNICEF has put out for 1994. These items will be on sale at various coffee parties in November.

For islanders trying to figure out what meaningful gifts to buy friends and relatives for Christmas, the UNICEF catalog has arrived. And Hallowe'en means volunteers and trick-or-treaters with official boxes will be asking for donations this weekend.

Beautiful cards — including First Nations' designed cards — are the specialty of UNICEF, but the development aid organization which operates in 128 countries around the world has more than just greeting cards. There are delightful educational games for children aged three and up. Wall and desk calendars, mugs and jewellery are just some of the items which make great gifts and help make real changes in people's lives in developing countries.

Island organizer Margaret Haines said she got involved in UNICEF because it is a grass-roots organization which depends on volunteers to raise money for the work it does. UNICEF has a good record for ensuring the money it sends to aid projects around the world actually goes to the aid projects, and not to government officials along the way, Haines said.

Most UNICEF projects around the world are related to providing clean water and sanitation for children and families.

"You can't have healthy kids and communities without safe water and sanitation," she said. "UNICEF is doing a lot of work in Rwanda right now."

Last year, islanders gave about $400 during the annual Hallowe'en pub crawl. Children who carried donation boxes while trick-or-treating last year collected more than four times as much: $1,662. In addition, islanders spent between $3,000 and $4,000 on UNICEF merchandise, including cards, calendars and gifts.

Watch for kids with UNICEF boxes on Monday night and look out for advertisements of UNICEF coffee parties where UNICEF cards and merchandise can be purchased before Christmas. The first one is on November 3.

Host families needed for next year's Rotary Club foreign exchange students

Salt Spring Island Rotary Club is looking for host families for next year's exchange students. While the student would not come until next August, organizer Allan Bruce said last week the club needs several host families in place by mid-November.

The Rotary Club is the largest service club in the world, Bruce said. The aims of the club include spreading international understanding and improving world relations. As well as financing a number of development projects, notably water-drilling in places like the Philippines, the club sponsors this international student exchange program.

Islanders may remember Lars Thoroe, a student from Germany, and Rekha Rao, from India. They were the most recent Rotary exchange students.

"Most of the 25 years we've been in existence on the island, we've had Rotary exchanges," Bruce said. Some 40 students have come to the island in that period, and Salt Spring has sent away the same number.

But this year, no host families were found and so no students could come. That is one reason Bruce wants to get started on the program for next year.

The long term exchange program runs from August to July, he said. The Rotary also offers one-month exchanges, but Bruce is looking particularly for host families for the year-long program.

Exchange students must attend school and are usually in grade 12 when they arrive on the island. Salt Spring Island is in a Rotary exchange zone which includes part of Washington State and the whole of Vancouver Island.

Candidates for the exchanges are not necessarily members of a Rotary club or children of members, but are carefully selected by their local club for qualities of leadership, skill at speaking English and their ability to make the most of such an exchange. The Rotary club receiving the student gives him or her a monthly allowance and remaining costs are born by the student, who might raise money in his or her hometown for travelling expenses and spending money.

Students do not spend their whole twelve months at the same house. They move around every two or three months, Bruce said, getting to know more than one family. The club likes its host families to have children, but that is not absolutely necessary. Families must enjoy the stimulation of having a foreign student in their home.

"It's nice to have a foreign student stay with you," he said. "They learn about us. We learn about them."

Students are often quite involved in island life — Thoroe was active in sports; Rao, in drama — and the host family will have to adjust to the needs of their student, as they would their own child. They must also be prepared to act as surrogate parents for the student on occasion, though Rotary Club members look after the student's welfare too.

Anybody interested in being a host family for the 1995/96 school year should contact Allan Bruce at 537-5553 or 537-2799, or any other member of the Rotary Club.

Pre-schoolers revel in creative loft established by a "community effort"

Gulf Islands Secondary School students may have a beautiful new learning space, but so do the 30 children of Salt Spring Island Pre-school.

Part of their two-room school was recently transformed into an 8 foot by 18 foot "loft," but as pre-school parent Helen Meurer observed last week, it is much more than "a big shelf with a ladder up to it."

The loft's design promotes the imaginative work of its three and four-year-old users, with a play office currently set up in one section. Underneath another part is a dress-up corner which has already been transformed into a restaurant, campground and hospital.

returned to the school after an eight-year absence. When she saw some preschool floor space had been lost by a renovation, she suggested constructing a loft similar to one at the Little Red School House Pre-school.

Her idea was floated at a school meeting, and Suzanne Darwin volunteered the design services of husband Rodney.

The loft is made primarily from red cedar donated by Ross McLeod of Deluxe Contracting Ltd., and Keith Shantz of Cabinets for Kitchens planed each piece of wood. The project also received donations of cash or materials from Pemberton Holmes, Salt Spring Insurance Agencies, Windsor Plywood, Mouat's Home Hardware, Burrit Bros. Carpets and Calypso Carpet.

Barbara Haydon was project coordinator, and Lou Walsh oversaw the volunteer crew of fathers building the loft.

Between August 23 and September 2, 10 pre-schoolers' "dads" tackled construction and six "moms" did the painting and varathaning.

Haydon said the generosity and support received for the pre-school's loft would not be forthcoming in all communities.

But on Salt Spring, she said "I'm sure everyone knows of someone who will benefit from this project."

The loft's design promotes the imaginative work of its three and four-year-old users, with a play office currently set up in one section.

A cozy reading corner, "lite brite" cubbyhole and way-up-high play area have also been created by the loft.

Those involved in the project are pleased with the generosity of local businesspeople and the willingness of several parents to volunteer time and expertise to the project.

"This was a real community effort," said parent Brenda Anderson.

The idea was initiated by teacher Barb Ruddell, who

Works department approves future Centennial Park

Thirty years ago

October 16, 1964

The Chamber of Commerce's application for a lease of the fill area next to the new boat basin in Ganges was approved by the Department of Public Works. The chamber planned to use the site for a park. Plans called for the park to be developed as a centennial project for the 1967 100th anniversary of confederation. If the park was approved as a centennial project, then federal and provincial funds would be available to develop the site.

Suggestions for the park included a small parking lot, a ramp leading to the dock, a grassed area with shrubs, a foot path, benches and a children's playground. Ed Stephenson asked to have a lawn bowling green included in the park.

Sixteen pigs and seven rabbits were the prey for contestants in the second annual greasy pig contest. John and Mary Stepaniuk supplied the 16 six-week-old greased pigs while Joyce Roper supplied the rabbits. Children who sold the greatest number of tickets on a draw for hams were invited to join the scramble to catch a pig. For younger children, the goal was to catch a rabbit. Top catcher of the day was Ian Kyle, who won a bicycle for selling the most tickets (88) and also grabbed a pig. Eleven children caught pigs. They were: Colin Byron, Michele Larson, Alex McManus, Debbie Woodley, Danny Fraser, Janice Ryles, Tom Langdon, Sandra Williams, Brian Bogdanovich, Bobby Empey and Kyle.

Adult catchers were Kathy Williams, Mrs. Syd Fraser, David Williams, John Helme and Andy Mitchell. The adults bid at an auction for the right to chase a pig.

Rabbit catchers were Leah Kaye, Gordon Miller, Elizabeth Ronne, Warren Kyle, Cindy Howard, Danny Reynolds and Stephen Anderson.

Master of ceremonies was radio personality Jack Webster, who had acquired a home on the island. The event raised an estimated $800 for Centennial Park.

Construction of a new 10-room elementary school for Salt Spring was approved by trustees. The site of the new school would be determined by the concentration of population growth on the island. The project, estimated to cost $350,000, would go to referendum that December.

An estimated $60,000 worth of business was brought to the island by tourists, according to a report to the Salt Spring Island Chamber of Commerce. Vice-chairman Joe Nickerson said 1,460 tourists dropped into the information bureau during the season.

Smoking in bed was the cause of a fire which killed a 38 year old Ganges woman. Norma Lisa Allan died in her home when her bed caught fire. The alarm was sounded Sunday morning when a King's Lane neighbour heard the windows blow out in the adjoining duplex suite. Allan was still alive but suffering from extensive burns. She died shortly afterward. She was believed to have been overcome by fumes before she could escape the fire.

A six hour rescue effort was required on Mayne Island to help a 14-year-old girl trapped in a rock crevasse. Janet Ebert and a friend were walking through the bush at Campbell Bay when Ebert slipped into a crevasse in the rocks and broke her leg. She was trapped in the rock cleft and could not get out. Her friend ran for help but did not reach a home for half-an-hour. The Mayne Island Fire Department, the island ambulance and a number of volunteers joined the effort. It was dark before they found the injured girl and fire chief Paddy Lambert was able to slip into the rock opening and put a splint on Ebert's leg.

The rescuers then lifted Ebert out of the cleft, placed her on a stretcher and moved her down a 60-foot cliff to the beach, where she was transferred to a boat for the trip to Lady Minto Hospital. Two days later, she was home and recovering from her injury.

Islands MLA Hugh Curtis promised the Social Credit government would not recognize any law which established a gasoline tax for transit services without also providing bus service. Curtis noted the cabinet could suspend any enactment by the Urban Transit Authority. He commented on the issue at a public meeting. Island residents had opposed a plan to add a three cent tax to gasoline in the Capital Regional District in order to raise more money for public transit. Of the 300 people who responded to a Driftwood survey on the issue, 99 per cent were opposed to the tax.

Gulf Islands school district considered buying property at the corner of Churchill Road and Rainbow Road as a future school site. Board chairman David Eyles predicted both Salt Spring Elementary and Gulf Islands Secondary would need replacing, since both structures were outdated.

Salt Spring Islanders joined a 300-person demonstration against high noise and pollution levels at the Crofton Mill. Participants gathered at the Crofton dock and walked two kilometres to the pulp mill, where they heard a slate of speakers, including Randy Thomas of the Green Islands Society and Sue Hiscocks of the Sierra Club.

Upper bunks may not be safe

Health Canada recently issued a warning that the upper bed of bunk beds can be hazardous when used for children under six years of age.

There have been nine reported deaths in Canada since 1985 involving children under six using the upper bunk.

In most cases, children slipped feet first between the guardrail and the mattress and suffocated when their heads did not pass through and their faces were pushed into the mattress. In addition, falls have led to hanging when the child's head became entrapped between the mattress and the wall.

The distance between the lower edge of the guardrail and the upper edge of the bunk side should not exceed nine centimetres.

Health Canada advises Canadians purchasing a bunk bed to check that the side along the wall is also equipped with a guardrail. They should look for warnings on the product and follow them carefully. Mattresses on upper and lower bunks should fit snugly on all interior sides of the bed.

Children should always use a ladder when climbing to and from the upper bunk. They should avoid horseplay, which causes the majority of injuries associated with bunk beds. In the case of imported tubular metal bunk beds, parents should examine the welds for cracks. Usually, these metal bunk beds do not have any brand or model identification. Metal bunk beds with weld cracks should not be used.

Guild gives 450-piece quilt

A fabric mosaic of two-inch squares suggesting the work of impressionist painter Claude Monet is the latest creation of the Salt Spring Island Fabric Guild.

On Friday, the detailed quilt was turned over to the Canadian Cancer Society for use as a raffle prize. Money raised by the raffle will go towards research into breast cancer.

Fabric artist Donna Johnstone said the choice of charity seemed appropriate, since all of the guild members are women. One member had a mastectomy and others have relatives who experienced the disease.

At least half of the guild's 20 members worked on the three-by-four-foot quilt, creating the 450 pieces which form the quilt's image of a flower box filled with flowers, a window and a sky beyond. The quilt is designed for use as a wall hanging, Johnstone noted.

She kept the quilt pieces in her studio over the summer and said assembling the sections was like piecing together an intriguing puzzle. "The colours have to blend together."

This type of quilt has recently become very popular, Johnstone added. "They're really the rage in quilting right now."

Once all the sections were completed, Susan Ayers quilted the piece.

Forming the flower box section are dozens of tiny printed pieces of fabric with flower or flower-like patterns. A few squares add whimsical touches: a couple of dragonflies, a butterfly, a lizard eye, a panda bear, an otter and two bussing bunnies.

All of the pieces were donated by fabric guild members, who searched through their individual collections of fabric to find appropriate patterns.

To create the sense of glass reflecting flowers, some flower patterned pieces were used in reverse, making the colours more pale, Ayers explained.

"They're called watercolour quilts," she said. She feels the unusual style looks best in half-light, when the individual pieces blend together.

She pointed out breast cancer research is an especially appropriate charity for a craft group of women to support. Given statistics that one in nine Canadian women will develop breast cancer, Ayers said some members of the group could well develop the disease.

Have you noticed the little bags of "gourmet" caramel corn that are in the stores lately? They cost $4 for under half a pound. My mother's recipe given below makes 2 1/2 pounds, a whopping big batch, for $2.90 using margarine and peanuts, or $6.05 using butter and pecans.

Baked Caramel Corn
6 quarts popped corn
2 cups golden brown sugar

Caramel corn makes ideal Halloween treat

2 sticks margarine or butter
1/2 cup white corn syrup
Pinch of cream of tartar
1 tsp. baking soda
2 cups peanuts or pecans

Pop corn and set aside. Bring brown sugar, margarine or butter, syrup and cream of tartar to a hard boil and boil for 5 minutes. Remove from heat and stir in soda and nuts. (It will foam up).

Put corn in very large baking pan. Pour hot syrup over and mix well, to coat. Bake for one hour at 200° F. oven, stirring every 15 minutes. Turn out onto wax paper covered surface and separate kernels. Store in tight container when cool. This would be ideal for Halloween.

Questions, comments or requests? Please write to Terra Tepper, c/o Driftwood, P.O. Box 250, Ganges, B.C., V0S 1E0.

Salt Spring culinary wizard Terra Tepper will contribute a regular recipe column for Driftwood.

OAPO region meets at Fulford

By MARGARET BAKER
Driftwood Contributor

The South Vancouver Island region of the Old Age Pensioners' Organization of B.C. convened last Tuesday when Duncan, Ganges, Sidney and Fulford branches met at Fulford Hall.

Region steward Doreen Dibnah was present and reported that she had visited branches in Sooke and Victoria, as well as the branch at Saturna Island. This branch is somewhat out-of-the-way, and its delegates to regional meetings find it difficult to attend due to ferry schedules. However, this branch is very active and aware of the aims and objectives of the OAPO.

Although the OAPO is non-political, Dibnah said its members are deeply concerned with the welfare of all seniors, paying special attention to actions of federal and provincial governments that touch upon the affairs of senior citizens.

During the lunch break, a video was shown featuring Ben Swanky, the keynote speaker at the June annual convention of the B.C. OAPO in Williams Lake. The next regional meeting will be held in Duncan in February.

*How swiftly has the summer gone
Bowling out in muted tones
To leave the moist rich ochre's that Caress the land through Autumn.
And feel the bite of the year's first frost
Tinge or tint the fading green
To lay to sleep once more for winter is soon to come.
The tired stalks of oats and rye no longer green.*

- Harold Summer

The last couple of weeks seem to have heralded a change in season leaving us with cool nights, frosts on higher elevations and moist dewy mornings causing some of the summer droughted things to perk up in a short-lived recovery just before their winter's snooze.

Garden soil needs tending now

The soil - after giving its all for the summer - waits in anticipation for its refreshment of nourishing compost to invigorate its structure and reclaim the debris from its productive season.

I like to mulch over patches of garden that are finished for the season now, leaving it to slowly rot into the top and create a nutrition layer for next year.

Digging soil is only necessary to relieve compaction, thus aiding drainage. If the garden has had a lot of foot traffic during the year, then plunging a fork in is a very good idea. Turning the soil is a wonderful practice that teaches you valuable lessons regarding the state of your soil, its structure, water retention and general good health or not as the case may be.

By being so close to it instead of removed from it by the interruption of a tiller, for instance, you begin to observe the impact your input has caused, and are more able to make decisions regarding the soil's well-being.

I think of the layer of mineral soil that insulates our earth as a complex living membrane that can, like any skin, become easily infected if abused. Yet it has phenomenal self-healing mechanisms that can be activated with good practice.

Judo, karate, t'ai chi, tae kwon do

What's the difference?

By GAIL SJUBERG
Driftwood Staff

Chinese practitioners of martial arts were historically bound to keep their treasured knowledge secret. In North America these days, there is more likely to be confusion about differences between the most popular martial arts.

While judo is frequently spoken in the same breath as "karate," Salt Spring Island certified Level II judo instructor and black belt Thom Quine points out it has more similarities to the sport of wrestling.

Throws, flips, trips and wrestling on the ground are some of the maneuvers practiced in a judo class between two opponents. And they are used most effectively with delicate force. Judo, in fact, means "gentle way," says Quine. Knowing how to release one's self from an opponent's hold and re-direct an attacker's energy is a major part of judo technique.

Pat Byron has a black belt in Shotokan karate. His classes emphasize learning "kata" — the series of hand, arm, body and kicking moves used against imaginary opponents.

"There is no emphasis on one part of the body over the other," says Byron.

Byron says most karate moves are learned within the first three months of instruction. After that it's a matter of concentrated "practice."

Dispelling a few myths some younger participants have about karate is often necessary, he says.

"It's nothing like what they see on T.V. with Power Rangers."

Simon Rook has studied various kinds of t'ai chi and karate. He explains that all martial arts grew from the teachings of an Indian monk called Bodhidharma or Tamo, who taught a form of physical exercises and breathing to his disciples when he went to Hanon province in China in about 500 A.D.

Basic forms aimed to develop strengths of five animals: the tiger, dragon, leopard, snake and crane.

Okinawa Island, one of the Ryuku Islands in Southeast Asia, became a hotbed of development for martial arts. In Chinese hands until 1609, Japanese takeover led to the island becoming a cultural "mixing pot." Fearing an uprising by the Chinese citizenry, the Japanese outlawed the bearing of weapons, and practice of martial arts flourished there, said Rook. The Japanese took a particular interest in Okinawan Chinese "te" ("hands") combat methods, and modified some forms into karate in the first decades of this century.

Master Funakoshi studied various martial arts and synthesized them into modern-day karate, with the word meaning "art of empty hands."

Quine explains that judo was developed in the early 20th century by a Japanese man named Jigoro Kano, who based his work on kinesiology and an understanding of how the body moves and principles of leverage and momentum.

Martial arts are generally categorized as "internal," such as the various kinds of t'ai chi, and "external," including karate, kung fu and the Korean tae-kwon-do.

The Yang style of t'ai chi is practiced most widely today. A modification of the older Chen style, it was initiated by Yang Lu Cheng in the late 18th century.

T'ai chi is generally recognized for its health benefits, rather than as a method of self-defense, but as both Rook and island practitioner Tao Kimball points out, t'ai chi moves have martial arts applications. "T'ai chi ch'uan" in fact means "supreme ultimate boxing."

Rook says practice of a martial art such as t'ai chi is considered an integral part of a complete life by the Chinese. People should have a profession, feed the mind by reading the classics, and practice a martial art to strengthen the body and spirit.

Rook practiced Yang t'ai chi for about 20 years, but now prefers the quicker Chen style.

"It's a little more invigorating," he says, although anyone who takes up t'ai chi will find themselves energized.

Kimball teaches the "double Yang" style of t'ai chi, where a mirror image of each series of moves or a "form," is done.

"Each movement has martial arts applications," says Kimball, "but you do it more for health, well-being, balance, flexibility and mental relaxation."

"If you try to relax, you are actually more powerful," he adds.

Rook notes one obvious difference between t'ai chi and karate is that t'ai chi forms are more fluid and rounded, while there is a "tightening up" at the end of karate moves.

Island Spirit is the name of Salt Spring's tae-kwon-do club, which meets Monday and Thursday from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Tae-kwon-do is generally described as a Korean version of karate demanding more legwork.

Gord Singbeil has been practicing it for about four years. "There is lots of kicks, jumping and spinning," he says.

Paul Mazzei is the tae-kwon-do instructor of a class that is popular with island youngsters.

A large number of youths are also involved in judo and karate on Salt Spring.

Byron has ongoing karate classes at the Activity Centre for children from five years of age, teens and adults. A karate club has existed on Salt Spring for more than 20 years, he said. There are currently between 50 and 60 regular members. The club is associated with a karate school in Sidney, and members have the opportunity to go to tournaments.

Fostering respect for self and others is also integral in martial arts.

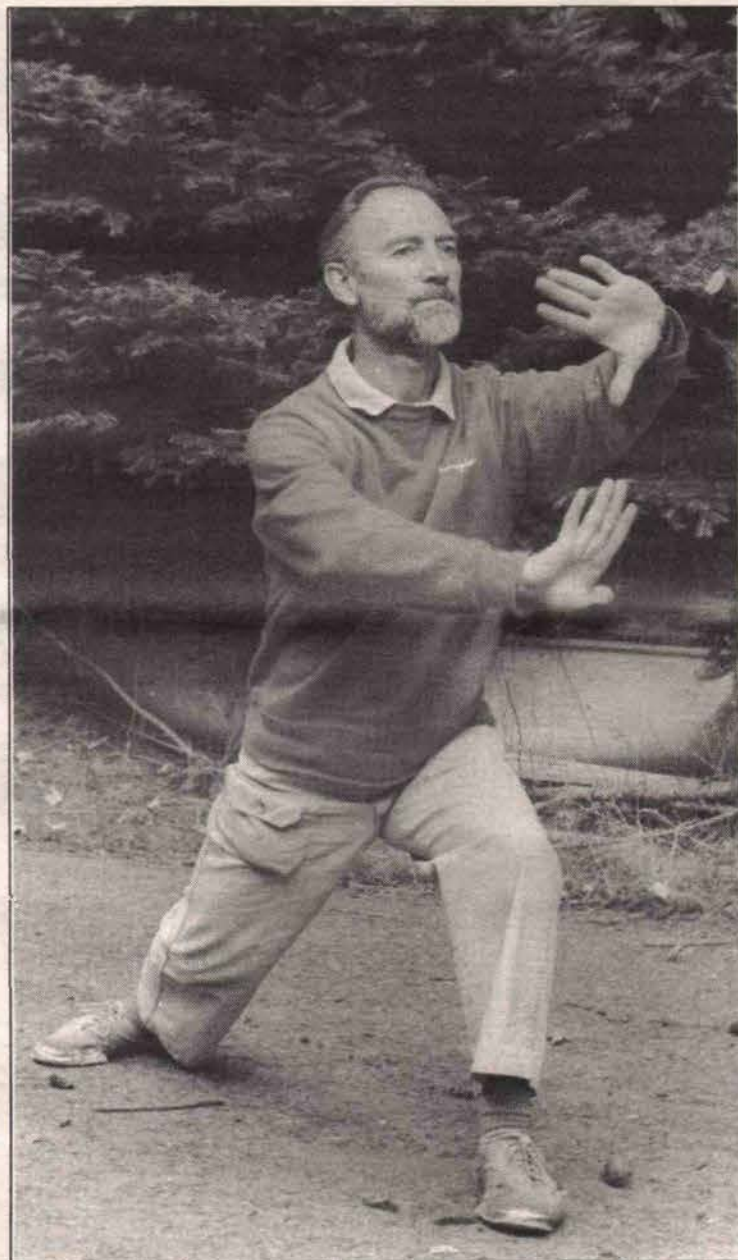

"I try to instill some of the philosophy behind it, which hopefully builds self-respect and respect for others," says Byron. One crucial tenet is "Never strike first and never strike in anger."

Quine says building respect, confidence and inner power is an important part of learning judo. It is great for women who experience fear of aggressors, and to channel anger in "a healthy direction." The entire community benefits by having young males, in particular, expressing natural aggression through the controlled "fighting" of judo.

The "almost zero" violence level of unarmed Japanese society illustrates the connection between the practice of martial arts and creating a non-violent community, notes Quine. One million people in Japan have earned black belts in judo, he says. His Mahon Hall classes include warm-ups, learning new techniques and lots of opportunity to practice with comparably-sized partners.

"I'm also keen on them going to tournaments," he says, estimating some of his students could reach the Canadian championships in future.

In addition to its self-defense merits, all martial arts practitioners on the island say the fitness and health benefits are tremendous. Curious participants are welcome to contact instructors and check into the various classes offered.

ANCIENT ART: Simon Rook works through one of the forms in Chen style t'ai chi. Daily practice energizes Rook, who also teaches Yang and Chen styles of t'ai chi on Salt Spring.

Most karate moves are learned within the first three months of instruction. After that it's a matter of concentrated "practice."

'Zamboniitis' leads to Slugs downfall against slippery Squid Roe team

By JIM BLACK
Driftwood Contributor

The Salt Spring Slugs have rediscovered their knack of snatching defeat from the jaws of victory, following a Sunday night loss at the hands of Squid Roe of Sidney.

This was particularly disconcerting after the team had such a great start, winning three of its first four games and tying the other one. The Slugs looked like they would continue their winning ways early on as Slug newcomer Kevin Porteous picked off a clearing pass at the four minute mark of the first period to give us the early lead.

Porteous came to the Slugs in an off-season trade from the Falkland Foghorns in exchange for a case of beer and two pepperoni sticks. The jury is still out on this deal but it is beginning to look like we came out the winners.

Back to the game. Both teams were looking fairly well matched, with the play moving back and forth quite readily until Squid Roe tied the match up five minutes after Porteous' goal, on a goal mouth scramble.

In net for the Slugs was our regular netminder, Mark Hughes, who once again put in a steady performance. It looks like he will get lots of work this season following the Slugs' most recent trade where we sent back-up netminder Glen Mollon to the Guatemalan Gophers of the Central American hockey league in exchange for a hockey bag full of coffee beans. We all hope Mollon does well down there and doesn't end up with any scorpions in his jockstrap.

The second period started with both clubs deadlocked at one goal apiece, but it didn't stay that way for long. Squid Roe went up by one at the three minute mark following a two-on-one play. But the Slugs didn't let this bother them, as they continued their aggressive forechecking which paid off at the 11 minute mark with Paddy Akerman drifting one into the net off a nice passing play from Johnny Procter.

Following that play, the Slugs took control of play for the rest of the period. Two minutes after Akerman's goal, Todd McIntyre drilled a low shot past the netminder after Pete Huser stripped the defender of the puck in the opposition end zone and fed the puck right onto McIntyre's stick. Less than two minutes later, these two hooked up again on a nearly carbon copy play which put the Slugs up 4-2 with just a few minutes remaining in the second period.

But as has happened in the past, the Slugs were struck with a bad case of zamboniitis, between the second and third periods. Once the puck dropped for the start of the third period it looked like the teams had swapped uniforms.

Squid Roe came on hard and took immediate control of the flow of the game and it wasn't long before they started changing the look on the scoreboard as well. Two minutes into the third period, the opposition was swarming all over the Slug end zone. They managed to score on Hughes, who lost his stick making a save just seconds before that.

This goal seemed to pick up Squid Roe even more and no matter what the Slugs tried, they couldn't slow Roe down.

Following that, things just got downright ugly, for the Slugs at least. It seemed no matter how hard the boys tried, they couldn't buy a goal. Meanwhile, the Roe added four more to beat the Slugs, going away with a score of 7-4, to hand the team their first defeat of the new season. Despite the loss, there were some good signs for the Slugs on the ice. New team members seem to be fitting into the line-up quite well, the old team members are still holding together and playing not too shabbily and all of the boys should have the pleasure of playing at least one more game sans Deadstop, which should make all of them sleep better.

Porteous came to the Slugs in an off-season trade in exchange for a case of beer and two pepperoni sticks.

Kicks, Cowichan settle for tie

Salt Spring Kicks played solid soccer Sunday, and settled for a 2-2 tie with Cowichan.

Chris Aiechele got the Kicks' first goal, but Cowichan answered with one of their own before the end of the first half.

Richard Avedon-Savage put the Kicks up 2-1 in the second half, but they could not fend off a strong Cowichan team.

Coach Don Morrison said a victory at Portlock Park Sunday would have given Kicks second place in the under 19 boys division of the Lower Island Youth Soccer League. They have now played all seven teams in their division and will do so two more times before the regular season closes at the end of February.

Kicks play Gorge Canadians in Victoria next Sunday.

GISS Scorpions head for play-offs

Gulf Islands Secondary School soccer Scorpions clinched the mid-Vancouver Island league title last Thursday by trouncing Brentwood 4-0.

The senior boys came out flying, applying relentless pressure for 90 minutes while at the same time playing flawless defence. At the 25 minute mark Bill Beck flicked on a head ball to put GISS up 1-0. Before the half, Harrison Jason blasted home a terrific shot to make it 2-0.

In the second half, Carl Ensminger continued to dominate the midfield, while teammate Richard Avedon-Savage again shut down Brentwood's most dangerous striker. Sweeper Kalkin Brosseau and captain Eric Byron continually thwarted Brentwood forays into Scorpion territory and set up devastating counter-attacks.

After Adrian Hingston made it 3-0, the Scorpions could sense the league title was theirs, and poured on even more pressure. Jason made a dashing run down the left flank, leaving three defenders in his wake, before ripping home his 11th goal of the season.

Scorpions wrap up their regular season at home against Shawnigan Lake this Thursday. GISS will take on Barsity of Nanaimo the following week for the first round of the north Vancouver Island tournament. The top two teams will go on to Abbotsford for the provincial finals.

Sharp tactics contribute to Old Boys win

By MALCOLM LEGG
Driftwood Contributor

Salt Spring Pharmsave Old Boys 4 Castaways 1

Local Old Boys slammed their way to victory in their first road win and with a not-so-classic 4-1 win over Castaways. The victory did not so much result from great soccer ability, but from a tactical session the lads held the Tuesday prior to the game.

The Old Geezers needed to brush up on soccer tactics and therefore held the first Soccer Tactics for Aging Geezers (also known as a STAG) on a Tuesday evening at Harbour House Hotel.

The session was held in particular to help rookies like Dave Abley, Chris Cottrell, Tony Clair and especially "the Rookie" Drew Lindsay in understanding our soccer tactics.

Over the seasons we have relied greatly on stimulants and rubs to help us last a full 90 minutes (like A535, Geritol, Advil). However, this season, such treatments did not seem to be working. Both injuries and losses were up.

Tactically, we needed new aids to boost our old tired muscles into action. This session aimed to help us find some.

Tim Stirrup recommended Black Sambura, but most agreed that rather than be taken internally it would make a better boot polish. Henry felt rusty nails might work, but experiments by Dave Abley showed a rather corrosive effect on one's mental state the following day.

Cal suggested beer, but we already use this for after game relief. Gary thought Tequila might work, but based on what it does to worms, I doubt it.

Drew, being a rookie, thought trying them all together might solve the problem, but unfortunately he left the meeting early saying something about "Molson rocks."

It was finally decided we did not need any substances, but rather we should challenge the Salt Spring F.C. to a game in December to boost our egos. Chris Cottrell felt we would win easily, as everyone knows they have no forward line. Therefore, the game would stimulate our well-being at the expense of their's.

These positive feelings must have carried over to Sunday's win as, according to Henry (who reported on the game in my absence), "They were no match for us, even with our team playing its worst game of the season."

In fact, Henry said, "They were so bad that Cal McKay looked fast next to their best player." They were so bad that Henry, who was playing in goal, was out at center trying to find something to do.

Ziggy Karl, Darryl Lister (with two) and Tony Clair did the damage to ensure the win, but my only question to Henry would be if they were so bad, how did they get a goal?

Anyway, the win was deserved and the lads, tactics, egos and classic soccer will go again this Sunday, 10 a.m. at Portlock Park against Gorge Over 35's

Strikers lose tough match to Cowichan

By MALCOLM LEGG
Driftwood Contributor

The local under-17 girls took to the field last weekend with a new sponsor, Hazenboom Construction, and a new name, and almost staged a sensational second half comeback before dropping a 4-3 decision to an older Cowichan team.

Once again, the Strikers faced the challenge of playing an older and certainly bigger opponent, but as the game wore on, the local squad showed it has the character to play these teams.

Cowichan easily dominated the opening half and had it not been for the Strikers' jack rabbit goalie, Shelagh Baker, who sprung from side to side making spectacular saves, they would have had more than a 3-0 lead at the half.

At the half, coach Mary-Anne Rome quickly regrouped the Strikers (or maybe we should call them the Boomers after our sponsor?) and shuffled the players in the hope of getting things going.

Shelagh Baker came out of goal and moved to centre back with Stephanie Collette and the twosome combined beautifully to shut down Cowichan's attack.

With the team settling down it was time to look for goals, and Sarah Myles led the charge, tearing into Cowichan's defence and trying to create that all-important first goal.

Although she did not score, she helped her teammates level of play rise up a notch and they were quickly rewarded when Jocelyn Hazenboom broke loose to score the first goal.

The Strikers were just warming up. They continued to press and won a corner-kick. Hazenboom took the cross, but it headed back out towards her and she calmly drilled a 25-yard shot in for goal number two.

Cowichan panicked and quickly sent in their best line-up but the Salt Spring defence of Baker, Collette, Alanna Scott, Jana Tighe, Genesis Davies and Lara Brown held on. The goal post, several near misses and some stellar goalkeeping by Molly Lynesford made the difference.

With time running out and the Strikers' timing, Cowichan finally broke through to score. One minute later the Strikers rallied once more with Kristi Kallip converting a long pass from Laurie Legg.

Unfortunately, time ran out and the Strikers' comeback fell short. However, the Strikers can feel proud of the great effort they gave in the second half where they showed a lot of character.

Rose talk revived by garden club

By ALISTAIR ROSS
Driftwood Correspondent

Several years ago, Galiano's now-retired Islands Trust representative Margaret Griffiths, helped along by her husband George, gave her fellow garden club members a talk on old roses.

The "history" was well received at the time and led to requests from other groups about the islands for other recitals. With well over 100 varieties of old roses in their garden overlooking Active Pass, George was able to personally photograph all the colour slides used to illustrate the talk.

Islands Trust meetings kept Margaret from her garden during her term of office but now, despite George's recent ill health, the two are back in their garden tending a somewhat reduced number of varieties.

Galiano Garden Club members were recently treated to a sampling of the Griffiths' extensive knowledge of roses.

Roses from China and the Mediterranean are the ancestors of many of the varieties popular over the centuries, said Margaret Griffiths. Sport blooms, which appear on established rose bushes, have often become the stock from which new varieties have been developed. Rose growers have, over the ages, been little affected by political events of the day, according to Griffiths. Napoleon's Empress Josephine established a notable garden of roses at Malmalson (the first collection), receiving new varieties from other countries, which were brought to France by army personnel returning from foreign campaigns. The blockade of the English Channel during the Napoleonic Wars did not stop the flow of specialty roses for the Empress's garden — wars of the nation was one thing, the creation of a rose garden another.

The ever popular "Peace" rose, grown from a seed in Europe just prior to the second world war, was smuggled to the United States in an attaché's case. Tended during the war years on this side of the Atlantic, it came to public attention after the war and was received by gardeners the world over with delight — a symbol for the future.

In other Garden Club news it was announced that arrangements are now well underway for the group's November 16 potluck luncheon and award giving. Held at the North Hall, the luncheon will begin at noon. Entertainment includes two skits and a "Broadway musical". Purveyor of the above information was president Ed Yeomans. Earlier in the proceedings, Yeomans had taken a moment to thank those who arranged the club's very successful September harvest, flower and vegetable show.

Show judge Aini Haksi gave her monthly garden tips, including advice on the planting of spring bulbs. The latter are most effective when planted in clumps — daffodils can take some shade, tulips do best in full sun.

Exhibits on the show bench were fewer than usual but of good quality. Good chrysanthemums were shown, as well as bouquets of annuals. A vase of delphiniums was favourably commented upon by the judge, who also had appreciative comments to make on a potted geranium and several lovely fall flower arrangements. In the vegetable section, judge Jane Edwards was to see some fine tomatoes, green peppers, onions, gourds and zucchinis.

Members John Sibbald and Bill Callaway have been named as the nominating committee for the 1995 executive. Elections will be held at the November 16 potluck.

Pumpkin carving

The North Galiano Community Association's annual pumpkin carving party is scheduled for Sunday afternoon, October 30 at 2 p.m. Open to all island youngsters and their parents, this free event now in its tenth year, is always popular. Dad or Mom (sometimes both) arrive with a pumpkin (or pumpkins), a carving instrument and the would-be carver or carvers, and then the work begins.

Following the creative part of the afternoon, light refreshments are served to the children. Pumpkin pie will be available to the adults at a nominal charge.

Christmas craft fair

Preparations are now underway for North Galiano's fifteenth annual Christmas Craft Fair. The dates for this popular event are Saturday, November 12 and Sunday, November 13. The Community Hall, converted to a mall of boutiques, will feature home baking, Christmas cakes and chocolates, crafts, sewing and knitting, designer shirts, floral arrangements and decorations for the house and the Christmas tree. A raffle is always a popular addition to the craft fair as well. Hearty soup and unique sausage rolls will be served hot from the kitchen.

Crafts people wishing to participate in this year's fair should contact Dorothy Ross at 539-2294 as soon as possible, as display space is limited.

Concert series

This winter's Gulf Islands Concert Series begins on Thursday, November 3 with renowned concert violinist Arthur Polson. This is a change from the previously scheduled concert series event. Polson takes his audience on a journey through time, the story of the violin from its earliest forms to the modern electric "R.A.A.D." instrument. Fascinating insights into the instruments, techniques and music of the violin will be a bonus to Polson's music.

Second in the series is a Monday, February 6 performance by "L'Ensemble Arion", one of Canada's leading early music groups. From Montreal, they bring the delicate and compelling phrases of early baroque chamber music, played with authenticity and style. The three-concert series concludes on March 6 with a performance by the Alberta Saxophone Quartet. Also known as the "Swinging Bovines", this acclaimed virtuoso ensemble plays everything from the classics to exciting new contemporary jazz.

Concert series memberships are $39, and can be obtained from Bill Callaway at 539-2515 as available. Membership is limited to about 100 due to limited space in the South Galiano Hall.

Health care services

Galiano's interim health planners sent out a "request for information" questionnaire to island organizations recently.

A second notice for householders will be printed in the November issue of the Active Page. The planners want input on what Galianoites would like to see on the island in health care services. Among the questions asked are: "What do you like most about our health care system in British Columbia, what do you like most about our health care services here on Galiano, what does Galiano lack in health care services, and what improvements would you like to see?"

The group's positive approach has been favourably received by island groups. The steering committee of the interim planning group consists of Gloria Clothier, Kathlyn Bengier and Don Clark. Clark is currently the alternate interim chairman. Other members of the planning committee are Al Elliott, Terry Waines, Bill Shead and Colette Gauthier.

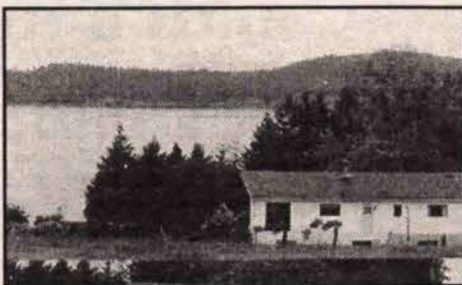

The committee meets regularly on Thursday evenings at the Health Care Centre. They welcome input from islanders — in person at their meetings, in writing or by phone call. Phone Clark at 539-2478.

The committee wants to know what gaps there are in Galiano's health care services, what is needed here and what should be changed.

Those basic questions must be answered in the steering committee's report, due at the beginning

Health planning under way

By GAIL TRAFFORD
Driftwood correspondent

The community health planning committee met Thursday, October 20 to discuss access to health care under the new organization of the community health council. Hospital service, continuing care, preventative medicine, mental health service, and alcohol and drug care constitute the five levels of health care.

Provincial health care will be turned over to three levels of organization: the ministry of health, regional health boards and community health councils. Our local health council should be ready to begin taking over local issues this spring.

The local community was described in some depth and an inventory taken of existing local services. Both assets and failings of these services were discussed.

School services were deemed to be excellent and this should be maintained. Counselling services are much needed and well-used but they have been cut back. The community may face the potential of losing the services of a resident physician as the present isolation allowance is withdrawn.

Difficulties faced by the community in finding and keeping a nurse practitioner were noted, as well as the lack of financial support for our 911 emergency response team. Communication, assessment, and case overloads were cited as problems for the home care workers.

Barb Ropars spoke on behalf of the police advisory commission and asked that support services for the elderly, palliative care, and voluntary assistance be made available to seniors. When these services have been lacking, the RCMP have occasionally been forced to arrest someone to enforce treatment when they become a danger to themselves or others.

The health care committee requests your input. Suggestions will be received by Liz Kaey, and Pam Brown, either by phone or in writing.

Concert series

The first of the Gulf Islands Concerts series is "From Strad to Raad." Arthur Polson will be at the Community Hall Wednesday, November 2 at 8:00 p.m. to walk music enthusiasts through the ages with the violin from the early baroque period to the modern electric "Raad" instrument.

Tickets for all three coming concerts are available in advance from Nancy Angermeyer or Priscilla Ewbank for $39. If you can only attend one concert, phone one of the organizers for details. These concert series have been excellent in the past and this year's choices should equal if not surpass that record.

Pig barbecue

The semi-annual volunteer fire department pig barbecue is slated for Saturday, November 12. Tickets are available at both stores. This year, Bill and Christine Bender and the boys will entertain us with live dance music after dinner. Don't miss this island get-together.

Herb workshop

Carol McGrath is returning to Saturna for the workshop, "Discovering Herbs". It will run from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday, October 29, beginning at the Community Hall and including a short herb walk.

McGrath will discuss the identification and preservation of herbs both wild and domesticated. She will recommend herbs to boost the immune system, and to treat colds and the flu. Call Eve Patterson at 539-5516 for more details.

Bob Bossin concert

Bob Bossin, a well-known folk musician from Gabriola Island, will be in concert Friday, November 4 at 8 p.m. at the Community Hall. Don't forget to get your tickets soon. After October 31 the price goes up. John Wiznuk is organizing this stop in Bossin's latest tour.

GALIANO

of January. At that time, reports now being prepared on each of the southern Gulf Islands will be compared and a master plan for all the islands produced.

With this deadline in mind, the Galiano group needs responses from community groups by October 30. It will then combine these ideas with those gleaned from individual householders. Deadline for the Active Page tear-outs is November 15. Drop-off boxes will be established at the following places for respondents' convenience: at the Corner Store, the bakery complex, and the Galiano Garage in South Galiano and at the Community Hall in the north.

Visitors to North Galiano's Christmas Craft Fair (November 12 and 13) will be able to drop off their tear-outs at the hall at that time.

A public meeting will air the planner's findings on December 3 in the Galiano Activity Centre.

Trotman to Mayne Island

Galiano's school principal Ken Trotman is going to Mayne Island to supervise the combined elementary and middle-school there. A popular and effective teacher and administrator, Trotman will be missed greatly on Galiano.

Poppy time upon us

The imminent appearance of red poppies on lapels, jackets and hats means Remembrance Day is almost here.

More than 15 million poppies are distributed across Canada each year as men and women, young and old, veterans and civilians pay silent and colourful tribute to the memory of Canadians who have died in war.

More than 1.7 million Canadians have fought in four major wars this century and more than 114,000 died in them.

Made by veterans and their dependents in Montreal and Toronto, the poppy is worn to remember those who died. But money given to the poppy fund each year goes toward the living.

There are more than 600,000 veterans in Canada. The average age of a Second World War vet is about 71.

Remembrance Day poppy fund money is used for such things as the purchase of medical equipment, funding medical research and funding accommodation and care facilities for veterans.

The red poppy became the symbol of remembrance in western countries after the first world war. It was inspired by the poem In Flanders' Fields written by a dying Canadian soldier after the Battle of Ypres in 1915.

Members of the Royal Canadian Legion will be manning various island post, providing poppies in exchange for donations.

Estuaries subject of speech

Information on the ecological significance of estuaries, where freshwater streams and rivers meet the ocean, will be presented today at 1:30 p.m. by Dr. Rob Butler of the Canadian Wildlife Service.

Butler will be speaking in the Anglican Centre, at the corner of Lower Ganges Road and Park Drive in Ganges.

Entitled Where Waters Meet, the presentation is sponsored by the Salt Spring Ecosystem Stewardship Project. Butler is an author, a scientist and an estuary biologist.

The protection of estuaries was one of the issues addressed by the shoreline bylaw proposed by the Local Trust Committee earlier this year. The bylaw was dropped in August, following opposition at a public hearing, and the issue was referred to the Official Community Plan review.

The presentation is free but donations at the door are welcome to help cover costs.
