A WORD FROM THE EDITORS

This is our 9th Directory and it has grown larger again. The first Salt Spring Island Directory was 48 pages, this year The Directory is 112 pages and has 49½ pages of display advertising.

There are a few changes this year. We've redrawn our maps of The Island and The Villages and added an Advertiser Index so you can quickly find the display ad(s) of individual businesses. A cross Reference Directory will be published again this year and should be available by June 1st. See the Advertisement on Page 109

If you have any comments or suggestions you may call or write to us at:

PLACES OF HISTORIC INTEREST

by the Salt Spring Island Historical Society

The Salt Spring Island Historical Society offers the following random selection of the many buildings and sites that were part of the early settlements. Except for locations still active such as hotels and churches, they are on private property. For access the owner's permission is required.

Starting from the south end in Ruckle Provincial Park, the original farmhouse on the east side of Beaver Point Road was built about 1872 by Henry Ruckle. It is now being renovated by the Heritage Conservation Branch. Across the field to the south stands a larger homestead, surrounded by a fine collection of trees and shrubs. Built in 1907 by Henry's son Alfred, it is the current residence of the Ruckle family and is said to be the most photographed house on the island.

A mile or so down the road towards Fulford on the right side is the Beaver Point School. Built in 1885 and used as a school, church, Sunday school and concert hall - the building was renovated and dedicated as a Heritage Building in 1982, and is currently being used as a Pre-School.

Between the Fulford ferry terminal and the Fulford Inn stands St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church, the "church within a church" - the 1864 wooden building having later been encased in stone. The small churchyard is the last resting place of several pioneers, the earliest having been laid there in 1892.

Just south of the junction of Fulford-Ganges Road and Isabella Point Road is Drummond Park. Given to the community by a family which farmed the area from 1906, the park contains a large petroglyph (Indian drawing on stone) which was excavated from the harbour, a relic of early habitation by members of the Saanich tribe who used to hunt and fish there.

Just up the road towards Ganges, stands St. Mary's Anglican church, opened in 1894 and in continuous use since then.

Going north from the Fulford Community Hall a mile or so, the island's first hostelry can be seen off the road on the right. This was the Traveller's Rest, a structure of two storeys plus attic rooms built in 1866. It is made of squared logs, now hidden by shingles, erected by Joseph Akerman. Except for a ten-year gap from 1965 to 1975, it has been in the Akerman family for 120 years.

About two miles farther on the way to Ganges is the Burgoyne United Church on the left. This church was built by a pioneer family as a Methodist church in the late 1880's. The house directly across the road (where the Art Moulton family lives today) was the Minister's residence.

As the road descends towards Ganges, Beddis Road joins it from the right. After 4 1/2 miles Beddis Road ends at Beddis Beach, which has public access. In 1884 Samuel Beddis and his young family came ashore here, having been refused permission to land on San Juan Island where their boat had been driven in a storm, and built their first log home. In 1900 they built the "new" house which still stands at the corner of Lionel Crescent and Wildwood.

Continuing down Ganges Hill, the large white building opposite the RCMP office was the first Lady Minto Hospital. It was in use from 1914 to 1958, when the new hospital north of the village was completed. From 1958 to 1975 it had a series of uses, including service as a dormitory for Outer Island students attending high school on Salt Spring. Since 1975 it has been the Community Centre, focus of many social services.

In Ganges itself (named after H.M.S. Ganges, flagship of the Royal Navy's Pacific Squadron 1857-1860) the first general store, Mouat's, has a mall beneath the main floor where there are a number of interesting early photographs on display.

In the angle where Upper and Lower Ganges Roads join, Harbour House Hotel carries on a tradition of hospitality started by the Crofton family. The original home, destroyed by fire in 1972, was turned into a guest house during the first Great War. It had international class tennis courts that attracted competitors from far and near. Next to the old courts is the remnant of a maple tree, the "Council Tree". From a chair-shaped crotch in this tree a Chief presided over meetings of Indian tribes spending summers clam digging in the harbour. Here too, around 1862, a battle took place between the Cowichans and the Bella Bellas, in which many were killed.

Another mile north takes the visitor to Booth Canal Road, on the left, which winds down to cross the end of Booth Inlet. Apparently at one time consideration was given to extending the inlet as a canal to make a short water route from Vancouver Island to Ganges.

Half a mile beyond Booth Canal Road a driveway on the right leads to the Salt Spring Island Golf & Country Club. The clubhouse was built in 1960 on the site of "Barnsbury", the rambling home of the Rev. Edward Wilson and his large family. While Mr. Wilson was Anglican rector (1894-1909), Barnsbury was the caring centre of the island, serving as rectory, church hall, Sunday school and on occasion as hospital. An operation was performed in 1902 with the patient lying on a ping-pong table.

Once visible from the crossroads at Central but now hidden by trees, St. Mark's Church stands on a rocky hill. Consecrated by Bishop Perrin in 1892, the church contains a rare stained glass window commemorating the death of Queen Victoria, and carpeting on which King George VI and Queen Elizabeth had stepped during their 1939 visit to B.C.

Immediately north of St. Mark's is a square, white two storey house known in pioneer days as Mrs. Stevens' Boarding House. Here many a newcomer, including Edward Wilson, spent his first days or weeks (for $1 a day with all meals) since there was no other inn at the north end. For all its 99 years the house and its 90 acre farm have been owned by only two families, the Stevens and the Cunninghams. The Stevens gave part of the land for St. Mark's Church.

Leaving North End Road at Stark Road and following Stark and Acheson a short distance past Robinson Road, an observant traveller will see a large Douglas Fir on the right, the Witness Tree. On this tree at eye level, William Caldwell carved a face in 1890 while waiting for his brother Henry. Though distorted by splitting of the thick bark over the years, the face is still discernible.

Three miles further north again, near the east shore of the island, rusty water oozing from a knoll on private land comprises the salt spring that gave the island its name. In 1859 Captain Richards called it Admiral Island, but the earlier choice of Hudson's Bay Co. officers was in common use and in 1905 the official title reverted to Salt Spring Island.
