Helen Point logging could start 'as soon as possible' say Tsartlip

By MIKE LEVIN
Driftwood Staff

While government officials and local residents press for alternative solutions, the Tsartlip band could begin logging on Mayne Island's Helen Point reserve within the next two weeks.

The band council said Tuesday the permit to cut more than 21,000 cubic metres of wood on 185 acres spread throughout the point was issued Friday by the federal Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (DIAND).

But department spokeswoman Toni Timmermans denied this, explaining that DIAND was waiting for final documentation from the wood's end user before signing the permit.

"It is just a bit of a formality and we expect it to be completed by next week," Timmermans said Tuesday.

The permit, when issued, would carry an expiry date of April 30, 2000.

Tsartlip council member Wayne Morris said logging would start "as soon as possible" but did not specify an exact date.

Morris added the project was not an issue within the band's council elections to be held Thursday.

The council has retained Vancouver outfit Broadway Timber to do the cutting. Company boss Chris Waters could not be reached for comment.

Forester John Masai, who will monitor the operation, indicated that logging would begin within two weeks.

While the legalities are being worked out, local MP Gary Lunn has jumped into the controversy.

He is lobbying federal environment minister David Anderson to intercede and create the type of dialogue that could delay logging until possible alternatives are examined.

"(Helen Point) is a perfect place for a native interpretive centre or a native park. There are also alternative forms of compensation," Lunn said. "I believe this is not a native issue."

Spooks and spirits

From "monster jam" to spooks and bonfires, anyone who wants a Hallowe'en celebration could probably find one with their eyes closed this year.

Starting at the south end, Rose's Cafe is the place for a family oriented Hallowe'en Scream Party on Sunday at 7 p.m. Local musicians will lead the "monster jam."

HALLOWE'EN 3

Time to turn back clocks

The time has returned once again to adjust digital setting and wind back watches and clocks.

Daylight savings time officially reverts to Pacific Standard Time as of 2 a.m. Sunday.

That means Hallowe'en ghosts and goblins will be trick-or-treating in early evening darkness Sunday night. Drivers should take extra precautions.

ALL AGLOW: Clear skies and sunny fall weather have combined to make some spectacular sunrises like this one, seen Friday morning.

(Logging the point) is completely unacceptable."

Anderson's office did not return phone calls on the matter, referring all questions to DIAND.

The timber is estimated to be worth $1.6 million. Alternatives include substituting Helen Point's potential yield with wood from other Crown land.

Residents' concerns centre around the potentially hazardous effect of logging an area so visible to hundreds of thousands of tourists, as well as environmental concerns.

Fireworks at GISS prompts visit

Fireworks were on people's minds at the Salt Spring fire department Tuesday following an incident at Gulf Islands Secondary School.

Members were called to the school after some students ignited small fireworks inside lockers.

No major damage was reported. The department will also host its Hallowe'en fireworks display in Ganges Harbour Sunday night at dark. But dog-owners are advised to keep their pets at home, as dogs are usually frightened silly by the explosives.

In other news members attended brush fires Sunday on Maxwell Point and Monday on Mount Erskine and Fulford-Ganges Road, both of which went underground indicating that the ground is still very dry.

PAINTING PRESENT: Marg Mullin, surrounded by friends and colleagues, holds the Ganges Harbour painting by local artist Lorne Shantz she received upon retirement. Mullin has left Salt Spring Island Home Support Services Society (SSISS) after some 14 years with the organization, many spent as administrator. Mullin plans to join her husband Kim on the Mainland. (SSISS is now called Southern Gulf Islands Home Support Services Society.)

Calling all northerners

All former residents of the Canadian north are urged to be part of a proposed social get-together.

Ron Hawkins, who has been on Salt Spring for a little more than two years after 25 years of living up north, is inviting former northerners to call him at 537-5052.

The social evening will likely consist of a dinner gathering at the Harbour House sometime before Christmas.

"Price of admission will include a short anecdote of non-fiction or similar piece of northern entertainment," said Hawkins.

"I believe there are quite a few former northerners here and I look forward to hearing from them," he said.

Candidates meeting set for Nov. 9

This year's all-candidates meetings will have fewer than normal debaters but no lack of issues considering the three referendums associated with the November 20 municipal elections.

Hosted by the Salt Spring Island Community Planning Association, the meetings will be held November 8 at Gulf Islands Secondary School's multi-purpose room and November 9 at Fulford Hall.

Both start at 7 p.m.

While there are only three candidates for two Islands Trust positions and two for a single Capital Regional District directorship, proposed parkland-sale and library-tax issues will be front and centre.

A third issue, Fernwood's public dock, has not seen the type of public reaction as the other two.

"The meetings will be open forums, public debates if you like," said the association's Gerard Farry. "It will be a chance for people to express their concerns about the issues."

Worksongs national coverage continues

Worksongs is gathering national newspaper and television coverage as it moves into its second weekend of performances.

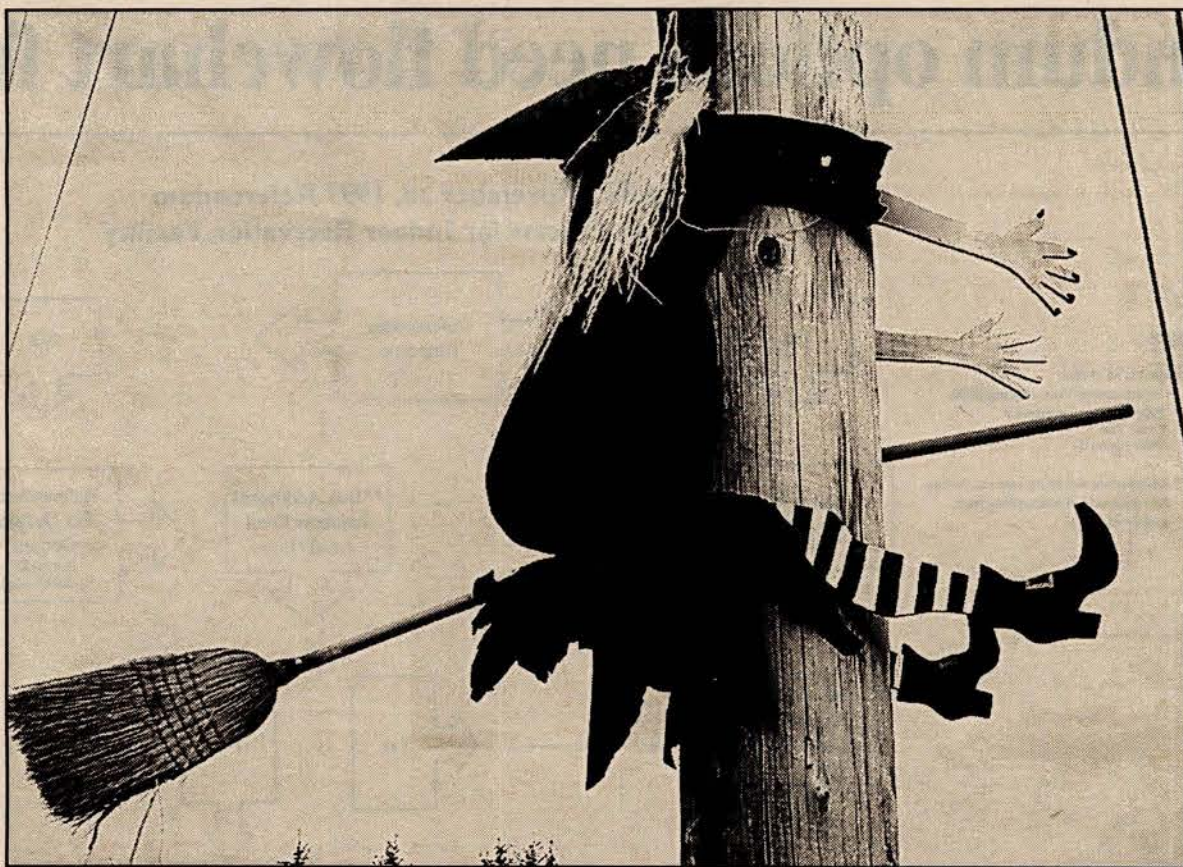

The Globe and Mail's Chris Dafoe interviewed Worksongs cast members Anne and Frances Millerd, director Walter Learning, writer David Petersen and composer Bruce Ruddell.

The article is scheduled to run this week.

Dafoe was scheduled to see the production but couldn't make it to the island when fog cancelled his float plane trip.

Dale Drewery, Broadcast One arts editor at CBC TV, will also be doing a story on the musical. He will bring a camera and crew to film and interview community members about Worksongs this Thursday and Friday.

The television segment will be aired in B.C. on Broadcast One and across Canada on Middy.

HALLOWE'EN: Lots of spooky activities

Knives will be sharpened for the pumpkin-carving contest and the masquerade promises to be quite the spectacle.

"We're going to have some really interesting south-end costumes," said Helga Bagnell, Rose's Cafe owner.

There's Halloween fun at the climbing wall right behind the Community Centre. Come dressed in a costume and climb for treats on Friday from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Prizes will be awarded.

For those wanting serenity, there will be the traditional evening song for All Saints' Day at All Saints By-the-Sea at 4:00 p.m. on Sunday afternoon.

Spook House is the place to be in Ganges on Sunday evening from 6 to 9:30 p.m.

Organizer Rod Terry promises it will be even "darker and scarier" this year. This might have something to do with the entrance being moved to the back door, or maybe it's the "new blood" (some would call them "new volunteers").

Terry said the Spook House had an estimated 1,000 visitors last year. Someone will be designated to count heads this time around.

There will be a box for canned and dry goods to be donated to the food bank. In 1998, seven boxes were filled with food donations.

Treats will be given out as usual.

On the north end of the island, candy, games and face-painting are among the freebies at the sixth annual Fernwood Fun Fest set for Halloween night in the Fernwood School gym.

The evening offers a number of activities including the cake walk, cookie decorating and skill testing games.

Organizers say there will be a large play area for toddlers and challenging games for teens.

Children under 12 need to be accompanied by an adult and there will be free coffee for adults.

Sponsored by three Salt Spring churches — Baptist, Community Gospel and Pentecostal — the fun fest runs from 6 to 8 p.m.

Both Fulford and Ganges will have bonfires.

fires and fireworks again this year on Sunday night. In Drummond Park, the bonfire will be lit at 7 p.m. with the fireworks going off at 7:30 p.m.

In Ganges, the bonfire will be at Rotary Marine Park, behind Thrifty Foods, starting at 7 p.m., with fireworks at the Coast Guard dock at 7:30 p.m. Firefighters will provide hot dogs and hot chocolate at both bonfires.

Additional refreshments will be available in Ganges when students and parents from Phoenix elementary school offer baked potatoes, pumpkin tarts, coffee and hot apple cider for sale. The concession will open at 7 p.m. near the

Post-referendum options need flowchart for future

The parkland referendum set for November 20 by the Parks, Arts and Recreation Commission (PARC) continues to confuse as many people as it enlightens.

While the vote will seek public approval to sell some or all of 10 parcels of developer-dedicated land spread throughout the island, the options following a yes or no decision can take many forms.

PARC's ultimate goal is to buy two pieces of property adjacent to Gulf Islands Secondary School as part of a plan to consolidate about 10 acres of land for a future recreation centre.

If the public votes in favour, PARC will prepare some or all of its outlined lots for sale, with disposal probably before the spring of 2001.

It will then hold another referendum in the fall of 2001 to ask for a public decision on whether to seek a tax increase to fund a recreational centre.

A yes vote would probably see construction start in the spring of 2002. A no vote would cause PARC to hold this land for the future or for recreational development through a public-private partnership.

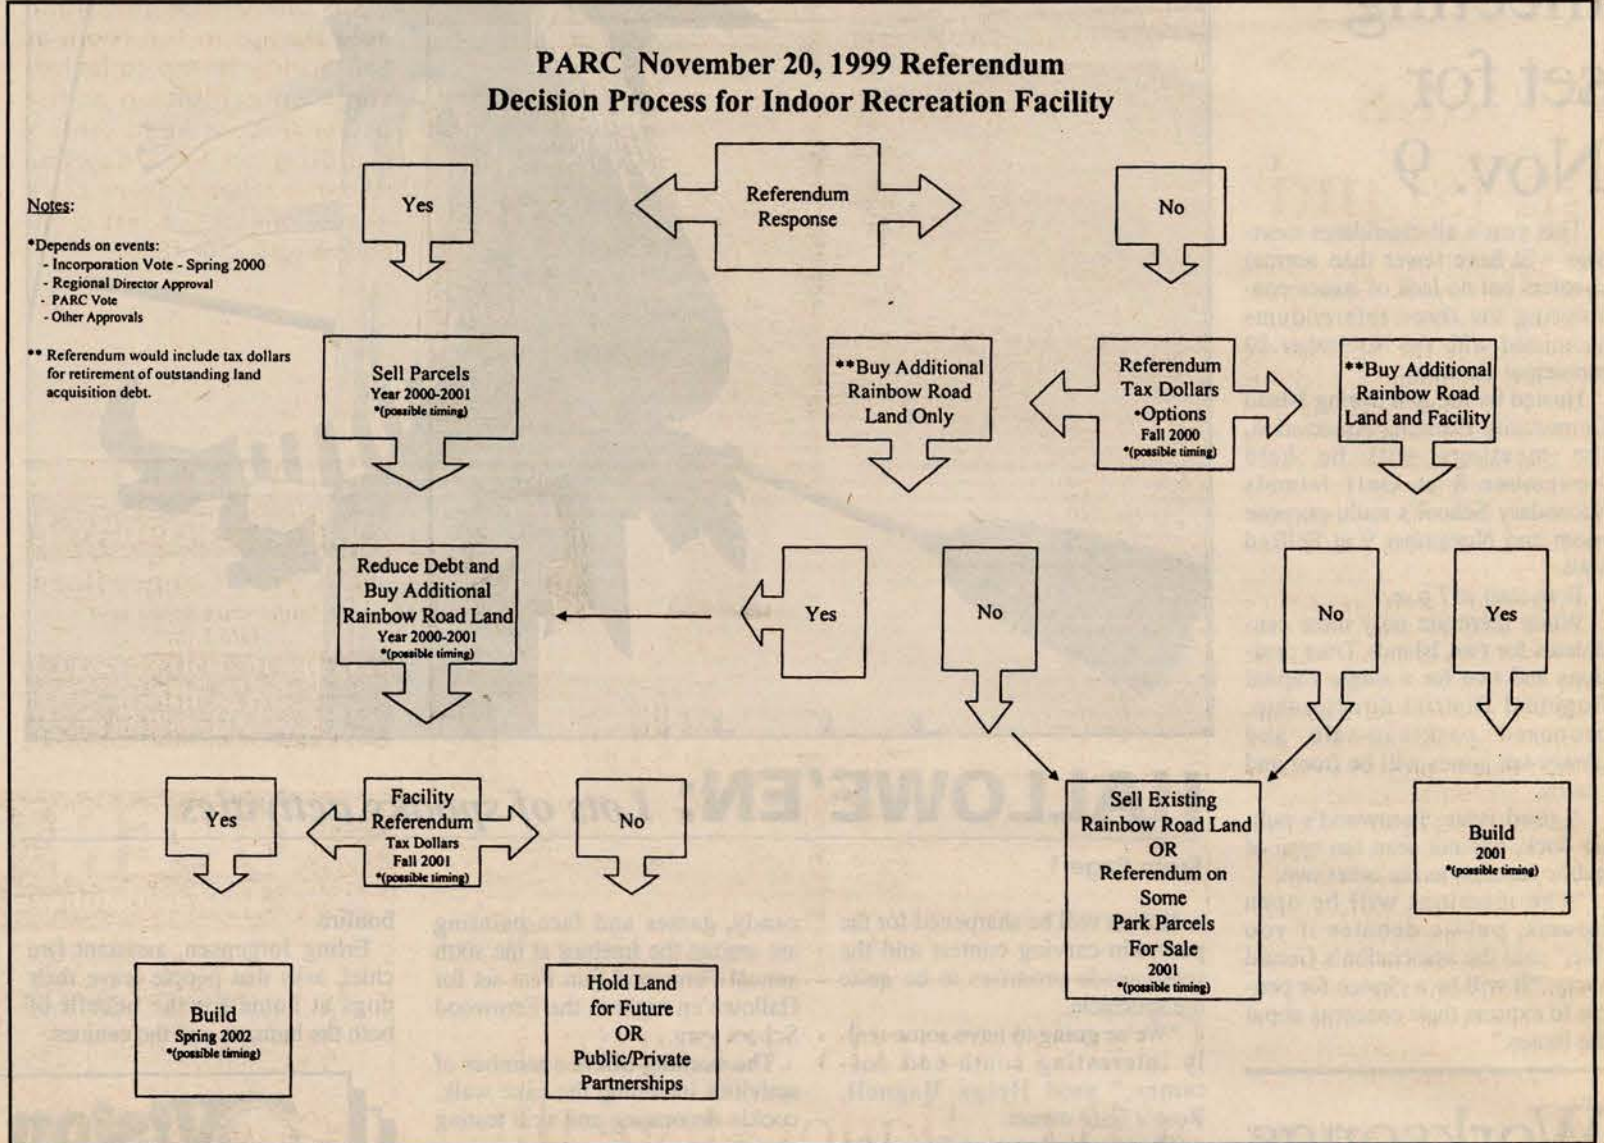

If the upcoming referendum results in a negative decision on selling the outlined lots, PARC will be forced into a second referendum next fall to decide whether the public: 1) will agree to a tax increase to fund the land purchase of the two lots beside the high school; 2) will agree to a tax increase to fund purchase of the land plus a recreation centre; or 3) doesn't agree to a tax increase at all.

A yes on that referendum will see purchase of land and construction of a facility start as early as the spring of 2001. A no will likely force PARC to sell some or all of its land next to the high school to pay off existing debt.

This process could be altered by the outcome of a potential referendum next spring on whether Salt Spring wants to become an incorporated community.

If it does, funding for any activity on the island would not have to be vetted by the CRD.

PARC already owns 8.42 acres to the west of the high school and wants to purchase two long, skinny parcels, each a little over half an acre, to provide access continuity between the school and the rest of the commission's land.

Funds for the purchase are slated to come from the sale of land from the PARC inventory if a November 20 referendum is passed.

"The 10-acre guideline is pretty standard throughout commissions in Canada. The Islands Trust was in agreement so this is the goal we're moving toward," said Bill Curtin, chairman of PARC's parkland committee.

The two lots separate the commission's major (7.2 acres) parcel from two smaller ones directly beside the school, although PARC cannot take on any more debt according to its financial overseer, the Capital Regional District (CRD).

Acquisition would consolidate PARC's land into one parcel, allowing any potential facility planning the luxury of continuity for such things as parking and construction. There is also an environmental aspect.

PARC's larger piece has a low-lying area at the Rainbow Road end and a large stand of trees at the Kanaka Road end.

"We feel it is important to get these two pieces so we have room to organize any future facilities without having to disrupt the natural amenities in place on the land we own," Curtin said. "If we had to go along Kanaka Road for access I suppose we could but it would limit the use and placement of facilities."

The commission's three properties were purchased between 1992 and 1997 for $787,250; it still owes $460,000.

Prices for the two lots that PARC hopes to purchase have not been revealed.

Attorney General speaks on island

Islanders will have two chances this Saturday to hear from Attorney General Ujjal Dosanjh as he attends the Salt Spring RCMP detachment to kick-off Crime Prevention Week and then speaks to NDP members and the public at the United Church hall.

Dosanjh is expected to make a number of announcements in support of local crime prevention activities during his visit to the detachment. (National Crime Prevention Week runs November 1-7 with a local theme of "Be Safer.")

He will also recognize community policing volunteers who give of their time to programs such as citizens on patrol, speed watch, home check, park patrol, community diversion, victims assistance, SWOVA, elder abuse, Core Inn and the Parks, Arts and Recreation Commission.

The public is invited to the detachment, beginning at 2 p.m.

An open house will follow the announcements and presentations, running until approximately 3:30 p.m.

At 4 p.m., Dosanjh will travel down the road to the United Church where he will speak to local NDP members and friends just prior to the club's annual general meeting.

The public is invited to attend this event. There will be an opportunity for questions from the floor.

As one NDP club member points out, Dosanjh is "generally expected to announce soon that he will run for the leadership of the NDP and may well be the next premier of the province."

Credit cards accepted at B.C. liquor store tills

B.C. has finally rid itself of an antiquated law that kept government liquor stores from accepting credit cards.

As of Tuesday, booze outlets started accepting Canada's most common form of non-cash transaction.

Beer and wine stores already accept credit cards and government stores have long used debit cards.

"It's more of a convenience for the public and it may increase sales initially. But I really can't see it being abused by anyone," said Mike Still, acting manager of Salt Spring's government outlet.

Still did note that purchases made with credit cards may make it more difficult for customers to return products.

"Make sure you have your receipt with you if you come back," he added.

Anti-PARC-sale group up and running

Local residents concerned about PARC's desire to sell some of its developer-dedicated land have formed a committee to organize their opposition.

Protect Our Parks is the brainchild of Pat Massy, Sharon McCollough and Harry Burton. The committee has opened an account at Island Savings Credit Union to gather donations for its fight against PARC's proposal, which will be decided in a November 20 referendum.

Committee members feel there are too many unanswered questions about the proposal, not enough public input as well as the spectre of a dangerous precedent of selling public land.

More information can be obtained from Massy, at 537-4308, McCollough, 537-5311, or Burton, at 653-2007.

Graham bursary will benefit students attending Camosun

The Roland Graham Scholarship Fund has found a home at Victoria's Camosun College.

Close to $9,800 raised last summer honouring the long-time Salt Spring doctor will be used to provide bursaries for students attending the community college.

That amount will be matched by provincial grants, resulting in annual scholarship amounts of about $1,000.

Applicants must be returning to post-secondary education, be single parents and have Salt Spring residence at the time of the application. The awards will be administered by the Camosun College Foundation in whatever discipline students prefer.

Winners will be selected by the school's financial aid department.

Graham's grant will be part of about $4 million in endowment funds at Camosun, among the top three in community colleges in Canada.

The local fundraising committee will hand over their proceeds to the school's foundation Friday.

Development co-ordinator Paul Mantell said he expects annual endowments to be broken into two matching student grants.

Trust watches Bowen's walk down incorporation road

By GAIL SJUBERG
Driftwood Staff

Contrary to some misconceptions, the new municipality of Bowen Island is not leaving the Islands Trust.

But the decision to incorporate made by 60.4 per cent of the electorate in a June referendum will have plenty of repercussions — some of them unknown at this point.

The uncertainty and confusion came through in an October 20 special Trust Council meeting held in Nanaimo to consider the implications of the second-most-populous Trust-area island changing the status quo.

After counting five trustees refer to Bowen's "leaving" the Trust, Bowen trustee Tracy Chambers had to stress that they were not in fact "leaving."

"We need to remove that word from this discussion," she said.

At one point, Trust chairman David Essig even asked, "Can we have a motion welcoming Bowen back to the Trust?"

Chambers suggested the task at hand was to decide how the Trust federation would move forward on region-wide issues, and how day-to-day business would be dealt with.

"We need an accurate assessment of our strengths and weaknesses in order to take advantage of our opportunity," said Eric Sherlock, also a Bowen trustee.

Trust and Municipal Affairs bureaucrats will soon be spinning with all the work to be done: creating Bowen/Trust council protocol agreements, setting up special meetings and conducting a wholesale review of Trust documents and procedures.

Then there's the financial reality and need for a plan to address it. A Trust discussion paper estimates that if Salt Spring joins Bowen as an incorporated entity, the Trust will lose one-third of its tax base by the year 2005. (The reduction would be phased-in due to legislation which forces the new municipality to contract planning services to the Trust for the first three years.)

Some trustees were clearly worried about the effect of Bowen incorporation. Steve Wright of South Pender Island said he felt it would result in a weakening of the Trust.

Denman trustee Louise Bell wondered if constituents would end up paying more for government, and thought more attention might be paid to fixing the governance problems that led to a desire for incorporation.

"We need an accurate assessment of our strengths and weaknesses in order to take advantage of our opportunity."

Bill Sheffield of Saturna saw problems ahead as a result of allowing incorporation within the Trust Area. "The problem is not that Bowen wants local control, but we have a very ragged transition ahead of us that has not been fleshed out very well."

He thought having Trust staff adjust to dealing with a municipality for what he presumed would only be for three years was a waste of money and not fair to those involved.

But more trustees were optimistic about the change.

Gail Lund from Gabriola thought it was a chance for the Trust to eventually get some stronger legislation, such as Trust Area building or logging codes.

Essig thought it would improve democracy and the Trust's ability to protect the environment. Incorporation was also "one step further out of . . . a colonial relationship between the (islands') citizens and communities with the regional districts and the province," he said.

Sherlock also spoke positively about his island's incorporation, although felt the Trust's policy statement should be strengthened, along with the language in Bowen's Letters Patent. It states new municipal bylaws "must have regard for the Trust policy statement" and lets the Islands Trust ask for Municipal Affairs intervention if a proposed municipal bylaw "may be contrary to or at variance with the Trust policy statement." What that really means in practice will be key to the eventual impact of island incorporation.

Sherlock said he hoped the new Trust Council would be up for the task of providing leadership during this period of change. "We can't rely on staff to come up with this vision," he said. "The new council has to assert leadership in policy and direction in a way that staff cannot."

Chambers also stressed that the incorporation debate was not about "getting rid of the Trust."

"The debate centred around frustration with the degree to which things fell through the cracks between the regional district and ourselves."

People also felt a lack of public discussion forum, that too few people were involved in governing and that important things — such as transportation — were not under the Trust's control.

Hornby trustee George Buyver said Bowen's incorporation was "a positive and understandable move towards democratization and local control."

Richard Littlemore, Bowen's

regional director to the Greater Vancouver Regional District (GVRD) and a candidate for mayor and Trust Council in November elections, also addressed the meeting. He observed that his island's incorporation seemed to take some trustees "by surprise."

He summarized June's "yes" vote as a "managerial decision." Dealing with the regional district and agencies such as the highways ministry simply cost too much in money and time.

Littlemore said trustees should be wary if anti-Trust people are elected to Bowen council, but that the island's population was supportive of the Trust.

He pointed out that Bowen rejected incorporation in 1991 when it could have meant really leaving the Trust. When voters knew they could incorporate and still remain with the Trust and its mandate, they made a choice for change, and that was even with a less-rich offer from the provincial government.

It's not just the more populated islands which are considering incorporation, though. Hornby trustees Buyver and Tony Law reported on a strong incorporation push from their island, whose residents feel alienated from a Victoria-based Trust and a Comox Valley-based regional district.

"We seem to think population is the driver for incorporation," said Buyver. "It's not. It's property values."

Wealthy people who pay high taxes on their richly-assessed properties "want to have their tax dollars accounted for . . ."

Ironically, said Law, protecting the environment as the Trust does makes the area more attractive to the wealthy, said Law, which leads to gentrification, higher demands for service and the driving out of poorer people, a phenomenon facing several islands.

As Salt Spring gets set to examine the pros and cons of incorporation, one eye will no doubt be on Bowen, our sister across the strait who, if she hasn't exactly left home, is rearranging her bedroom in a major way.

Planned Parenthood clinic used by 104

Statistics from Salt Spring's Planned Parenthood clinic show that use of the facility is growing.

Board secretary Jean Elder reported to the group October 15 that 104 clients used the clinic from April through June of this year.

Of that number, all but two were female.

The "typical" client, said Elder, is between 17 and 19 years of age and "takes advantage of volunteer counselling for sexual health education and birth control methods available, services of the clinic doctor and prescribing of oral contraceptives."

The clinic began two years ago in the Capital Regional District health unit, but moved to the second floor of the Core Inn last year.

A provincial analysis of B.C. clinics for the same period indicated the White Rock clinic served 79 people and the Sicamous clinic 23. Even Vancouver, whose population dwarfs Salt Spring's, saw only 740 clients, or six and a half times the local number.

High clinic use is even more remarkable since it is only open for two hours each Tuesday.

Elder said the clinic's busiest period saw 17 people come through the door.

She also said Planned Parenthood is thinking of opening for a second weekly session when the clinic's nurse coordinator could deal with clients without a doctor being present.

Island physicians are available during the Tuesday clinic.

The present nurse coordinator is Terri Derbyshire, who replaced Judy Sigmund at the beginning of September.

Another September change saw the clinic adapt to its new neighbours in the Core Inn, Phoenix High.

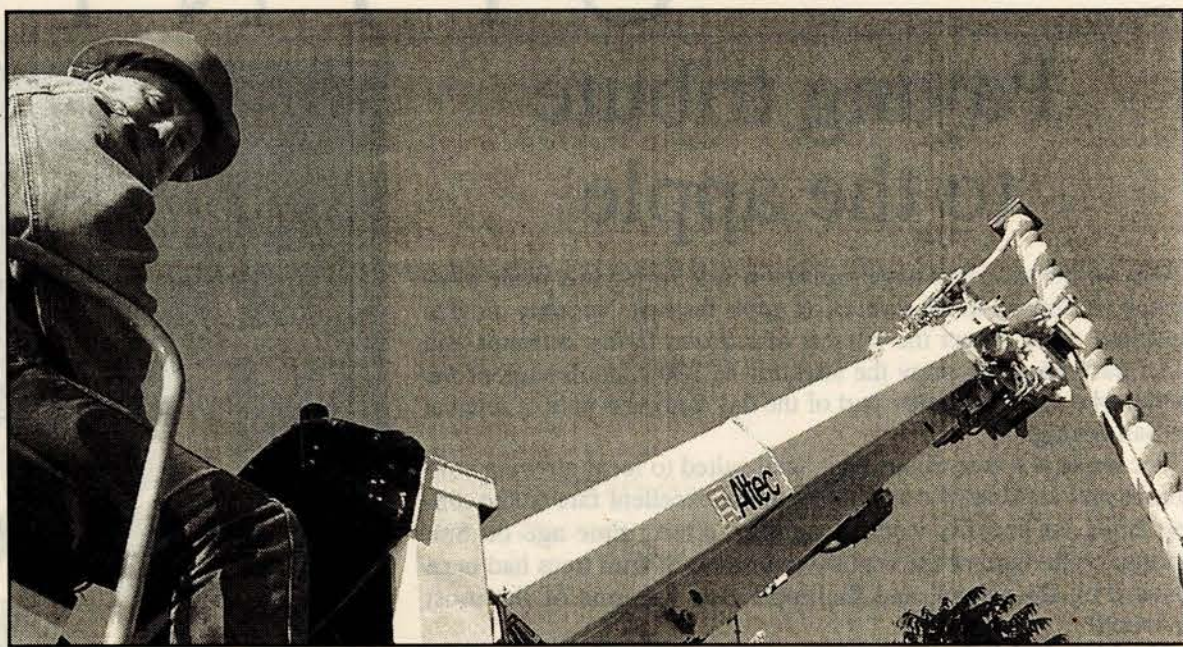

The next scheduled Planned Parenthood volunteer training session is on November 5 and 6.

Presentations on health issues such as menopause, and sexuality and the challenged population are also in the works.

Elder also provided some information received from AIDS Vancouver Island.

Last year that group served 170 people infected with HIV.

Over the last 10 years, the median age of those affected on Vancouver Island has dropped from 32 to 23.

A work of Art

A huge barber pole created by the late Art Hopping finds its niche in Centennial Park — with a little help from B.C. Hydro. Above, Jim Ashworth guides the pole into place, while at left, a unicorn-like Hydro truck travels through Ganges. The pole was located at barber Gary Lundy's former shop site. It was moved to the park through the efforts of Henry Bade, Martin Williams and other volunteers.

Public input to proposed Land Use Bylaw ends at Tuesday meeting

Changes continue for Salt Spring's land use bylaw (LUB) but the time for public input is growing short.

The final public meeting about the draft stage of the bylaw will be held Tuesday at Fulford Hall, with a deadline for written submissions set for November 5.

"We've all but given up the idea of getting the bylaw passed by the (November 20) election but we do have to put a limit on input or it will be harder and harder to get the thing finished," said trustee David Borrowman.

Most recent changes include the rezoning of several pieces of land administered by the Parks, Arts and Recreation Commission in a park designation, although none are the lots included in November 20's referendum. The most significant one is Duck Creek Park.

Most of the bylaw amendments have dealt with farming-community concerns.

Trustees have had two recent major meetings with agricultural groups and have changed at least 20 aspects of the LUB as a result.

These and other changes will be documented at Tuesday's meeting.

Other public requests are not likely to result in changes.

"Many of those are philosophical points which (Bev) Byron and I feel would change the nature of the bylaw. This is where we are going to have to stand firm," Borrowman said.

Paying tribute to the apple

One of the best ideas to germinate on Salt Spring in a while blossomed on Sunday in the form of an apple festival. Not only did this fledgling event attract the interest of a dozen farms, orchards and other participants, it drew the attention of 280 connoisseurs of the apple, who spent the better part of the day touring points of interest on Salt Spring.

The apple is a marvellous fruit, well suited to local growing conditions and capable of contributing some excellent fare to the dining table. Its benefits were recognized a long time ago on Salt Spring: by the turn of the century thousands of fruit trees had been planted on the island, and the apple tree was one of the most favoured.

The historical link did not go unrecognized on Sunday as heritage orchards such as the old Hamilton estate on Isabella Point Road and the Ruckle farm at Beaver Point were featured on the tour. The history of the Stark family is just one fascinating aspect of Salt Spring's history, and it was described for interested tour-goers by one of the family's descendants, Naidine Sims, at the location of the family's homesite.

Two well known products of the apple are the pie — made even more famous locally by the talented cooks who belong to the Women's Institute — and juice, the making of which has been long promoted here by people such as Paul Linton.

Both the pie-makers and the juice-pressers were out in force on Sunday, helping drive home the point that the apple is indeed a very fine fruit.

Others caught the apple harvest fever, too. It was like the Saturday market at David Wood's Reynolds Road cheese factory, where visitors lined up to purchase the specialty cheese products made from the milk of sheep and goats.

With so many participants and such good weather, what could possibly have been missing from Sunday's event?

Well, a couple of elements, actually.

The tour could have seen a few more people. Nearly 300 showed up, but there was room for more. The attendance wasn't bad for the first time, but more attention to promotion would help swell the numbers.

This is also a great event to attract visitors from Victoria and Nanaimo, and points in between, who would enjoy a daytrip or weekend on Salt Spring with the prospect of so much to see and do.

The festival could also benefit from the participation of local businesses, particularly those in the food service industry, who might feature apple products on their menus.

Some of the best of what Salt Spring has to offer was on display Sunday, thanks largely to the vision and enthusiasm of orchardist Harry Burton.

The community owes him a debt of gratitude. And the best way it can pay off that debt is to get behind next year's tribute to the apple, giving the festival the support it deserves.

Long may it be a fixture on the Salt Spring calendar.

A celebration of talent

Salt Spring audiences are not unaccustomed to blockbuster performances on the local stage by their friends and neighbours. Indeed, recent history can tell many tales of talented presentations, particularly of the musical variety.

This past week has shown us that the talent pool remains strong and deep, and that our friends and neighbours are still capable of presenting high-calibre entertainment.

But there's more.

The opening of Worksongs has demonstrated the potential for creating something that can appeal as much to an audience of strangers in Nanaimo as it can to an audience of friends on Salt Spring.

The talent and initiative of people like Bruce Ruddell and Anne Millerd have produced a show that reminds us how strong a community we are.

Worksongs is more than a musical about work: it's a celebration of our talents and our strengths.

It finishes its run this week at ArtSpring, and will open in Nanaimo and Victoria early next year. Broadway can't be far behind.

Well-regulated tourism rooted in Canadian company

By KENNETH MACKENZIE

A breathless announcement in several newspapers recently noted, as one headline put it, that "Bermuda beats McDonald's."

It referred to the success of the British Privy Council in continuing that Caribbean island's determination to keep out fast food outlets that might otherwise inundate the place.

Those who have visited the "sceptered isles" will applaud the decision; it is a situation my own little bit of Salt Spring Island paradise would like to emulate.

Interestingly, it seems that the point at issue stemmed from an enactment of the colony known as the Prohibited Restaurants Act, which had been proclaimed in 1996.

I wonder how well-known it is that it was a Canadian company that opened up Bermuda to regular tourism, and that it was its modest efforts and slow growth that enabled Bermudans to keep out the ravaging hordes long enough for them to realize they wanted a well regulated tourism, and not the kind that had infected the Bahamas in the last quarter of the 19th century.

The Quebec & Gulf Ports Steamship Company (Q & GP SS Co.) was incorporated in Canada in 1867 specifically to take advantage of the confederation of four British North American colonies that came about on July 1 that year.

Improbable as it may seem, there had been no steady, regular water link between the two British colonies up the St. Lawrence (now Quebec and Ontario) and their counterparts on the seaboard, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland (although the Allan Line had run spasmodically to the latter).

There had been tariff boundaries that had kept the various colonies from trading with each other, as well as the winter hiatus when the St. Lawrence froze over. Confederation changed that, and immediately several enterprising businessmen in Quebec City realized that if they banded together, bought a few secondhand ships, and traded with their new territories, their goods would trade there to better advantage than those of their less enterprising competitors.

Thus began the Q & GP SS Co. It started in business with cast-offs from the U.S. Civil War, with ex-Confederate blockade runners that could be bought for a song.

After a faltering start, a respectable business was established during the open season, with a variety of steamships operated imaginatively.

But there were clouds on the horizon. In the very same act that brought about the ship owners' opportunity there was also their obstacle: Article 145 of the British North America Act required the construction of a railway linking the founding four colonies.

It was to run from Halifax to Quebec. Under the inspired leadership of Sandford Fleming, it was finally opened for its entire length in July 1876. Gone was the winter gap in communications, and so almost overnight the Q&GP SS Co. lost its rationale for being; passengers and most goods now went by rail.

But its proprietors had established an efficient organization they were loathe to disband, and they were convinced they could make a good business running from New York to Bermuda and on into the West Indies.

Acknowledging the changed circumstances, the name of the company was changed to the "Quebec Steamship Company," and from 1880 its ships ran an effective, small-scale regular service to Bermuda and into the Caribbean.

By the second decade of this century the level of operations had reached the point that it attracted covetous attention from bigger British firms.

In October 1913, this resulted in the Furness Company acquiring the line and turning it over to its Canadian subsidiary, Canada Steamship Lines. By 1927, CSL had returned it to the British. By then, however, the path of moderation had been set, and Bermuda continued to develop slowly, thanks to Canadians.

The Prohibited Restaurants Act simply reinforced that intent, to the delight of all who now visit Bermuda.

I wonder if B.C. Ferries and Salt Spring Island can achieve a similar situation.

The writer is a historian and Salt Spring resident.

It is a situation my own little bit of Salt Spring Island paradise would like to emulate.

Letters to the Editor

A healthy debate

Healthy debate on the PARC referendum will assist the voter in making an informed decision on November 20, 1999.

Contrary to the impression residents may have been given, it will not be PARC that makes the decision to approve the sale/exchange of land. It will be the voter, by a majority vote.

While referendums are not perfect, they are one of the few mechanisms for direct voter involvement in monetary or policy decisions of local government.

The referendum offers the option of exchanging up to 13 acres of land for what will be roughly the equivalent acreage for active community parkland use. Parkland for parkland. Money from the sale of land can only be used to buy land.

Four hectares (approximately 10 acres) of land adjacent to the high school are identified in the official community plan for future recreation facilities.

Recent public surveys indicate that developing new indoor facilities should be the number one priority for spending on leisure services. Based on this feedback, PARC believes that the community should acquire appropriate land now before it is prohibitively expensive or simply not available.

Where the funds will come from in order to accomplish our critical objectives will depend largely on public consensus. Commissioners believe that this consensus should be determined in this case through a majority referendum. Yes or no.

As background information, community parkland has increased from approximately 55 acres in 1992 to over 250 acres today, an increase of almost 400 per cent.

Through parkland dedication from subdivision of land, the community has acquired and developed parks such as Duck Creek, Quarry Drive, Dunbabin, Fern Creek, Welbury Bay, Channel Ridge, Churchill Road, Rotary Marine, Stewart Road, the Ganges Public Pathway and others.

CRD Regional Parks has also recently acquired an additional 550 acres for regional park purposes on Salt Spring for future nature park development. Ruckle, Maxwell, and Mouat Parks are examples of other large Salt Spring parks, all of which are predominantly in their natural state.

What is important to note is that the vast majority of these new parks fall under the nature park category. The community has not provided any increase in athletic or facility based community parkland since 1977, while our population has grown dramatically.

The main options available to the community are to raise taxes to buy additional land, sell existing land to buy land, or do neither. The first option to be put to the public is the non-tax increase alternative. PARC believes this is the responsible option to explore first. Should there be a "no" vote, PARC will likely request a referendum in the year 2000 on the tax increase option.

Please exercise your right to vote on this referendum. Become informed. Contact the PARC office at 537-4448 if you require additional information.

MALCOLM LEGG,
Chairman
SS PARC

Action plan

On Saturday, October 16, a number of community members gathered at All Saints By-the-Sea to learn about the World Trade

Organization's forthcoming round of negotiations.

During the day we had an opportunity to hear several speakers outline their concerns regarding the implicit dangers to our water resources, food safety, health system and education if the agreements as conceived by the multinational corporate world are accepted by world governments.

Many Canadians fear that our sovereignty is threatened by the limitless ambitions of huge corporations and banks, and the WTO form of globalization seems designed to enhance their ambitions.

While there are many concerns, the most immediate and clearest is the need to protect our water and food supplies.

To this end several strategies were suggested and an action plan will be put together and implementation begun on Tuesday, November 9 at 7:30 p.m. in Room 206 of GISS.

If you are interested in labelling of food to show whether or not it has been genetically modified or in protecting our environment and health through protection of our fresh water, you are invited to attend. This will be a working session.

For more information, please phone Michelle Grant at 537-9634 or Irene Wright at 537-5347.

IRENE WRIGHT,
Ad hoc committee for safe food

Homeowners' alert

Homeowners, did you know that the new proposed bylaw draft #355-311.2 states that you may not rent out your home to anyone for less than 30 days unless your property is zoned commercial?

This means that it will be against the law to take payment from relatives or friends who may stay in your home while you are in Mexico or Hawaii for a few weeks.

This seems to me to be a great infringement on our freedoms to use our own property according to our discretion.

Come to the November 2 meeting at Fulford Hall and voice your concerns about this infringement and protect your freedoms.

MORE LETTERS 10

Second 'Jonathan' swoops back to island home

By JILL SOMERSET

I was quite amazed to read your October 13 front page article regarding Connie Hardy's seagull because during that very lunchtime our "Jonathan" returned for the winter.

When we bought our house nine years ago, Jonathan came with it, complete with instructions and relevant information: "likes to be fed three times a day; eats almost anything except in the fruit and vegetable line; is very partial to hard cheese; is very clean — always sits on the deck handrail with his tail over the outside."

He had been coming to the previous owners for many years, they disclosed.

He disappears every spring looking most handsome, having attained his courting apparel — pure white head, neck and body feathers and sleek, grey wings.

He returns each fall looking scrawny, scruffy and mostly grey, with a couple of noisy, brown youngsters hard on his heels (maybe I should have said "hot on his tail").

He announces their arrival, demands my approval, then screams at them to get lost, which they do.

His routine is always the same. He swoops in from the ocean, glides through the trees around Wildwood Drive, then up, up, up to Beddis Road where he alights on the deck rail with a veritable thud.

He looks through the kitchen window and if he is unable to see me he struts farther along the rail and peers through the patio doors of the breakfast nook. Failure to find me there he continues along until he is outside the large, picture window of the lounge. This searching pattern is repeated until he succeeds in finding me. I've played "hide and seek" for many hours whilst continuing my chores, in order to observe him.

Once he's located me and I feed him, all is well — he snatches up my offerings, sits a little longer hoping for seconds, then flies off. Ignoring him has its repercussions. He flies up onto the roof and stomps around screaming or, should we sit a little too long in the breakfast nook, he turns his back and delivers a large splatter of "whitewash" onto the deck.

If this fails to move us he brings our repast to an abrupt end by regurgitating the finger of a starfish, a partially crushed mussel, or something even more disgusting, right outside the patio door.

When we go away on holidays, he visits the next-door neighbour. The fare is much better there, bread dipped in the liquid from a can of tuna, and leftovers from supper (which I usually have for lunch the next day — leftovers from our supper I should add!). However, she discourages him as soon as we return home because she has acrylic sheeting around her balcony and you can imagine the result with the "whitewash!"

I feel very concerned for Jonathan during the winter, not when it snows, but when it's below freezing. His usually pink legs and pliable, webbed feet turn purple and are stiff with cold. It can't be pleasant to stand on a windy rail on one leg whilst trying to tuck the other splayed and frozen foot up underneath for warmth.

Over the years we have wondered if it is always the same bird who returns to us. Could we mark him somehow? A dab of bright, pink nail polish on one of his large, black "toenails" maybe? This would have been easy enough to accomplish except that my daughter, a budding marine biologist/veterinary surgeon, forbade me.

Jonathan isn't a bit afraid of me, though he is wary of others. I can feed him by hand but choose not to because of his lack of understanding of the word "gently," and his strong, snapping beak.

Often whilst in the process of placing food on the rail he is impatient, and when I put out my free arm to hold him at bay, he jumps over it, flapping wildly to maintain his balance, and those wings are large and quite powerful when they catch me across the head and face.

He is one and the same we have decided. We have metal hoops at intervals along the rail from which we suspend hanging baskets in season.

The gap is about eight inches wide and our Jonathan has learned to hold his wings close and duck through them. Not every seagull's forte.

How old is he? He's been with us for nine years and many years with the previous owners. I read somewhere that gulls can live for 20 years.

Maybe Linda Cannon, Driftwood's bird observer, could enlighten us.

The writer lives in the Beddis Beach area.

NDP caves in to fish farm industry

VICTORIA — It's jobs 1, environmental concerns 0, but the fish farm game, make that "gamble," is far from over.

The provincial government decided to lift the moratorium on fish farm expansion. The steady and intense lobbying by the aquaculture industry and its promises of jobs for coastal communities that are already hard hit by cutbacks in fishing quotas due to dwindling wild fish stocks proved too hard for this dying government to resist.

There's some science involved in the argument, most of it on the side of the opponents of fish farming, but evidently not enough to scare the government.

The fear of a potential nightmare-in-waiting, however, is based on common sense.

Picture this: salmon are packed like the proverbial sardines into a confined containment area. They can't do a lot of swimming. They are fed nutritionally balanced food in the form of pellets. Their excrement floats through the mesh of their cage to the bottom, virtually wiping out all life there.

Because of the crowded conditions, the fish are very susceptible to disease. So, they are pumped full of antibiotics.

Occasionally, some of them will escape. Good for them, but not so good for the wild salmon.

Not knowing the difference, the farmed salmon will mate with their wild cousins.

From that point on, you choose whether to believe the warnings of the environmentalists that diseases carried by the escaped salmon could wipe out the wild stocks or the soothing explanations of the industry that the danger is negligible.

Common sense tells me that the environmentalists have the better case. And lest you think that they are guided solely by emotion, consider that David Suzuki, geneticist extraordinaire, doesn't buy the no-problem argument for a moment. And he offers some hard evidence that, by the way, was available to Dennis Streifel, the B.C. fisheries minister, before he decided to lift the moratorium.

In a press release, the David Suzuki Foundation says that a few weeks ago some Atlantic salmon escaped from the Eden Island farm. Last week, a team of graduate students from the University of Victoria captured three juvenile "Atlantics" in the Adam River on the east coast of Vancouver Island.

The students work with John Volpe, a doctoral candidate, who has found juvenile Atlantics in two other Vancouver Island streams, the Tsitika and Amor de Cosmos.

Meanwhile, some disturbing news is coming from an independent laboratory contracted by the Sierra Legal Defence Fund to examine Atlantic salmon that escaped from Eden Island.

The escaped fish were caught by scientist Alexandra Morton in Scott Cove Creek in the Broughton Archipelago and sent to the independent lab, said Karen Wristen, executive director of the Sierra Legal Defence Fund.

"The lab technician phoned Alex and asked, 'Where the hell did you get these fish. Every part of them is crawling with bacteria and it's spilling out of the petri dish,'" Wristen said.

David Fulton of the David Suzuki Foundation says that so far this year, five million sockeye didn't return to the Fraser River. The Department of Fisheries and Oceans says that tens of thousands of sockeye have died from an unknown disease in the Adams River system.

Anyone putting two and two together here? The tragic element of this whole mess is that fish farming could be made safer if not completely safe.

The David Suzuki Foundation, the Sierra Legal Defence Fund, the Georgia Strait Alliance and a number of First Nations, along with legions of people relying on common sense, have been urging the government to legislate the use of safe, closed-containment systems that would prevent escapes and disease transfer.

Of course, that would cost more money, but so did unleaded fuel, safety belts and more environmentally friendly automobile engines. Without legislation, we'd still send little kids up chimneys to clean them.

Meanwhile, we'll just have to wait for a disaster to happen.

Caring society?

Roger Brunt recently explained that people in today's non-subsistence societies continue to hunt "to touch a dream."

In my view, unless their dream is limited to a camera or a personal sighting, the result is truly a nightmare — the wounded starving duck, the terrified rabbit in a snare and the bone-crushing agony of a fox in a leg-hold trap.

The young sea lion that washed up on the beach near us last year had been shot as had the wounded eagle, unable to fly, found near Fernwood.

We cannot create a caring society until we extend compassion to all creatures.

Concerned wife

As a concerned wife of a firefighter/first responder I would just like to remind people of the importance of pulling over for vehicles with their four-way flashers flashing.

I happened to be with my husband the other day when his pager went off and someone was in need. Believe me, when you are the one waiting, minutes count.

So, please watch for our many volunteers with their flashing lights.

Also may I just remind people of the importance of being able to see your house numbers clearly in the daylight and at night, because once again, minutes and seconds do count.

KAREN HARTLEY,

Scarred

I would like to respond to Hubert Beyer's column in the October 20 Driftwood.

A library, I agree, should have a variety of books, but it should be a quiet place for reading and study.

It should not be a meeting place for political parties and cults. As a Dutch-Canadian I too respect our freedom of expressions and association.

The burning of books by the Nazis in Germany was a terrible event. Much worse was the burning of books in Holland in the winter of 1944-1945 as the only means of keeping warm and stoking the woodstoves for cooking (tulip bulbs, etc.) food.

Unspeakable was the anti-Semitic policy of the neo-fascists in Germany. When I think of Mr. Christie, I fear not so much the burning of books as the promotion of hate.

I compare neo-fascists with vicious dogs. The more in a pack, the more dangerous they are. They should not be encouraged to meet.

I would not get involved in defending Mr. Christie's rights. I have some good German friends. They never bring up WW II unless I start the conversation. They know I am scarred. And there are many more people on our island who are scarred from war.

Protect them and their right of living in peace in Canada as equal citizens.

Success

The Vancouver Guild of Puppetry and Salt Spring's "Salt & Puppet Theatre" have produced our first Children's Fair on Salt Spring.

What may become an annual event was created by 40 volunteer puppeteers and storytellers from The Vancouver Guild of Puppetry, The Victoria Puppetry Guild, The Victoria Storytellers Guild and Salt & Puppet Theatre. Together these groups wove a day of puppet shows and stories alongside workshops for children to make their own puppets.

There was a steady stream of children and adults all day. ArtSpring was alive with happy faces of all ages.

On behalf of all guilds we want to express our appreciation to the many island businesses who helped make this fair a success.

There was one particular volunteer who swept in and carried us through the last week of frantic planning.

Thank you Julie Sweetnam and your crew at the doors.

Most of all, thank you Salt Spring for coming and making it so much fun for everyone.

Investment expectations examined in Eyles' personal investment course

David Eyles hopes to soothe the siege mentality people feel in their economic lives with a four-session course on personal investment starting Thursday. "I'm not going to tell people what mutual fund to buy, but rather try and present an overall perspective addressing what people want to accomplish," Eyles said. "The goal is to break down the assumptions of investing to maintain a current lifestyle by trying to look at the (financial) values of time, location and simplification." Eyles has a background in counselling and teaching and an abiding interest in investment. The two-hour sessions begin at 7 p.m. and continue November 4, 18 and 25. Costs are $20 per person or $30 per couple. Pre-registration is not necessary.

Election issue

I am writing to address the sophistry contained in trustee David Borrowman's Driftwood letter of October 20.

Sophistry (from Webster's): Fallacious reasoning. Reasoning sound in appearance only.

The trustee attempts to equate my concerns over major problems in the flawed Land Use Bylaw (LUB) with other silly problems the Trust has created, i.e. "irksome rezonings for innocuous uses." My position on that is, if the use is truly innocuous, there is no point in wasting public resources on irksome rezonings.

The LUB fails to serve this community or the Trust's mandate. It undermines zoning. It clearly allows all manner of industrial activities like manufacturing, fabrication, treatment, and processing, heavy equipment storage, and unspecified repairs, to move into residential neighbourhoods with no restrictions on noise, traffic, or pollution generated.

This goes unnoticed by Mr. Borrowman as he feels that this is a philosophical problem (permissive versus restrictive zoning). He attempts to split hairs over beauty salons and barber shops.

Of particular concern to islanders should be the appearance of David Essig at the next LUB meeting which takes place Tuesday, November 2. The usual reason Essig appears is for bylaw readings. Both Byron and Borrowman are now on record as saying they want to push this bylaw through before the election.

I became a candidate for trustee because of my concern over the long-term problems this document will create for our community.

I am quite confident that a serious look into the document and its ramifications on all residents will bear me out. This is already happening in the agricultural areas and has resulted in significant changes. I oppose any attempt to pass this document, into law before the election.

It is an election issue.
TOM PICKETT,
Candidate for Trustee

Past pranks relived by elderly

By TANYA LESTER
Driftwood Staff

Hallowe'en pranks are nothing new but store-bought costumes are, according to a group of Greenwoods residents who met in a storytelling circle with the Driftwood last Thursday.

One gentleman brought up the subject of upsetting the outdoor toilets.

He said everyone would dress up the same before going out to do "the dirty deed" so that no one could be singled out and identified as the culprit.

A woman recalled a prank played on a teacher by students who disliked her. They filled up a garbage can with rubbish, tied it to the front door where the teacher lived and rang the doorbell before running away.

There was also the beau of an older sister who came calling in a horse-drawn rig. The younger siblings switched the smaller front wheel on one side of the rig with the larger back wheel.

The boyfriend went home in the tilted rig with a "thump, thump, thump." After automobiles were invented, a favourite trick was letting the air out of tires.

One remembered dressing up as Charlie Chaplin. Others recalled "false facing," which were paper masks made at school — "the uglier the better" — and even carving a face out of a pumpkin

ON TRICKS AND TREATS: Roy Borrowman and Margaret Matthews were part of the story telling group at Greenwoods who shared Hallowe'en memories last week. Borrowman said he and other boys would dress the same so no one could identify them before going out to overthrow outhouses. Matthews said she grew up in rural Quebec where Hallowe'en was not celebrated.

and wearing that as a mask.

A couple of other ladies insisted children dressed up in whatever "rags" were available to them. Sometimes this would mean merely wearing a pillowcase on the head. Boys and girls often wore their mothers' old dresses.

Cookies seemed to be a popular treat for those going door-to-door.

One woman recalled taking her children to a party at their church. The minister opened the door dressed as the devil and almost "scared to death" her seven-year-old.

A Greenwoods resident who grew up in England remembered that they celebrated Guy Fawkes Day, named after a man who set fire to the British parliament buildings, instead of Hallowe'en. She recalled stuffing an old suit with newspaper and placing this in the outhouse to scare visitors to the privy.

On Guy Fawkes Day, she said, they would go door-to-door collecting treats. In the evening there would be bonfires and people would dress as the infamous Guy Fawkes.

One woman said she grew up in rural Quebec where Hallowe'en was not celebrated.

Those who took part in the circle included Hilda Summers, Elsie Rogers, Joan Purchase, Dorothy Beech, Carrie Cunningham, Dorothy Walters, Ellaline Pitcher, Roy Borrowman, Margaret Matthews and Sandy Silvey.

Hallowe'en safety tips help prevent accidents

Safe Kids Canada has released several tips for a safe Hallowe'en.

The non-profit group, which aims to prevent injuries by providing safety information, stresses that children can be hurt at Hallowe'en if they don't follow safety rules.

Costumes are often the cause of Hallowe'en injury. But meeting the following guidelines ahead of time can help prevent accidents.

- To ensure drivers can see children on the side of the road, use costumes with bright fabrics or decorate them with reflective tape. Give each child a flashlight.

- To prevent falling, your child's costumes and shoes should fit properly. Costumes should not be longer than a child's ankles.

- Costume accessories such as knives or swords should be made of soft, flexible material.

- Make-up and face paint are better than masks because they don't block a child's ability to see. Tie hats, wigs or scarves securely so they won't slip over children's eyes.

Trick or treating can also lead to accidents. Here are some Safe Kids Canada tips:

- Children under age nine should always trick or treat with direct adult supervision.

- Those over nine should be with an adult or with a group that includes older, responsible children.

- Youngsters should walk, not run between houses and stay on the sidewalk or at the side of the road facing traffic.

- Avoid houses that do not have outside lights on.

- Examine candy before children eat it. Throw out any treats that are not wrapped, in torn or loose packaging, or any which have small holes in the wrappers.

Also take care decorating homes.

- Small children should never carve pumpkins. Encourage them instead to draw faces.

- To make homes safe for trick or treaters, remove all objects around the exterior of the house which could cause children to trip or fall.

Drivers are also warned to take extra precautions driving on Hallowe'en night. Children are usually excited and may forget safety rules.

Watch out for Hallowe'en fire dangers

Salt Spring fire chief Dave Enfield has Hallowe'en fire safety on his mind.

He recently submitted information on preventing fire-related accidents with Hallowe'en costumes, decorations and fireworks.

Costume material should be flame-resistant. Avoid costumes with long trailing pieces that could easily ignite, and send out trick or treating children with flashlights rather than candles.

Children should be educated to stay clear of open flames and other heat sources. They should also know how to "stop (immediately), drop (to the ground) and roll (over to extinguish the flames)" should their costume or clothing catch on fire.

People who are decorating their homes are advised to avoid using candles or torch lights. Pumpkins with candles in them should be placed on sturdy tables, away from curtains or other objects which could catch fire.

Flammable decorations such as crepe paper, cornstalks and dried flowers need to be kept clear of heat sources.

As with any other time of year, houses should be equipped with working smoke alarms, and families should have escape plans in place.

Children need to understand fireworks are not toys. Any child finding fireworks should not pick them up, but immediately tell an adult.

Tuned Air's Worksongs show is the weekend talk of the town

By SUSAN LUNDY
Driftwood Staff

A full house at ArtSpring Friday night clapped, laughed and leapt to a standing ovation as Tuned Air staged its musical masterpiece Worksongs.

And as the drama and music swept over me, I couldn't help but cast my memory back to 1986.

In that year I drove out to Fernwood school gym to report on choir director Bruce Ruddell and a group of parents who wanted to sing at their children's Christmas concert.

"They stole the show," said Ruddell, remembering the fledgling Tuned Air's very first performance.

The choir has kept on making waves, and this week it is riding so high on its stunning production of Worksongs, a review is almost unnecessary.

Salt Spring is abuzz.

Everyone is talking about Worksongs, comparing favourite parts, recommending it as a "must see."

"I loved the lyrics," confided one mom at the soccer field Saturday morning, as she recited a few lines from Home Work.

"The choreography was amazing," said another. "And it was funny."

Yes. Yes. Yes. Add these qualities to a brilliant set, great acting and singing, some cool special effects and you get a show worth talking about.

Thanks to the detailed Worksongs program, everyone who attends the show takes home a copy of the lyrics.

But unfortunately for the rest of us, only Worksongs performers get to live with the lively tunes dancing around in their heads. (A soundtrack could solve that problem!)

With music written by Ruddell and the lyrics by author-actor David Petersen, the 17 songs range from catchy, fast-paced musical gems to waltz-like slower pieces.

The songs hold hands with the show's dramatic movement. Pulled along by the plot, the solos and full-choir pieces explore and expand on concepts introduced by the story.

Both the story and songs poke and pick at "work." They look at people's occupations from every angle, beginning with school — "We all know the big room/Where the work of childhood began."

Characters entering The Daily Grind coffee shop introduce different takes on working life, much for the benefit of Phoebe who — on the bridge between school and the work force — is battling the conflict between following a dream or being practical.

Numerous sub-plots ensue and the dialogue is spiked with humour.

The story is anchored by the skilful acting of professionals Petersen (Joe), Yvonne Adalian (Martha) and Caitlin Brownrigg (Phoebe), plus excellent performances by Alan Clews (Len), Bo Curtis (Ike) and Don Zacharias (Tom).

Three student-age actor/singers (besides Brownrigg) — Frances Millerd, Korena Vine and Aubery Zacharias — also give terrific performances.

What could be a difficult task of getting chorus members on and off the stage is handled with excellent choreography (arranged by Sue Newman) and clever use of the set (designed by Don Zacharias and built by contractor Hans Hazenboom and his crew).

At times the choir is front and centre on stage; during other parts it remains back-lit "behind the scenes."

Chorus members use a staircase and an opening/closing cage-like structure to amazing advantage.

Lighting (directed by Dusty Rhodes) fully yet subtly complements the show.

At one point in Worksongs, Joe muses, "Maybe a job is what you get paid for, and work is everything else."

Those who staged Worksongs certainly worked to create this musical masterpiece.

(The program acknowledges 10 Tuned Air members who were unable to continue with the production due to its rigorous rehearsal demands.)

Had this show been even a minimum-wage "job" for the many, many people who volunteered their time to it, pointed out director Walter Learning after the show Friday night, Worksongs would be a $2 million production.

As it was, the producers depended on numerous sponsorships and grants to make it happen.

Perhaps the most exciting aspect of Worksongs is the fact it's an original show, created and performed by Salt Spring Islanders.

It is the towering result of the seed of an idea fed by vision and talent.

And it all started 13 years ago in a school gym.

IN THE SWIM OF THINGS: Swimmers actors and dancers rehearse in the music room at Gulf Islands Secondary School last week. The play's performers include Solana Rompary, Charlotte Curtis, Tina Nowak, Brittany Grundy,

High school actors and dancers hone skills for upcoming play

Gulf Islands Secondary School (GISS) students will be "treading the boards" at ArtSpring in a play called Swimmers next weekend.

Director and GISS drama teacher Christina M. Pittmann said the contemporary play is about "when reality gets too much and you have to watch the waves go by."

"The play is about Lyle (played by Adam Vickers) and when he can't handle reality, he escapes into fantasy," said Pittmann. "When he goes into fantasy, he goes into a place called Swimworld created by the dancers."

Choreographing the dancers in the play is dance teacher Sonia Langer, who like Pittmann, is in her first teaching year at GISS.

In the play, Lyle's best friend is Wendy (Charlotte Curtis) who has only two passions.

One is swimming and the other is The Beatles' music.

This might lead one to believe the play was written in the 1970s. In fact, it was written in the 1980s by Calgary playwright Clem Martini.

It was written for young audiences.

This should not keep adults from seeing the play when it runs from Thursday, November 4 to Saturday, November 6.

"You'll be getting a chance to see what young actors, the next generation, are doing," said Pittmann.

GISS has not produced a play for the last few years so the actors have taken some time to adjust to the hectic acting schedule. But Pittmann said they are now focussed on the play.

Tickets are available at GISS in the multi-purpose room during lunch hour or at ArtSpring at $10 each for adults or $8 for students, children and seniors.

The play starts each evening from November 4 to November 6 at 7 p.m.

Island boy used as model in short-listed picture book

A local writer's retreat and a Salt Spring boy are connected to a book short-listed for a major Canadian literary award.

Author Frieda Wishinsky has been short-listed for the Governor General's Literary Award in the Children's English Language Text category for Each One Special, a children's picture book illustrated by Werner Zimmermann.

It is about a pastry chef turned sculptor.

Werner Zimmermann is a well-known Canadian illustrator who stayed at the (m)Other Tongue Press Writer's Retreat on Salt Spring Island and used Paris Haase for the model of the boy in the book.

Paris is the son of Mona Fertig and Peter Haase, who run the writer's retreat.

The book is also dedicated to Paris. He was nine years old when the illustrations were created. Each One Special is published by Orca Books in Victoria and costs $17.95.

Award winners will be announced November 16.

Supper nets $2000

By the time it was over, 250 people had sat down to a supper of beans, buns and salad last Saturday at Beaver Point Hall.

Oh, yes, and there was pie. About 20 different kinds, organizer Donna Moulton estimated. The bean supper was held to raise money to cover the cost of the hall's fire insurance. Moulton said the supper raised $2,000 and succeeded in covering those costs.

A 'rattling' good story

By TANYA LESTER
Driftwood Staff

Margaret Horsfield, author of Cougar Annie's Garden, has created a slide presentation about the famous west coast pioneer who inspired her just-published book.

Those who attend next Tuesday's slide show on Salt Spring can "expect a rattling good story about a magical garden on the west coast of Vancouver Island and the magnetic quality of the woman who made it," said the Nanaimo author.

The woman, who became known as Cougar Annie because she shot so many of the felines, arrived at the remote area called Hesquiat Harbour in 1915. It was then, the author said, Cougar Annie cleared five acres of the rainforest to start her garden. It is still growing today.

During the garden's "heyday," Cougar Annie shipped plants — including shrubs, peonies and dahlias — across Canada. It was one way she eked out a living on her remote property. Horsfield said Cougar Annie also hunted cougars. She would tether her goats out in the field for bait and shoot the predators when they circled in for the kill. In the mid-1920s, a bounty on cougars brought in $40 an ear.

Cougar Annie's third known source of income was the post office for which she served as postmistress after a feisty lobby of the federal government to open one where she lived. She was usually its only customer as well, said Horsfield.

Although Cougar Annie died in 1985, the garden remains a magnificent botanical adventure for anyone who visits it, said Horsfield.

Peter Buckland currently owns the property where Cougar Annie settled, produced eight children and outlived four husbands. He has donated the garden to the Boat Basin Foundation, which intends to develop it for botanical education, said Horsfield. Cougar Annie's garden club will raise money for maintaining it.

The November 2 slide presentation runs from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Admission is by donation.

Hallowe'en spirits for big ghosts and goblins

There's lots to get adults into the Hallowe'en spirit both in Ganges and Fulford this year.

The Amazing Rhythm Method will put everyone into the dancing groove at The Fulford Inn for the entire weekend.

This local band's members are Kelly Cavanagh, Doug Rhodes and Oscar Riley.

They play all kinds of blues including Mississippi Delta, Chicago, and country-variety, along with ragtime and swing.

"Bring your dancing shoes!" says Cavanagh.

Door prizes will be drawn from Friday to Sunday. You could go home with one of the "big" prizes: a rubber dinghy or your own personal inflatable airplane.

Smaller prizes include t-shirts and key chains.

The Legion will host a Hallowe'en costume dance with Triple Shot on Saturday 8:30 p.m. These "ever fabulous masters of classic rock 'n' roll" will be playing hits from the past three decades.

(They will be returning on New Year's Eve.)

Tickets at the Legion bar are $8 apiece. The dance will take place in the newly renovated Meaden Hall.

A Hallowe'en Howl with the eclectic Auntie Kate at Moby's will start on Sunday night at 9 p.m.

Auntie Kate, who used to live on Salt Spring, has a large local following.

Her music gets you up and dancing. There will be prizes here, too.

Islanders get a taste of local apple industry

By TONY RICHARDS
Driftwood Staff

Horses like apples as much as people do, but the one that visited Harry Burton's Apple Luscious Organic Orchard on Sunday was left speechless after sampling the varieties on display.

As a result, Burton was unable to establish which variety of apple the horse enjoyed most at Burton's Heidi Place orchard, which was one of 12 stops in Salt Spring's first annual Apple Festival tour.

The taste test in which the horse was a surprise participant was only one feature of the day-long festival of the apple, an event that presented numerous opportunities to taste a variety of flavours — and not just apples.

One very popular stop was David Wood's cheese factory on Reynolds Road. There were few apple trees in evidence but plenty of cheese, made from the milk of both sheep and goats, available for tasting or buying.

But the festival was mostly about apples and served to point out the abundance of varieties available and the size of the island's apple crop, as well as the number of farms that continue to harvest and process the fruit.

One of those processes is the making of juice, for which islander Paul Linton has become famous. He and six others spent the day pressing apples at the Beddis Castle — where visitors enjoyed samples of the fresh juice — setting a new one-day record of 916 litres.

In addition to cheese and apple juice, there were pies to sample at Fulford Hall, apple butter at Iron Mountain Farm, organic bread at Bright Farm and other treats.

Many of the orchards on the tour were planted in the last century, making the festival something of an historical event as well. Naidine Sims enlarged on that theme by giving a talk on the history of the Stark family, one of the first black families to settle on the island, on the site of their homestead on Stark Road.

Burton, who organized the event for the Salt Spring Organic Apple Co-op, reported on Monday that the festival tour attracted about 280 people. As a result, about $2,000 was raised for the purchase of apple processing equipment.

Playback Theatre kicks off new arts program at church

A new arts and spirituality program sponsored by the Salt Spring United Church is an example of what happens when a visual artist and college art teacher becomes a minister and moves to an arts-rich island.

Rev. Rohana Laing, who has been the church's minister for the past year, wondered how she could give people a fresh perspective from which to explore the arts. The result is Spirituality and Ethics in the Arts, a bi-monthly evening of arts, music, drama or dance events which will also include discussion of participants' spirituality in their work.

While spiritual elements can play largely in artists' work, there are few opportunities for public exploration of those aspects, said Laing.

Laing said a visual artist, for example, may spur a discussion by talking about how their art expresses what they value in their life.

"It's my aim to integrate issues of spirituality, ethics, arts, psychology and the environment," she said.

"It's kind of interdisciplinary." The church's lower hall is the setting for all events.

The first evening — this Friday — sees Salt Spring Playback Theatre present Horror Stories: Thrill or Threat? It begins at 7:30.

People are invited to share their stories surrounding Hallowe'en, which the Playback troupe will then act out.

The process sees the willing audience member (the "teller") sit with the "conductor," a troupe member skilled at facilitating the process. Other actors then creatively play out the story using dialogue, movement and music.

"Tellers can accept the story, correct it or transform it by having the troupe replay the scene from a new perspective," explains Rhema Cossever, who is one of the troupe members.

"We have no way of knowing what's going to emerge," says Alan Caplan.

But he assures people that a safe atmosphere is created for those who wish to tell a story, with warm-ups initiating an intimacy that brings everyone together.

The whole experience is "healing, educational, inspiring and often deeply moving," says Cossever.

The "thrill or threat" theme came out of a brainstorming session where participants wondered about some people's attraction to horror and feeling frightened, and especially teens' keen interest in it. How much horror is too much? Is it healthy? Is it necessary?

One thing is certain. Horror Stories: Thrill or Threat? won't be deadly serious.

As Caplan says, "Even though the theme is horror, it could be the funniest story in the world."

Like all Spirituality and Ethics in the Arts evenings to come, the first one promises to give people something to think about.

A casual coffee-house atmosphere will be created, with refreshments available.

Any artists interested in participating in the series can e-mail Laing at rohana@saltspring.com, or phone 537-5812.

Hysterical Society hits the road

If you see people like Weedeater Wally, Fitness Fanny and Milt Bottom-line Bottomley trucking bits of the Paradise Lots set out Vesuvius way these days, don't worry.

They're not leaving for good, they're simply taking their show on the road.

Salt Spring Hysterical Society's hit comedy-musical plays at Gabriola Community Hall on Friday and at the Cowichan Theatre in Duncan on November 6. It will then be remounted at ArtSpring on November 12-13 for those who missed the string of shows in July.

Believe it or not, says April Curtis (Fitness Fanny), the show's director, they were still turning people away for the hold-over show, and they didn't even have time to advertise it.

Even if people saw the July show, why not come twice, Curtis asks.

Since the Hysterical Society is basically an improv troupe, she says, no two shows are ever the same.

They have also cut 15 to 20 minutes out of the July version of the show, giving them some room to slip in "the latest bits of juicy gossip."

Paradise Lots just keeps getting better and better, says Curtis, and she loves working with performers who are committed to seeing that happen.

The plot unfolds when a stressed-out Toronto businessman (Frank N. Stein, played by Sid Filkow), comes to Paradise Island for a stress-reliever and ends up staying longer than he intended.

The entire development-versus-community preservation debate unfolds with crazy humour, interspersed with some classic songs.

Touring isn't new for the Hysterical Society, and Curtis says there's no problem adapting the show to other places such as Gabriola and Duncan. A little research about the place in which they are performing transforms easily into local material.

The original Paradise Lots went on a successful tour 10 years ago, even selling out at the Belfry Theatre in Victoria.

While there are still a couple of weeks to get tickets for the Paradise Lots shows at ArtSpring, Curtis hopes islanders will call up their friends and family on Gabriola and in Duncan to urge them not to miss this legendary comedy.

Defensive play is the key in football split

By MIKE LEVIN
Driftwood Staff

Salt Spring's junior-bantam football teams split a pair of defensive-oriented games against Campbell River opponents Sunday at Gulf Islands Secondary School.

The Slayers scored all three of their touchdowns on the ground and shut down the Falcons through most of the second half in an exciting 20-18 win while the younger Stingers found themselves on the wrong end of a 40-0 count to the Eagles.

The Stingers played first. Despite the lopsided score, it was the locals' defence that emerged as the team's game highlight.

The Eagles scored on their first three possessions for a 24-0 lead that could have squashed local spirits. But two defensive efforts late in the first half kept the score close.

Stingers held their opponents on third and short inside Salt Spring's 15-yard line midway through the second and came up with an even better effort in the half's final few minutes.

With the Eagles pushing easily to Salt Spring's 20-yard line and threatening to turn the game into a rout, Stingers' linemen came up with two quarterback sacks to kill the momentum. They even had to cut off a fourth down mistakenly handed to Campbell River by the officials.

"It was a new defence that came up big," said head coach Jason Tudor. "We started sending in more people on the rush, and we seemed to like it so we stayed with it."

The Stingers' offence was again hurt by turnovers at crucial moments.

Twice the locals put together long marches into Eagles' territory before ending both on fumbles.

Jim Severn was a workhorse for Salt Spring, contributing 80 yards on the ground against Campbell River's bruising tackles.

The Eagles rounded out their total in the fourth quarter with two more majors.

The day's second game was a tighter contest.

Salt Spring was down 12-6 early before regrouping for a 20-12 lead going into the fourth quarter.

"We got our defence going when we shut down one of their drives near the end of the half," Tudor said. "I think (the Slayers) were a bit inspired by the gritty play of the (Stingers)."

Kyle Wilkinson contributed a pair of majors on the ground while Gord Akerman added one touchdown and two ground conversions.

The league schedule is still not firm so this weekend's contests have yet to be set.

Unflappable Old Boys eke out well-deserved Castaways win

By MIKE LEVIN
Driftwood Staff

Men's soccer is not usually a game of patience.

Salt Spring Old Boys bided their time for 80 minutes Sunday and reaped a 3-2 reward over a skilled Victoria Castaways team at Gulf Islands Secondary School.

The over-30 locals found themselves up against an opponent that not only controlled the game's flow offensively but gave up precious few chances.

Salt Spring got one in the 12th minute on a Dave Norget-to-Alvaro Sanchez cross that only stayed out of the back of the net when Castaways' keeper made a diving save.

They got a second two minutes later when Old Boys goalie Arnie Hengstler launched a monster boot up the middle. Rainer Funk, fresh into the game, picked it up at 25 metres, turned a defender the wrong way and easily scored for a 1-0 lead.

But Victoria continued to dominate between the end lines and kept Salt Spring well away from any further scoring chances. The one-goal margin stood at the half as the visitors could find no meaningful shots on Hengstler.

"We knew they were a good team and had to keep sending in fresh blood to keep up with them," said Old Boys coach Chris Cottrell. "In the second half we made key switches at the right time. It changed the complexity of the whole game."

While Salt Spring picked up its share of ball control following the break, it was Victoria that finally found the scoring range.

Three minutes into play a defensive breakdown got the visitors back even. Another backfield lapse yielded the go-ahead goal in the 65th minute.

It would have been easy for the islanders to panic.

But they chipped away, relying on Damien Brazier's superb mid-field control to crave out shots on goal.

Three times through the middle minutes Old Boys had strong scoring chances but were turned away each time.

"I think we found a total team effort after we were behind," Cottrell said. "We had chances, it was just a matter of waiting for the goals to come."

The equalizer came in the 80th minute from a set play that worked to perfection from the right side to Allan Webb's foot just inside the penalty box.

The locals caught a bit of a break two minutes from time with a referee's call that decided the outcome.

A Castaways defender was whistled on an accidental hand ball within the 18-metre stripe and Funk made no mistake with his blast from the spot.

"This was a really fun game to play," Cottrell said. "It's good to know we have the character to pull out a close one."

Salt Spring next plays at Oak Bay Sunday.

SECOND GLANCE: Salt Spring Old Boys forwards Antonio Alonzo (front) and Dave Norget (back) get position on a Victoria Castaways defender but not on the ball during the first half of a well-played game in over-30 men's action Sunday at GISS. The locals came from behind to grab a 3-2 victory on a late penalty shot.

Slashers cut Peninsula

Balance was the key for Salt Spring Slashers as they took a convincing win over Peninsula Sunday in Victoria.

The islanders used a familiar smothering defence but also spread the scoring evenly in the 8-0 victory.

Voorique St. Pierre, Stephanie Collette, Joelle Morrison, Ruth Singbeil, Rachelle Herman, Heidi Scott, Kyla Dares and Jenny Dares each found the range in the lopsided win.

"Hopefully the girls have saved a little scoring for their tough encounter against first-place Prospect Lake," said coach Malcolm Legg.

Slashers face their toughest test of the season Sunday at Portlock Park.

Local squad earns 1-1 draw

Salt Spring FC used a solid second half to cap a 1-1 draw with Bays United Sunday in Victoria.

Down 1-0 early and threatening to sink even deeper, FC pulled up its socks near the end of the half.

The islanders evened the score on a Harrison Jason marker and then dominated play through the rest of the match.

On Sunday FC hosts Cordova Bay United at Portlock Park.

Geezers game is rescheduled

Salt Spring Geezers had their game against Juan de Fuca shuffled from the originally scheduled date. Instead of playing Sunday, they will hit the field on Wednesday in Victoria.

Scorpions taste tough competition at home

Gulf Islands Secondary School senior girls volleyballers were looking for a challenging taste of local competition following their return last week from Hawaii.

They got a mouthful Friday and Saturday when they hosted some of B.C.'s top teams in a 12-team tournament at the Rainbow Road gymnasium.

The net Scorpions put together a record of 3-6 to finish eighth in the event, which was won by the province's top-ranked AAA team, Ballenas, from Parksville.

In pool action Friday GISS scrapped its way to a pair of wins in three tight matches, splitting 25-21, 15-25 with Frances Kelsey and 24-26, 25-22 with Woodlands, before losing two straight close games to Highlands 27-29, 22-25.

Saturday in the playoff round-robin the Scorpions were shut down 25-7, 25-18 by Highlands and 25-7, 25-20 by North Delta before moving into an exciting three-game set against Esquimalt for seventh and eighth places.

The locals went up quickly in the first, taking advantage of sloppy play by Esquimalt for an early 9-2 lead.

Jenn Keating delivered key spikes to push GISS to a 24-11 lead before the squad faltered briefly and allowed Esquimalt back into the game at 24-18.

After the Scorpions finished off the kill the second game saw Esquimalt pick up its skill level with solid serving that turned a 5-3 deficit into an 11-9 lead and eventually a 25-15 victory.

GISS never recovered, and the third and deciding game was decided by a wide 25-5 margin.

The boys' squad hosts its tournament Friday and Saturday at the school's gymnasium. Games run Friday afternoon and early evening and Saturday until 2 p.m.

Hoops team looking for leadership

The junior boys basketball Scorpions are starting to get a little nervous.

With less than a month to go before the start of the high school season, the squad is still without a coach.

Anyone interested in running the team this season can contact Sally Walker at Gulf Islands Secondary School at 537-9944.

PUPPET LOVE:

Teachers Lynn Surowich, left, and Kim Hunter sit with Hunter's daughter Kaya holding the puppet at "A Child's Garden" kindergarten. In accordance with the Waldorf school philosophy, students are encouraged to create their own faces on the puppets and dolls from "raw materials." A lantern making workshop at the Southey Point kindergarten location will culminate in a lantern walk on November 10.

New Waldorf kindergarten helps children honour earth, harmony

By TANYA LESTER
Driftwood Staff

It is easy to spot the entrance to A Child's Garden, a Waldorf kindergarten being developed on Southey Point.

A scarecrow marks the road onto the property.

At the end of the wooded drive, the gabled and turreted two-storey brown house looks like it could exist in a fairy tale.

In the back, there is a fenced garden and another building which will soon be transformed into a workshop area.

Inside, the atmosphere is cozy. The floors are carpeted. The homemade dolls "wait" in their cradle for someone to nurture them.

The costumes designed to celebrate the changing seasons are hung up ready to be donned. Puppets wait to perform.

Teachers Kim Hunter and Lynn Surowich are preparing for their students.

Atmosphere, or "esthetic nourishment," as Surowich calls it, is important in a Waldorf kindergarten. "It is about the awe and wonder of the world," said Surowich. "It is the education of the body and the soul."

Store-bought toys are non-existent. The children who attend the kindergarten and preceding workshops, who are aged three and a half to six years old, will "transform raw materials" into toys.

Hunter and Surowich turn the pages of a photograph album and point out pictures of children in playhouses they have made themselves out of wooden materials.

According to Surowich, there is truth for the children in handling these materials. A doll can be given a sad or happy face and that face can change to reflect different emotions, unlike a Barbie doll whose expression is fixed on its face.

"If it falls apart you can fix it or recycle it," Surowich said. "This is what the arts does: it transforms and inwardly it makes things new again."

"They make their world their own," added Hunter.

Waldorf education honours the earth and the changing seasons. It encourages children to alter their activities to live in harmony with the earth's rhythm and to honour those changes.

A three-part lantern making workshop which is the school's first public event for the entire family is an example of this. Watercolour paintings done by participants are turned into lanterns.

The lighted lanterns will be carried during a walk on the land around the house. Hunter explained the walk recognizes the separation between humans and other animals, many of which begin to hibernate in the late fall. Carrying the lanterns in a time when the hours of darkness lengthen is a symbol of humans carrying on while other species rest.

In the spring, Waldorf kindergarten students might say goodbye to King Winter and Jack Frost while dressing as Lady Spring in primrose crowns.

During these celebrations and while the children garden or create art, Surowich said, it is typical for everyone to be singing tunes related to the season they are experiencing.

Surowich and Hunter waited until October to move into the house at 2732 Southey Point because they feel its "warm, home-like setting" is in line with the Waldorf philosophy.

They have begun interviewing families who are interested in enrolling their children in the kindergarten. Doors should be open after Christmas.

In the meantime, the lantern making workshops will be held in three sessions with the last being on Wednesday, November 10 when families are invited for a story and a lantern walk.

Cookie monster delight available on Salt Spring

They're chocolatey.

They're minty.

And there are approximately 1,200 boxes of them sitting in Gail Temmel's carport.

They, of course, are the fall version of Girl Guide cookies — the chocolate-mint variety which are only available in autumn.

Temmel, who is the Salt Spring district commissioner of Girl Guides of Canada, says the boxes of cookies will be handed out to local Sparks, Brownies, Guides and Pathfinders, beginning November 1.

There are 72 girls involved in the program here this year.

Most will likely be selling the cookies in their own neighbourhoods.

But those cookie-consumers who can't wait, or who want to purchase entire cases (containing 12 boxes each) should call Temmel at 653-4613.

"Get them while you can," advises Temmel. "They go fast!"

Recycling group searches for home

A meeting of the Galiano Island Recycling Resources (GIRR) group is scheduled for the Activity Centre on Saturday, November 13 at 1 p.m.

This will be a follow-up gathering to the group's annual meeting which was held here October 16. The volunteer recyclers worked hard and conscientiously during the 1998-99 year and were thanked at the meeting for their contribution to island life.

A GIRR objective during the last 12 months has been to secure a permanent home.

Operating for some years on a small lot near Sturdies Bay — through the benevolence of its owner — they knew from the time they located there that the site was available only on a temporary basis. With so much of the island's land surface now dedicated to forest, it has been difficult for the society to find an alternate site.

The works yard on Georgeson Bay Road had been suggested as a possible site some years ago. The possibility of locating there was discussed in detail at the recent meeting, some expressing their doubts as to its suitability.

They cited its location — down a rather narrow winding road — as the traditional route for tourists viewing Active Pass and Georgeson Bay, for hikers on their way to Mount Galiano and for visitors to the cemetery.

Some home owners in the area are not too keen on the proposed location of the centre as logging on a nearby forest lot has somewhat opened up the proposed site.

The land GIRR hopes to use belongs to the provincial government. The government works yard, located on the lower part and adjacent to the road, has been contracted out to the local roads department, a private firm.

To alleviate the fears of its critics, GIRR has called the second meeting.

All candidates meeting

The previous Saturday, November 6, also at the Activity Centre, the Chamber of Commerce has scheduled an all-candidates meeting. Election Day is November 20.

Vicki Terise will chair the meeting. Present will be the four islanders vying for the two Trust positions — Irene Frith, Debbie Holmes, Margaret Griffiths and Merv Olson.

Acclaimed candidates Bonnie MacGillvray (school trustee) and Mayne Islander Richard Dalon (Outer Islands representative to the regional district) will be present. The time is 1 to 4 p.m.

GALIANO NOTES

WITH ALISTAIR ROSS

Craft fair

Just so all will note the dates, North Galiano's Christmas Craft Fair will be held on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, November 12, 13 and 14.

Would-be participants should contact Nancy Davidson 539-2494 or Dorothy Ross 539-2294 as soon as possible because display space is limited.

Hallowe'en

The leaves are turning, the winds cooling and the nights are drawing in — it's time for All Hallows Eve once again.

Several community activities associated with the day are planned.

North Galiano's pumpkin carving party is to be held at 4 p.m. on Thursday afternoon, October 28.

All youngsters are invited. Perhaps southern-dwelling children can arrange with the school bus driver to get them to the hall. Participants are asked to bring a pumpkin to carve and a suitable carving instrument. It's always a good idea to have mum or dad along as well, to guide young hands and later get the carvers safely home.

Light refreshments will be served to the young folk. Pumpkin pie with ice cream and coffee will be available to the parents.

Then on Sunday evening at dusk on the grounds of the Lions Park Centre there is to be an evening for fun and frolic for all. There will be a massive bonfire, fireworks, a fancy dress competition, plus hot dogs and hot chocolate.

The sponsoring Lions Club suggests, "Bring the whole family and have a 'frightfully' good time."

Election activities

The Galiano Coalition is working hard to make certain its candidates in the upcoming Trust elections don't suffer from being unknown. "Meet the candidates" gatherings have now been held in both North and South Galiano.

A forest tour and a meeting with recognized off-island forest experts was scheduled for October 16.

The experts, both unavailable at the last minute, were replaced by local "in-the-field" people who more than fulfilled expectations. Islanders are becoming much more experienced in silvaculture, so perhaps the need for off-island university developed expertise is not as great as it was.

Saturna shocked by 16 thefts

Sixteen property owners suffered at the hands of thieves sometime between the evening of Wednesday, October 13 and the morning of Friday, October 15.

Three residences and 13 sheds or out buildings were involved. All were located on Tumbo Channel Road and Cliffside Road, in an area close to East Point Lighthouse.

According to RCMP Corporal Don Smawley of the Pender Island detachment, the thieves made off with an assortment of electronic equipment, tools and power tools including chainsaws, outboard motors, T.V.'s, VCR players, a microwave oven, a generator and an inflatable boat.

Most of the properties hit by the thieves were seasonal residences. Those in more isolated locations suffered the most damage.

The thieves used bolt cutters to remove padlocks. Police will be able to match the bolt cutters to the padlocks. This means that if a large ring of thieves was involved and used the same cutters to commit crimes in other areas of the province, police will be able to make a match between the incidents.

There is also the possibility that the robberies were done by local people. At this point police have no suspects.

Smawley met with concerned community members at the Community Hall Saturday to talk about preventative measures to avoid similar occurrences in the future.

SATURNA NOTES
WITH GAIL TRAFFORD

The most effective defense against break and enter, he recommended, is getting to know your neighbours and being mutually watchful. It may be wise for a group of property owners to hire one person to check on their houses a couple of times a week while they are absent.

Smawley remarked that a chain across a driveway indicates to thieves that no one is home. He recommended gates to keep trespassers off of private property, but noted that it should not have a padlock hanging off its front.

He also advised recording serial numbers, and marking valuables with a driver's licence number using a simple engraving tool.

In this case, there is little hope of recovering the stolen goods, Smawley said. Provincial statistics indicate that less than 10 per cent of stolen property is ever returned to its owner. If property recovered from thieves can not be clearly identified it cannot be returned. In six months it is turned over to Crown Assets for auction.

Lillian Cunningham, of Wild Wing Bed and Breakfast, 539-2961 has offered to hold the police engraver and loan it out to residents who would like to mark their belongings.

Alarm systems offer some security but home owners should research carefully to find the most suitable system before making that kind of investment.

While better locks make entry more difficult for thieves, if they want to get into a house they will likely find a way. Again, Smawley reiterated that the best defense is a watchful neighbour.

At the end of the meeting Lois King offered to look into starting a community wide Neighbourhood Watch program. Look for notices in the future.

The Pender Island members of the Outer Gulf Islands detachment of the RCMP are now primarily responsible for serving Saturna Island. For non-emergency calls they can be reached at 629-6171. In case of emergency call 911.

HOROSCOPES

Aries March 21-April 20

Take time for exercise and health. You will have plenty of energy for this and more. Take on projects and plans you may have been avoiding. Be careful not to get too comfortable—situations have a way of changing for better and worse.

Taurus April 21-May 21

Keep a watchful eye and deal with small obstacles before they become major stumbling blocks. Friends may have good suggestions and ideas but are apprehensive about your reaction. Stay calm, listen and take advice in the spirit it is offered.

Gemini May 22-June 21

This is not a time to remember old hurts. Let bygones be bygones and move forward. Dwelling on the past keeps you from clearly seeing your goal. Someone behind the scenes is working for you. Be willing to accept a peace offering if one is offered.

Cancer June 22-July 22

Job issues may be coming to a head, but they will be resolved in your favor if you go with the flow and don't force things. Home, family and friends provide a refuge. People will come to your support if you take a low-key attitude.

Leo July 23-August 23

Take an honest look at yourself—seeing yourself as others do could keep you from becoming entangled in an unpleasant situation. Don't let your heart rule your head in work-related matters. Trust your instincts for best results.

Virgo August 24-September 22

Romance could be on your agenda. Be aware of what is going on around you—much of what takes place could be behind the scenes. Someone you thought was on your side may be straddling the fence. Accept people and situations as they are.

Libra September 23-October 23

Reassurance from you is needed by a younger person. Concerns over health will be resolved in your favor, but let others help if needed. A night out on the town or a special event could boost your self-esteem. Change what you can and don't worry about the rest.

Scorpio October 24-November 22

Conserve your energy, focus your efforts and don't spread yourself too thin. You work best now in the background, away from the limelight. Let others take the bows and the heat. Not all who agree with you are necessarily on your side.

Sagittarius November 23-December 21

Work and family issues are sharing equal time. Try to work toward a balance. Going to extremes won't lead to best results. Take time to rest and relax in order to be at your best. A quiet evening at home could work wonders for your outlook.

Capricorn December 22-January 20

Family squabbles could intensify. Stay above the situation and work as a peacemaker. You'll know the right thing to say and the right time to say it. Your work situation cools down and leaves you in a stronger position. Don't forget health and exercise plans.

Aquarius January 21-February 18

Help others, but stand up for your rights and beliefs. Don't be afraid to speak out—you'll be taken seriously. A person you considered an enemy may just be insecure. Avoid getting bogged down in small details.

Pisces February 19-March 20

Play the waiting game. You will come out ahead by not rushing. Get all the facts before making a decision. Time is on your side. A short trip could be beneficial. Friends and family want to show support but may not know how. Be receptive.

5 BIRTHS

NEUFELD - Grandpa Noof proud to announce that Tusa has given us a beautiful baby girl, born in Winnipeg on Saturday, October 23, 1999. Also tickled pink are Grandma Rosie (Oakbank, MB) and dad Son. Loving thanks here on S.S.I. to Maggie Ramsay and Caroline.

6 DEATHS

BOOTH, HARRY, passed away peacefully on Oct. 21, 1999, on Salt Spring Island. Harry was born in Vancouver, B.C. in 1917. Predeceased by his wife Winnifred in 1995. Survived by daughter Joanne Margaret de Boer (Edward) of Houston, Texas, grandchildren Amanda Jennings (Andy) of Plymouth Mich., Camilla Pollock (Eric) of Vancouver, Oliver de Boer (Nichole) of Tucson AZ. and four great-grandchildren. During WWII Harry served in the R.C.N.V.R. and was mentioned in dispatches. He joined the Vancouver Police Dept. in 1945 and retired in 1977. Service to be held at a later date and in lieu of flowers donations can be made to the Lady Minto Hospital Foundation.

ERNEST EMERSON Simpson passed away peacefully at home with his family, October 21, 1999. Born December 8, 1916 in Glasgow, Scotland. He served in the merchant marine during W.W.II, emigrating to Canada in 1947, with his wife and family. He eventually settled in Vancouver, B.C. where, having developed 'Stress Skin' trailer construction, he pioneered the current mobile trailer camps used in construction, mining, logging, etc. Having purchased the land around Ford Lake in 1960, he ultimately semi-retired to SSI in 1969, to accommodate his family's rural interests. He also continued his lifelong habit of taking his family and friends on frequent, varied and extensive vacations. A devoted father, husband and friend, he will be sorely missed by many. Survived by his wife Lorna, children Douglas (Inez), Gordon (Claire), Carol (Merv) Walde, Keith (Jody), Randall (Terri), Janet, Heather (Bob) Brooke, plus 15 grandchildren and 2 great-grandchildren. Memorial service to be held at the Baptist Church, Friday, October 29, at 1:30pm. Donations to charity of your choice in lieu of flowers.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

THE FAMILY of Ernest Simpson would like to express their sincere thanks to the many people of all the Salt Spring Businesses who practiced patience, kindness and showed him great respect throughout all their dealings with him. In particular our special thanks to the staff at CIBC, Moutas, Windsor, Pharmasave and Foxglove. You make the island the special place it is. Thank you.

THANK YOU TO ALL OUR DONORS!

Salt Spring residents anticipated Mahon Hall homemakers show

Thirty-five years ago

Island homemakers were gearing up for a Holiday for Homemakers Show at Mahon Hall on Salt Spring. The event, which promised to show island women how to "take a holiday from tedious household chores," would give information on "fabrics, new recipes and ideas for entertaining, freezing and range demonstrations."

Salt Spring Lions struck a committee to study and recommend a new community project. Among the suggested projects were: construction of an indoor swimming pool, a children's playground, a boat-launching ramp and a low-cost housing plan for seniors.

Thirty years ago

Islanders were talking rain. According to a September weather summary, "Rain commenced on the night of September 1 and continued almost all the month." At a total of 4.58 inches, the rainfall amount was more than double that recorded in the five previous Septembers.

Twenty-five years ago

Salt Spring youth Marnie Jarman escaped with a soaking and a few scratches when the plane in which she was a passenger turned over in Vancouver Harbour. The youngster exited the plane while it lay upside-down in the water.

Vandals were rampant in Centennial Park. Recent acts of vandalism included: gravel in the toilets; washroom doors torn from hinges; limbs torn from trees, blossoms ripped from planters; seats on swings "systematically" destroyed; fence railings knocked off or stolen; planks ripped off park seats; hoses slashed; fires set in the washrooms; and the flag pole being pulled down.

Fifteen years ago

Despite the provincial government's restraint program, education spending in the Gulf Islands had risen almost 90 per cent in the past five years. Teachers' salaries had increased 24 per cent; enrolment was up 14 per cent.

A Capital Regional District (CRD) smoking bylaw which "controlled the places people could smoke" had the "teeth of a toy tiger." The bylaw was on the books of the CRD, but that body would not be enforcing it. Nor would the RCMP.

Twenty years ago

Some relief was in sight for residents in the Trincomali subdivision on Pender Island who had been without water for three months. The CRD would begin work immediately on making necessary repairs to one of five inoperative pumps.

The Canadian Coast Guard was inviting the public to present briefs on the subject of fishing in Active Pass. The briefs would consider whether fishing should be curtailed, eliminated or left as it is.

Ten years ago

Local artist Lynda Laushway was one of eight Salt Spring Island artists featured in the newly released Carmanah: Artistic Visions of an Ancient Rainforest.

Fifteen islanders, most from the Islands Arts Centre Society, travelled to Orcas Island in the American San Juans to look at an art complex there. The group thought it resembled its plan for an arts centre on Salt Spring.

Five years ago

Travellers on B.C. Ferries would be seeing more faces as employees shaved off their beards to comply with new corporation regulations. The directive came in order to comply with a Workers' Compensation Board requirement for using safety apparatus on the job-site.

Postal system changes on Salt Spring were complete. The 18-month process of changing from the green rural mailboxes to the new urban community mailboxes was finished.

Violence prevention project highlighted at conference

A locally developed program which aims to prevent violence against women will be discussed at an upcoming B.C. Teacher's Federation conference.

The federation has invited representatives of "Women and Violence: Education is Prevention" to give two workshops at the Social Justice Contacts' Training Conference.

The conference, called Respect and Dignity For All, runs this weekend at the Delta Pacific Conference Centre in Richmond.

"It is an honour to be asked to share the work of this great project with teachers from all over British Columbia," said project coordinator Lynda Laushway.

The pilot project was carried out locally for two years as a partnership between Salt Spring Women Opposed to Violence and Abuse, Community Development and Research Society (SVOVA) and the Gulf Islands School District.

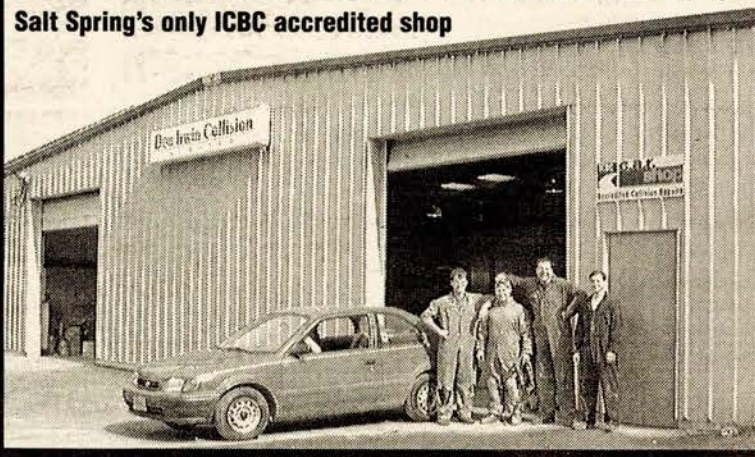

Those attending the conference include high school teacher Debbie Magnusson, high school student and project youth coordinator Robin Voaden, as well as Laushway.

They will give two one-hour workshops on the project under the heading "Best Practices Sessions."
